Closed Shop Demands by ITU Ruled Law Breach

NLRB Examiner Finds No Proof of Violation on Other Points in Complaint

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board last night held the closed shop demands of the International Typographical Union (AFL) a violation of the Taft-Hartley Act.

In the same ruling, he found proof lacking to sustain charges that ITU violated the law by demanding the following contract clauses:

1. "Featherbedding"—or payment for work not actually performed.

2. To permit its members to refuse to work on products from nonunion or struck shops.

3. To permit ITU members to refuse to cross picket lines established by any union affiliated with ITU.

4. Granting ITU "jurisdiction" over having its members trained to operate any new equipment which might be substituted for present typesetting machinery.

5. Establishment of joint employer-union "examining boards" to determine the competency of applicants for employment.

Both Sides May Appeal

The examiner, Arthur Leff, further recommended dismissal of a charge that "slowdowns" allegedly engaged in by ITU at Detroit and Chicago violated the law.

It was the fourth case in which NLRB examiners have found ITU guilty of violations of the Taft-Hartley Act, but the first ruling upon alleged "featherbedding" practices.

Unless the examiner's recommendations are contested by either the employers, represented by the American Newspaper Publishers Association, or the ITU within 20 days, they take effect as a board order.

If contested, the entire NLRB will decide the order to be issued. That order will then be subject to appeal to the Federal courts, and may eventually reach the Supreme Court.

It was indicated last night that both parties might appeal the case.

3 Violations Cited

The examiner held the ITU and four of its top officers, Woodruff Randolph, president; Larry Taylor, first vice president; Elmer Brown, second vice president, and Don Hurd, secretary-treasurer, guilty of three violations of the act and recommended that:

1. The union and its agents be required to cease "any policy, practice, or course of conduct" designed to cause "employers in the newspaper industry, or any other employers" to discriminate between union and nonunion employes.

2. The union be forbidden to insist upon the hiring of only union members as foremen.

3. The union's demand for con-

Chrysler Raises Prices of All Its Models, $58 to $98

Detroit, Aug. 14 (AP).—Chrysler Corp. today announced price increases ranging from $58 to $98 on its various models, effective Monday.

The automobile manufacturers said the new prices for Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto and Chrysler passenger cars were necessary because of recent additional advances in costs of basic materials, transportation and other essential items.

Percentage-wise, the increases range from a little more than 2 per cent to about 5½ per cent.

The boosts in factory retail prices at Detroit on various models are:

Plymouth de luxe, $58; Plymouth special de luxe, $68; Dodge de luxe, $81; Dodge custom and DeSoto de luxe, $84; DeSoto custom and Chrysler royal, $87; Chrysler Windsor, $89; Chrysler Saratoga, $94; Chrysler New Yorker and Chrysler Crown Imperial, $98.

Probe Demanded

Impeachment of Peron Asked By Argentine Conservatives

Buenos Aires, Aug. 14 (AP).—Argentina's Radical Party called today for the impeachment of President Juan D. Peron and demanded a congressional investigation of what it described as the enrichment of government employes.

Approximately 300 persons gathered near the houses of congress following the protests by the Radical Party, which is conservative in tendency despite its name.

A near panic developed when two small bombs exploded. Police dispersed the crowd and arrested eight persons on suspicion they were connected with the explosions. No injuries were reported.

The Radicals' protests came as the Chamber of Deputies approved government-sponsored legislation to call a national convention to rewrite the constitution. The vote was 96 to 33.

The measure now goes to the Senate, where its approval is assured since that chamber's membership solidly supports Peron. Argentina's constitution was adopted in 1853.

Principal constitutional changes which have been proposed would permit the president to succeed himself after a six-year term and enable the government to "con-

Other suggested amendments would permit levying a special tax on foreigners and authorize the government to engage in private business and fix wages and work-

Revolt Threat To Truman Eases in South

Texas and Arkansas Developments Stir Hopes for Solid Vote

By The Associated Press

The Southern civil rights revolt appeared yesterday to be tapering off slightly as a serious threat to President Truman's election chances.

Developments in Texas and Arkansas last week have made some Administration lieutenants more optimistic than ever that Mr. Truman may grab every Dixie electoral vote, as Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath has predicted repeatedly.

Want Crack at Texas

The States' Rights ticket, headed by Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and his running mate, Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, is sure of a place on the ballot in South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi. But Dixiecrats also want a crack at Texas' 23 electoral votes, the largest bloc in the South.

The apparent victory of Sidney McMath, 36-year-old Hot Springs prosecutor, in the Arkansas governor's race is pointed to by President Truman's backers as another straw blown their way by the political winds. While there has been no public commitment from McMath, administration lieutenants predict he will hold his State's party in line for the President.

Most politicians here think the 28 electoral votes of South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi may be lost to Mr. Truman. But the Administration camp has been talking of possible court suits to force those electors to support the President—if he should carry the three States.

Their loss could be fatal in a close presidential race. Although the South's electoral vote hasn't tipped the result in many years because most recent Presidents have been elected by margins rolled up elsewhere, this year promises to be different.

May Be Battleground

The South, which had become sort of a stepchild in national elections—contributing heavily to the Democratic war chest but getting little attention from any of the candidates—may be the scene of fairly heavy campaigning before the November elections.

Strategists have told Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York,

GOP Declares It Saved U. S. 6.35 Billions

Taber Claims Credit For Cutting Spending In Two-Year Period

By The Associated Press

Firing first to meet President Truman's expected two-gun blast at their fiscal and living cost policies, Republicans claimed yesterday they have saved American taxpayers nearly $6,350,000,000 by slashing Administration spending plans in the last two years.

The GOP boast was issued in a formal statement by Chairman Taber (R., N. Y.) of the House Appropriations Committee.

It came as Mr. Truman was reported as planning:

1. To charge, in a midyear budget review today, that Republican tax-cutting has thrown the Government back into red ink, after two years of budget surpluses. Some Government officials indicated the President will predict a Treasury deficit of about two billion dollars for the year ending next June 30.

2. A second blast Monday, when the President will act on the GOP substitute anti-inflation bill turned out the last day of the extra session Congress. This measure restores Government curbs on installment buying and tightens up on bank credit.

Meanwhile, a Democrat leveled a charge of "statistical sleight-of-hand" at Republican claims of congressional cuts in Federal spending. Representative Dingell (D., Mich.), House Ways and Means Committee member, issued a statement saying GOP leaders are trying to cover up the true budget situation.

Taber promised, when Republicans took control of Congress in January, 1947, to use a "meat ax

Babe Ruth Gains, But Condition Is Still 'Critical'

New York, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Babe Ruth showed slight improvement today in his fight for life, but his condition was "still critical."

The pulmonary complications which beset the ailing king of swat this week have cleared and his heart is strong, his physicians reported. However, he spent a restless night, the bulletin issued by the Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases said.

Shortly before 11 p. m. (EDT), Father Thomas H. Kaufman of St. Catherine's parish, visited Ruth and applied a relic of Mother Cabrini to Ruth's throat.

Mother Cabrini was the first American to be canonized a saint in the Catholic Church. The relic was brought to this country from Rome only two days ago.

On Skid Row for Year

Composition of Symphony Saves Sanity of Detroit Man

Detroit, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—The Detroit Symphony Orchestra Thursday will play the work of a young man who in one year fought a tortuous way back from insanity by composing a symphony.

Ernest C. Salisbury, 25, a former alcoholic Skid Row bum and petty thief, will hear the first concert of his life when the 80-piece orchestra plays the first movement of his symphony, "Eloise."

The four-movement work records Salisbury's triumph over madness in the Wayne County General Hospital in suburban Eloise, where he was confined a year ago.

It was written in collaboration with Dr. Ira M. Altshuler, internationally renowned director of group and musical therapy at Eloise.

Dr. Altshuler also treated the famous "Music Master X," the mad pianist who astounded critics a year ago with his skill.

The latter, whose insanity is incurable, still is at Eloise.

The symphony has won high praise from all musicians who have heard it, and Salisbury now is attending the Detroit Conservatory of Music on a two-year scholarship.

"This work is a tonal picture of Salisbury's return to reality through music," Dr. Altshuler said. "a return from a world of slum bars and alleys where he drank paint thinner, canned heat, and raw alcohol."

Dr. Altshuler said Salisbury's recovery resulted from musical therapy, based on the principle that "the tonal world never is insane. The patient faces reality by grasping music."

U. S.-Backed Korea Set Up As Republic

MacArthur Says Barrier Between North and South Will Be Removed

Seoul, Korea (Sunday), Aug. 15 (AP).—The American-sponsored Republic of Korea formally came to life today, with General MacArthur declaring the barrier separating it from Russian-held North Korea "must and will be torn down."

(There was no elaboration on how this might be accomplished.)

"Nothing shall prevent the ultimate unity of your people as free men of a free nation," the supreme commander of the occupation in Japan and South Korea told a crowd on the Capitol grounds.

Rhee Blames Russia

Dr. Syngman Rhee, first President of the new republic, squarely blamed the Soviet Union for the fact his government embraces only the American-occupied southern half of the country.

"On this day of national rejoicing, our joy is clouded with sorrow as we look to the north," stated the white-haired Korean independence fighter. "Nearly 10 millions of our fellow citizens who wished to be part of this body have been prevented from taking part in establishment of the Republic of Korea by the refusal of the USRR to permit the United Nations Temporary Commission to observe free elections in that part of Korea occupied by the Soviets."

This day of the republic's proclamation was the third anniversary of Korea's liberation from Japanese rule. MacArthur, whose troops freed the southern half of the country and two thirds of the population, flew here from Tokyo with Mrs. MacArthur for the inaugural ceremonies.

Will Appeal to World

President Rhee said that in the hope of unification, "We will first appeal to the sense of justice of the people of the Soviet republics and will then appeal to the world conscience. No nation, however powerful, should be allowed to occupy the territory of its weak neighbors if the nations ever intend to establish lasting peace."

(Actually, the Russians are sponsoring a government in north Korea, which like the one in the south, aims at sovereignty over all Korea. The division of the country, which began as a temporary military expedient, is deeper than ever after three years.)

The new republic in Seoul has been recognized by the United States and China, both of whom have sent envoys with the rank of ambassador.

U. S. Aid Promised

To Rhee's assertion that the new government must count on assistance of friendly nations, Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge made this reply:

"I can promise that we Americans will do everything we can to assist in stabilizing the Korean government until it completes its adjustment in internal and external affairs."

Hodge announced the military government was ceasing as of midnight tonight and would become the civil affairs section of U. S. Headquarters. As such, it will undertake the long job of transferring government functions entirely to the republic.

Dr. Rufino Luna of the Philippines, chairman of the United Nations commission which observed the May 10 election that led to the republic, also was a speaker.

Anti-Spy Act Drawn, Runs Into Dispute

Cabinet Members Differ on Proposals To Prevent 'Leaks,' Hit at Espionage

By Robert E. Nichols
Copyright, 1948, N. Y. Herald Tribune

The Administration, in a Cabinet-level attempt to combat peacetime espionage and close up security "leaks," has drafted proposals for a drastically stringent law to protect official secrets, it was learned last night.

The measure, however—known as the omnibus internal security bill—is bogged down in the Department of Justice as the result of a behind-the-scenes fight among Cabinet members themselves.

The most far-reaching provisions would:

1. Make it a felony to obtain or disclose any "information" relating to "national defense" when such "information" could be used "to the injury of the United States or to the advantage of any foreign nation."

2. Make it a felony even to "possess . . . classified material."

3. Authorize Federal agents to tap domestic telephone lines as an expedient in gathering evidence of espionage and sedition.

4. Exempt all espionage cases from the statute of limitations, thereby leaving Federal prosecutors free to bring espionage charges any time after the crime has been committed.

5. Make it an offense for any Government employe to fail to report that an official code has been "compromised."

6. Require the registration of any person who has attended a foreign government's espionage school. This, it was understood, would give prosecutors additional leverage in obtaining indictments of persons suspected of espionage.

Modifications Opposed

Most of the proposed omnibus measure already has been approved by the President's policy coordinators, who reported that the bill as a whole was unobjectionable and suitable for presentation to Congress. The Bureau of the Budget gave its approval to the bill last April, it was learned, but on the condition that the Department of Justice revise certain procedural features criticized by other agencies.

Attorney General Tom Clark and Secretary of Defense James Forrestal, it was understood, strongly opposed these modifications. And as yet, the Department of Justice has not altered the bill as originally drafted.

Several other Cabinet members, however, are said to feel that the "internal security" proposals would constitute a serious infringement on traditional American concepts of law. They have objected to the language of the proposed bill as being too broad.

President Truman himself reportedly has tended to side with this group within the Cabinet. Last year, it was recalled, the Administration was sharply rebuffed for drafting an order which would have permitted executive agencies to restrict information that could possibly cause "Administration embarrassment." The order never has been put into effect.

The Department of Justice, which, along with the Departments of the Army and the Navy, sponsored the bill originally, has been reluctant to discuss the bill or even to acknowledge its existence.

Attorney General Clark confirmed that the department is "studying" amendments to present espionage law, but declined any further comment. Regular department spokesmen would say only: "We are not giving any publicity

Saves Time and Trouble

Major D. C. Firms to Register Draftable Men at Their Posts

Major private employers in the District will register their employes for the draft under a plan announced yesterday by William E. Leahy, director of Selective Service here.

Leahy announced that 15 such employers have already indicated they would agree to designate some of their own clerks to register employes at their places of business.

Of the 41,000 persons employed by these 15 firms, at least 10 per cent will have to register, he said.

Federal agencies will not participate in the employe registration plan, the Federal Personnel Council having voted against it, according to a Council spokesman. The Council consists of personnel directors of the Government agencies.

3500 Registrars Sought

At the same time, the draft director announced he will need about 3500 volunteer registrars to man regular registration places at schools yet to be designated. This number may be reduced if other employers agree to the registration plan.

A central location will also be set aside for transient registrants and others not registering in business places or schools.

Those who are willing and able to volunteer for full or part-time work as registrars should write to Selective Service Headquarters at Tempo Building 2, 1901 D st. nw.

Registration will be held between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., Mondays through Saturdays, for 17 days, beginning August 30 and ending September 18, with the exception of Labor Day, September 6.

Plan More Convenient

The employe registration plan, Leahy explained, is designed to reduce inconvenience to the employes and lost business time.

Leahy listed the employers who have agreed to the plan as follows:

Washington Gas Light Co., Potomac Electric Power Co., Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., Capital Transit Co., Washington Terminal Co., The Washington Post, the Washington Times-Herald, the Washington Evening Star, American Red Cross, S. Kann Sons Co., Woodward & Lothrop, Lansburgh & Bro., the Hecht Co., Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., Peoples Drug Stores and the Mayflower Hotel.

Reds' Formal Demand For Teacher Rejected; Consulate Probe Asked

Rep. O'Toole Wants All Lomakin Aides Kept in Country; Teacher Subpenaed

New York, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—A New York Congressman today asked the Federal Government to keep all officials and attaches of the New York Soviet Consulate General in the United States until authorities determine whether a crime was committed in the alleged imprisonment of Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, 52, a Russian school teacher.

Representative Donald L. O'Toole (D., N. Y.) wired Secretary of State Marshall soon after Mrs. Kosenkina was placed under Government protection by a subpena of the House Un-American Activities Committee. He asked Marshall to deny the officials and attaches permission to leave the country until "New York City, New York State, and Department of Justice authorities have decided whether or not Consul General (Jacob) Lomakin or his subordinates have been guilty of any crime in connection with the Kosenkina case."

O'Toole said he was going to ask the appropriate Government agency to alert Canadian and Mexican border guards against the possibility of any member of the consulate staff slipping out of the country.

Local authorities had made it clear that they were investigating whether prosecution was indicated in Mrs. Kosenkina's story of having been held in the consulate for six days against her will.

Mrs. Kosenkina Consents To Appear for Hearing

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, Russian school teacher, accepted a subpena from the House Un-American Activities Committee today, thereby coming under the protection of the Federal Government.

The 52-year-old woman accepted the subpena from Robert E. Stripling, the committee's chief investigator, in her Roosevelt Hospital room at about the same time Russia demanded full control over her custody and the United States, in effect, flatly rejected the demand.

Mrs. Kosenkina is recovering from serious injuries she suffered when she leaped from the third floor of the Soviet consulate here Thursday. She claimed she had been held a prisoner there.

Roosevelt Hospital authorities said tonight that Mrs. Kosenkina was "steadily improving, but still on the critical list. Today she has not been eating much and has been in some pain."

The Russian demand was made in Washington by Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin

Effects of Atom Seen Blighting Male Children

Los Angeles, Aug. 14 (AP).—One generation after an atomic bomb falls on "a typical American city," 1500 male children will sicken and die for every 10,000 population, Dr. Albert Bellamy, dean of life sciences at the University of California at Los Angeles, said today.

Then, he added, hundreds of thousands of generations later, descendants of survivors will begin to show permanent hereditary effects of the radiation, strange discolorations, feeble-mindedness and haemophilia. And there will be an increase in the ratio of women to men.

He based the prophecy on tests on the banana fly (Drosophila).

He said the hereditary effects are transmitted by the female, but do not affect female descendants.

Embassy Aides Watching Step

Moscow, Aug. 14 (NYHT).—Americans of the embassy here have been instructed to take special precautions against becoming involved in any difficulties. There are about 100 in the embassy colony.

They have been advised to stay as close to the embassy as possible. They are instructed to go into the street in groups of at least three.

Most personnel and their families reside in a five-story building which also houses embassy offices.

Those to whom diplomatic immunity is not extended by the Soviet Union are secretaries, clerks and other employes of the embassy and the Army, Navy and Air Force attaches' offices. The six American correspondents and three businessmen here likewise are not immune.

Tass Terms Woman's Fall An 'Accident'

Soviet News Agency Charges Police Exert Influence Over Her

By Thomas P. Whitney

Moscow, Aug. 14 (AP).—Tass referred today to the plunge of a Russian school teacher from a Soviet consulate window in New York as an accident and charged American intelligence agents and police with exerting influence over her in the hospital.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, made the charge in a New York dispatch which appeared in Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper. (It was broadcast also by the Moscow Radio.)

Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, the teacher, was injured in the plunge Thursday. The Tass account was the first mention of the incident to appear here.

Tass charged that American intelligence agents wearing New York police uniforms violated international law by entering the Soviet consulate after Mrs. Kosenkina fell. Tass said this was a "crude violation of the immunity of the Soviet consular building in New York."

Mulligan Denies Charge

(Acting New York Police Commissioner Thomas F. Mulligan and the Federal Bureau of Investigation denied the charge. Mulligan said no Government intelligence agents wore police uniforms at any time in the case and none entered the consulate in uniform.)

Tass said the intelligence agents had subjected the teacher's room in the consulate to a search, seized a purse belonging to her and took her to the hospital by force.

The Tass account said Mrs. Kosenkina fell from the third-floor window of her room and suffered a broken knee cap and injuries to the spinal column.

She was taken into the consulate building for first aid, then was forcibly removed by American intelligence agents in police uniform from the consulate and taken to Roosevelt Hospital, Tass said.

Tass Speaks of "Police Plans"

Tass implied that Mrs. Kosenkina was being quizzed by American intelligence agents at the hospital, saying, "American intelligence and police clearly tie up their future plans for Mrs. Kosenkina's stay in the hospital."

The news agency charged New York police had refused to permit a representative of the Soviet consulate to visit Mrs. Kosenkina.

Tass added that a Soviet vice consul was finally permitted to visit the woman yesterday and added she was "surrounded by police obviously exerting influence

State Department Tells Ambassador Lomakin Was Kept Out at Her Request

By the United Press

The United States yesterday flatly rejected a formal Soviet request that Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina be removed from a New York hospital and placed under Soviet control.

Mrs. Kosenkina is the Russian teacher who jumped from a third-story window of the Soviet consulate in New York Thursday. She said she had been held at the consulate against her will. She is now under American guard in the hospital.

This Government also rejected a Soviet request that the Russian consulate be permitted to post a 24-hour guard at the hospital.

Long Conference Held

Both requests were made by Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin, who spent 1 hour and 40 minutes at the State Department yesterday seeking to bolster his government's crumbling case in the bizarre affair of Mrs. Kosenkina and a second Russian school teacher and his family.

Panyushkin talked with Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett in probably the longest conference ever held in peacetime between a Soviet Ambassador and a top State Department official. It was his fourth conference with Lovett in the affair of the school teachers.

A State Department spokesman said afterward that Lovett rejected both of Panyushkin's requests and told the Soviet envoy that this Government had no right to require Mrs. Kosenkina to put herself under anybody's control against her will.

Fifteen New York policemen are guarding Mrs. Kosenkina in the hospital. In addition, she is under the protection of a subpena by the House Un-American Activities Committee, whose members want to question her when she gets well about Soviet activities in this country.

Alleged Search Protested

The State Department spokesman said that Panyushkin, during his talk with Lovett, also protested:

1. The alleged action of New York police in entering the Soviet Consulate and searching Mrs. Kosenkina's room after she jumped. Lovett informed him the department has no report on this but is seeking information from authorities in New York.

2. That Soviet Consul Jacob Lomakin has not been permitted to see Mrs. Kosenkina. Lovett replied that she had been permitted

Giant C-74 Flies to Germany As Army Aid in 19½ Hours

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—The first United States Air Force C-74 to span the Atlantic landed at the Rhein Main Air Base today and immediately was placed under a blanket of secrecy. The plane made the flight from Westover Field, Mass., in 19 hours, 34 minutes.

The Douglas Globemaster has a cargo capacity of 22½ tons, twice that of the C-54's which are being used in the Berlin airlift. It was assigned to Maj. Gen. W. H. Tunner, commander of the Air Task Force supplying Russian-blockaded Berlin. Air base officers forbid pictures.

Meanwhile, 16 jet planes took off from Fuerstenfeldbruck, near Munich, to complete their round-trip flight from the United States. The planes were to return to Selfridge Field, Mich., by the same route they took in completing the first jet flight eastward across the Atlantic several weeks ago. Their first scheduled stop was in Scotland.

The crew of the giant C-74 said the Atlantic crossing was routine. Capt. Grady Cole, Cleveland, Miss., piloted the plane.

New U. S. Envoy to Korea Has a Lifetime Of Career Experience in State Department

John Joseph Muccio, newly named head of the United States' diplomatic delegation to Korea, brings considerable experience to this delicate assignment at Seoul, where the new republic was inaugurated yesterday.

Muccio, who sailed from San Francisco Thursday as special representative of the President of the United States with the personal rank of Ambassador, has been a Department of State career man more than half his 48 years.

A native of Valle Agricola, Italy, he came to the United States in his youth and served in World War I. In 1921 he received his bachelor of philosophy degree from Brown University at Providence, which he still considers home. In June that year he became a naturalized American citizen and two months later joined the State Department's Foreign Service.

After training in Washington, where he received his master's degree from George Washington University in 1923, he went to Hamburg, Germany, as vice consul in 1924.

Two years later he was vice consul at Hongkong, two years later consul at Yunnanfu, China. Then after a few weeks, he went to Hongkong again.

Assignments at Foochow and Shanghai followed, before Muccio returned to the Western Hemisphere. After that he worked at La Paz, Bolivia; Panama; Managua, Nicaragua, and Havana, Cuba, where by then he had risen to be counselor of embassy and World War II was in progress.

In 1945 he was detailed to the staff of the United State political adviser on German affairs, and attended the Berlin Conference of that year. In December, 1946, he was transferred from Germany to Washington, and six months later assigned to the Foreign Service's Inspector Corps.

As a member of the corps he has been on the road much of the time, traveling virtually all over China and Manchuria, visiting such out-of-the-way places as Thiwa, Chinese Turkestan.

Outside of the State Department and the Metropolitan Club, where he usually stops, Muccio is little known in Washington.

A bachelor who has worked too hard to take much interest in hobbies, dark complexioned and of medium height, he has nevertheless kept his youthfulness of siprit while becoming one of the Department's younger members with ambassadorial rank.

He is a steady cigar smoker and something of a raconteur. Simple in tastes, conscientious and calm, he has the reputation of being cool under tension, a quality that will probably be useful in his new assignment, where the Russians take an especially warm interest.

Security Bill Bogged Down to our activities concerning the espionage laws."

It was learned, however, that the present proposals are the result of more than a year of deliberation. The initial recommendations for revamping the 1917 and 1920 espionage acts were handed to the President in June, 1946, by a special interdepartmental intelligence committee. Working hand in hand with legal experts from the Army and Navy, the Department of Justice began actual drafting on the proposals in June, 1947.

Need Empasized

Existing antiespionage and antisedition statutes, which date back to 1917, carefully outline the type of information to be protected in the interests of national defense.

In recent weeks, Justice and military officials working on the internal security bill have seized upon the findings of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to emphasize the need for tightening up these laws.

Although declining to comment on the pending proposals, one Justice Department official revealed that Federal prosecutors have been unable to obtain indictments against several persons implicated in the House Committee hearings because of what this official termed the laxity of the 1917 statutes.

The objective of an internal security law, according to this person, should be to "apprehend and punish a man who, with intent to damage the national defense, is caught before the damage is done." He noted that former Attorney General Francis Biddle had proposed strengthening espionage laws in 1942. At that time he submitted the socalled war security act to Congress. The Biddle proposal was never enacted.

Critics of the present proposal have pointed out in special memoranda to the White House that an act outlawing "possession" of "classified information" could tend to place a peacetime censorship on newspapers, offering Government officials a shield against public criticism of maladminstration and malfeasance in office.

Red Threat Is New Crisis Facing Japan

By Russell Brines

Tokyo (Sunday), Aug. 15 (AP).—A restless, impatient Japan will mark this third anniversary of her decision to surrender by emphasizing a new crisis over the threat of communism—small but strong and persistent.

The day will be dedicated only indirectly to recalling Emperor Hirohito's message of capitulation to the Allies—a message that shocked the nation.

Rallies called to commemorate it will be devoted mainly to the fight over efforts to curb the power of leftist unions of government employes.

Premier Hitoshi Ashida sounded the keynote in a public message today declaring that the past three years had been "rough going," but that thanks to Allied aid, there had been a minimum of the confusion and unrest which Japan had most feared.

Fiery speeches and strong gestures are certain at the hundreds of mass meetings called today by both "anti-Communist" and "anti-Fascist" groups.

Police and provost marshals are on 24-hour duty, alert for violence.

The present conflict, possibly the most crucial of the occupation, was brought to its climax by a letter which the supreme commander, General MacArthur, wrote to the Japanese premier, suggesting that strikes by government employes be prohibited. The cabinet issued a decree against such strikes, and went further by denying government workers collective bargaining as well.

This has produced open defiance (but thus far only verbal) from leftist labor leaders, and an official demand from Russia that the ban be canceled.

Mrs. Kosenkina's Plunge Held An 'Accident' in Tass Dispatch and attempting to make declarations claiming they originate from Kosenkina herself."

(William Dyczko, a New York police detective who speaks Russian, said Mrs. Kosenkina told Soviet Vice Consul Zot I. Chepurnykh at the hospital yesterday: "I don't want to se anyone. You kept me a prisoner. You would not let me go.")

Text of Tass Dispatch

Text of the Tass dispatch from New York on Mrs. Kosenkina's plunge from the Soviet consulate follows:

After being freed from the hands of White Guard bandits, on the afternoon of August 12, Oksana Kosenkina (Kasyenkina) fell to the courtyard from the window of her room on the third floor in the building of the Soviet consulate in New York.

As a result of the fall she sustained the following injuries: Fracture of the right leg and knee cap and injury to the spine.

Members of the consulate, who hurried to her help, carried Kosenkina into the premises of the consulate, where she was rendered first aid.

In connection with the accident the American intelligence is attracting attention because of its scandalous behavior. When Kosenkina had already been carried into the consulate's premises, American intelligence agents in the guise of American police violated its recognized diplomatic immunity, breaking into the consulate.

Say "Agents" Searched Room

These agents subjected to search the room occupied by Kosenkina on the premises of the consulate, took possession of Kosenkina's bag and its contents and sent Kosenkina by force to a hospital.

These arbitrary acts of the American police are clear violation of the status of the consulate, which is recognized by international law, and are contrary to statements of representatives of the United States State Department that they intend to respect and observe the standards of international law.

Kosenkina is being attended to at the Roosevelt Hospital. The American intelligence and police clearly connect their plans with her presence in the hospital.

In violation of the generally recognized rules and customs, the police did not admit a representative of the Soviet consulate to see Kosenkina.

Protests to Police

In view of this, the consul general of the USSR in New York, Mr. Lomakin, sent a protest to the acting police commissioner of the City of New York on the night of August 12, stating:

"The police have not permitted my official representative, Vice Consul Mr. Chepurnykh, to be present as observer at the interrogation of Mrs. Oksana Kosenkina, citizen of the Soviet Union, at the Roosevelt Hospital after she had received first medical attention.

"Mr. Chepurnykh repeatedly applied for permission to see Mrs. Kosenkina but was denied this right, in spite of the fact that I had received appropriate promises from representatives of the police and in particular from Deputy Chief Inspector Conrad Rotengast, who visited the consulate immediately after the incident."

"I categorically insist that no questioning may be undertaken in the absence of my representatives and I demand that my representatives be granted immediate permission to visit Kosenkina."

Say Police Surround Her

After Mr. Lomakin had sent this protest, he again sent Mr. Chepurnykh to see Mrs. Kosenkina, but his demand to see her was again rejected without explanation.

Only yesterday about midday was Soviet Vice Consul Chepurnykh granted the opportunity to visit Kosenkina in the hospital. There she is surrounded by police, who are clearly exerting pressure on her and have tried to put out statements alegedly coming from Kosenkina herself.

In their desire at any price to utilize the case of the kndnaping of Soviet citizens Kosenkina and (M. I.) Samarine for their own ends, American intelligence agents and the police authorities resort to more arbitrary acts against official representatives of the Soviet Union in the United States.

A judge decided to join his efforts to the provocational actions of the intelligence agents and unlawfully, in violation of consular immunity, sent a notice to the Soviet Consul General, Mr. Lomakin, demanding that Mrs. Kosenkina be delivered to court for interrogation on the morning of August 12. The Soviet Sounsel General naturally rejected this absurd demand of the insolent court official, which contradicts elementary international regulations.

'Voice' Tells World Of Kosenkina's Leap

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Voice of America is telling the people of the world the full story of Mrs. Oksana Kosenkina's leap from the Soviet consulate, where she says she was held captive.

"This is what we have been waiting for in our war of words," a State Department spokesman said. "This is something that can be easily understood by people all over the world."

First accounts of the incident were beamed to countries overseas, including the Soviet Union, less than an hour after the Russian school teacher made her three-story jump.

More complete stories, broadcast in 22 languages, were included in later short-waved reports.

Officials believed the broadcasts got through despite evidence that the Russians have sought to jam some programs in recent months.

"There must be some embarrassed people in the Kremlin," the spokesman said.

Moscow Magazine Attacks Rep. Mundt

Moscow, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—The magazine Literary Gazette today printed an article on the Communist spy investigation charging that Representative Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) is intent on "driving the United States to fascism," and alleging that Mrs. Oksana Kosenkina and Mikhail Ivanovich Samarine, Soviet school teachers, were being detained by United States authorities.

The Literary Gazette article declared President Truman's civil liberties program is "an empty pre-election trick."

The article, signed by Anatoli Sofonov, was devoted mainly to the House committee's investigation of alleged Soviet spy activities in the United States. Mundt has presided at most of the committee's sessions in the absence of Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.).

Sofonov denounced the spy probe as an attempt "to worsen Soviet-American relations" and a plot to infringe American civil liberties.

He described Mundt as a tool of big American industrialists, "openly and uniquitously driving the whole country to fascism."

"Everywhere in the United States where there is a smell of scandalous political provocation or a tall lie, look for Mundt," Sofonov wrote. "No wonder (he is) in this particular case the acting chief of the Committee on Un-American Activities."

during an hour and 40 minute conference with Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett.

The House subpena, Stripling said as he left the hospital, placed Mrs. Kosenkina "forthwith under the constant jurisdiction of the committee until she testifies." The committee is investigating activities of an alleged Communist spy ring operating in this country.

Asked if the committee's summons would mean the stationing of FBI agents at the teacher's bedside, Stripling replied: "I assume the committee will take the necessary steps to insure her appearance before the committee."

Meanwhile, Representative Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), the committee's acting chairman, wired the New York police department urging it to "provide physical protection" for the woman during her convalescence. A strong police detail has guarded Mrs. Kosenkina's room since her admittance to the hospital.

Investigation Urged

Mundt's telegram also suggested an investigation of circumstances under which the short, brown-haired teacher "jumped or was thrown from window of consulate." it added:

"I am advised no diplomatic immunities stand in way of investigation on premises and direct interrogation of woman to get true facts of case . . ."

Mrs. Kosenkina's dramatic "escape" from the consulate quickly catapulted the obscure teacher—sent here to instruct the children of Soviet diplomats—into the center of an international controversy.

The Russian Foreign Office, even before Panyushkin's unprecedentedly long conference today, lodged a protest with the State Department. It came in the midst of delicate international negotiations at Moscow.

Today, the Moscow press accused the American intelligence service of a "crude violation of the immunity of the Soviet Consular Building in New York."

Tass, in a dispatch broadcast from Moscow, said Mrs. Kosenkina "fell" from the consulate window.

"Members of the consulate, who hurried to her help, carried Mrs. Kosenkina into the premises of the consulate, where she was rendered first aid," the Russian news agency added.

The dispatch then said American intelligence agents, garbed as New York police, broke into the consulate and whisked Mrs. Kosenkina off to the hospital. Despite repeated demands, Soviet officials were denied admittance to the teacher's hospital room until almost 24 hours after her "fall," Tass said.

The charge that intelligence agents were masquerading as police was denied by the FBI and New York's Acting Police Commissioner Thomas F. Mulligan.

When Stripling entered Mrs. Kosenkina's room, she was asked if she had any objection to appearing before the committee. She answered in the negative, Stripling said, and accepted the paper he handed her.

She is not expected to testify for some time. Hospital attaches estimated it would require at least 12 weeks for her to recover from multiple fractures and other injuries suffered in the leap.

Yesterday, when Mrs. Kosenkina was visited by Soviet Vice Consul Zot I. Chepurnykh, she was quoted by a Russian-speaking New York detective as rejecting Chepurnykh's suggestion that she be removed to another hospital.

"No," the detective said she replied. "You kept me a prisoner. You would not let me go."

The Vice Consul today denied the police version of the meeting. He said Mrs. Kosenkina "did not say anything about me," adding that it was his belief the detective had "engineered" the story told newsmen.

The State Department already has promisd sanctuary in this country to Mrs. Kosenkina and another Russian teacher, Michael Ibvanovitch Samarine, if they do not wish to return to their homeland. Samarine, a witness before the House committee Thursday, maintained he would be executed if he went back to Russia.

Mrs. Kosenkina had been secluded at the consulate for six days before her plunge to the courtyard of the building.

Probers Try to Sift Truth From Lies

* By The Associated Press

Missing servants and lie detector machines entered into the congressional spy hunt yesterday as investigators sought backing for testimony of a key witness.

Members of the committee, convinced that one or another of the witnesses already questioned has committed perjury, devoted a weekend recess in the hearings to trying to run down the culprit. None of the committeemen would talk for publication, but most of them expressed concern over the likelihood that somebody has lied to them under oath.

Whittaker Chambers, an editor of Time magazine who said he used to be a Communist courier, has testified that a Communist underground operated in wartime Washington dealing with some important Government figures. Among those he named under oath were Donald Hiss and Alger Hiss. Both of them, he said, were leaders of small cells in the underground movement.

Of those named by Chambers, the Hiss brothers asked for a prompt hearing, waived their constitutional rights, and denied the charges categorically. They testified they didn't even know Chambers. Unlike some of the other witnesses, Alger and Donald Hiss did not decline to answer questions on constitutional grounds.

Donald Hiss, a former State Department official now a Washington attorney, told the committee either he or Chambers should be put in jail for lying under oath.

Alger Hiss, now president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, said he had "never laid eyes" on Chambers.

The Justice Department is studying the transcript of the testimony and committee members have demanded perjury action against someone.

Since Chambers has been one of the star witnesses for the committee, members said privately that "half our case rests on the integrity of his testimony."

"Frankly," one of them told reporters, "I can't figure out who is telling the truth. The testimony has been convincing on both sides."

Chambers has been questioned secretly by members since he first testified. The questioners said they have been unable to find a flaw in his story. On the other hand, they added, they have not been able to find a thin spot in the testimony of Alger Hiss or his brother.

Several members think a lie detector test might help. They said Chambers has offered to submit to such a test. They said, however, that the results of a lie detector test are not conclusive.

Since the case hangs largely on Chambers' testimony, as far as the committee is concerned, members and investigators are seeking additional backing for it. They have sought, without success, to locate servants employed in the Alger Hiss home at the time Chambers claimed Hiss was working with the Communists.

They are still looking for the domestics who might be able to tell them whether Chambers ever visited Hiss or whether Hiss ever talked to or about Chambers in his home. They plan, also, to bring the two men together soon and have called a closed-door meeting for Monday afternoon without saying who will testify.

The investigation may recess for several weeks after that to give investigators time to run down new leads.

Wiley Would Set Up Investigation Arm

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) recommended yesterday that Congress establish "an investigating arm utilizing FBI-trained personnel" to probe the executive branches of the Government.

Wiley said in a statement that evidence shows there is an "utter lack of cooperation and collaboration by the executive branch of the Government with Congress."

EXIT THE ENVOY—Unsmiling and striding rapidly, Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin (right) leaves the State Department yesterday followed by his first secretary, Boris Krotov. The Russian envoy talked one hour and 40 minutes with Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett. He protested the alleged entry by New York police of the Soviet Consulate and the searching of Mrs. Oksana Kosenkina's rooms

Taylor Calls Arms Plan Idiotic

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 14 (U.P.)—Senator Glen Taylor, Progressive Party vice presidential candidate, called the American armament program "idiotic" today.

He said Russia is in no position to threaten anybody.

Taylor said the cases of the two Russian school teachers gave a "slightly exaggeated" tinge to any beliefs that the Soviet people "are anxious to give their lives to spread communism over the world."

The teachers are Mikhail L. Samarine and Mrs. Onsana Stepanova Kosenkina, who have failed to go through with their scheduled returns to the Soviet Union from the United States.

Taylor, Idaho's "singing cowboy" Senator, said the Russians "desperately crave peace which would permit them to raise the standard of living of their people and quiet their growing unrest." He spoke at Progressive Party Day at the Illinois State Fair. Senator Alben W. Barkley and Gov. Earl Waren will speak on Democratic and Republican days next week.

Taylor said it has been "amply demonstrated" that Russia does not dominate Europe. He said have appeared recently make the "chinks in Russian armor" that American armament program unnecessary.

"The only reason for drafting our boys . . . is to keep our armament program from looking as idiotic as it really is," Taylor said.

U. S. Rejects Russian Envoy's Demand for Teacher's Custody to receive anyone she wanted to see. He also pointed out that Soviet Vice Consul Z. I. Chepurnykh was allowed to visit the hospital room, but when Mrs. Kosenkina saw him she told him she didn't want to talk with him.

In connection with the second point, Panyushkin asked that Lamokin be permitted to see Mrs. Kosenkina, that she be put under the protection of Soviet consular authorities and then be moved to whatever location Lamokin desired.

U. S. "Won't Force Her"

Lovett told him that Mrs. Kosenkina would be permitted to continue seeing anybody she wants to see, but that this Government has no right to force her to see anybody.

This Government has taken the position that persons like Mrs. Kosenkina and her teacher colleague, Mikhail Samarine, who wish to remain in this country may do so under protection as long as they obey United States laws.

Samarine fled from Soviet custody in New York and since has testified before the House Committee here. He said he was afraid to go back to Russia, as he and Mrs. Kosenkina were ordered to do, lest he be shot or sent to Siberia.

Lovett told Panyushkin bluntly that this Government has no right to put Mrs. Kosenkina under the control of anybody against her will.

The State Department spokesman, Michael J. McDermott, said Panyushkin argued that the alleged entry of New York police into the consulate violated international law and that American officials are preventing Lamokin from carrying out his prescribed duties.

Also, he denied press accounts of Chepurnykh's interview yesterday with Mrs. Kosenkina. She was reported to have told the vice consul, "You held me a prisoner. You would not let me go."

Panyushkin Confirms Visit

Officials made it clear the State Department is not taking any direct part in the New York investigation, but it merely seeking reports from appropriate authorities.

Panyushkin left the State Department shortly after 1 p. m., brushing aside all questions about his talk with Lovett.

But he did confirm to waiting reporters that he went to New York last Saturday to visit Mrs. Kosenkina in the Russia consulate.

"Did you ask Mrs. Kosenkina to sign an affidavit?" a reporter asked. It had been reported he tried to get her to say she was in the consulate of her own free will.

"Nyet (no)" Panyushkin replied.

An interpreter accompanying the Soviet envoy said Panyushkin only asked her "how she happened to be at the farm."

The "farm" was one maintained on Long Island by the Tolstoy Foundation for anti-Communist Russians. Mrs. Kosenkina was there were Lamokin "rescued" her a week ago. She returned with him to the New York consulate. In her leap Thursday she suffered a leg fracture and internal injuries.

Russian Case Sags

Panyushkin's long meeting with Lovett was attended by the Russian interpreter, State Department Counselor Charles E. Bohlen, and Ernest A. Gross, chief State Department legal expert.

Gross has just returned from New York, where he talked with police, the FBI and other authorities about the case. It was assumed he brought back a full report for the State Department.

Diplomatic officials here are convinced that Russia's case against the United States in connection with the two recalcitrant Soviet citizens has come apart at the seams.

The Soviet press and radio still are claiming loudly that United States authorities conspired to "kidnap" Samarine, his family, and Mrs. Kosenkina. But officials here say that two of the four official Soviet protests can be rejected outright in the face of Mrs. Kosenkina's three-story leap from the consulate and Samarine's statement that he doesn't want to go back to Russia.

A third protest concerned the legal authority of a New York City court to issue a habeas corpus writ against Lamokin. That, officials here say, counts for little now that she is out of the consulate and under United States protection.

Official State Department action on all four of the Russian protests will come only after Secretary of State George C. Marshall has studied the official report by Gross on the New York situation and the results of the latest Lovett-Panyushkin talk.

UMW Journal Asks Hearings Be Kept Up

John L. Lewis' newspaper, criticizing President Truman, called yesterday for a continuation of the Communist hearings on Capitol Hill.

The United Mine Workers Journal said in an editorial:

"When 'Injunction Harry,' sitting quietly in the White House plotting his Turnip Day campaign, dubs the proceedings as a 'red herring' in an attempt to dimiss the importance of the expose, we can only say that even though the show might smell of a fishing expedition it has certainly yielded a bountiful catch."

The editorial also said: "The public does not care how the 'Commies' are found, who finds them or what method is used in finding them—just so long as they are found and exposed."

Atomic Warfare Held as Useless As 'Blitzkrieg'

London, Aug. 14 (U.P.)—Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, claimed today that the Anglo-American theory of atomic warfare is as useless as the Nazi "blitzkreig" theory.

Moscow radio quoted a Red Star article by "Maj. Gen. Zubkov," which said:

"The shortsighted politicians in the imperialist camp of the U. S. A. and Great Britain and their military technicians who dream of a new world war are again trying to rely on the theory of the 'blitzkreig,' and building it on a new technical base—the atomic weapon. They ignore the experience of the Second World War which showed how completely groundless that theory is."

Zubkov added that, "under the debris of the German fascist war machine was buried not only the adventurist theory of the blitzkreig, but also the theory of wars with small armies."

'Sovietized' Zone Plans Reported

Names Called

Tension High Over Control Of Danube

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 14 (AP).—Differences between Eastern Europe's communist bloc and the western powers of the Danube today.

In a name-calling atmosphere of acrimony, diplomats from both factions traded accusations of imperialistic ambitions across the conference table and reached an accord on only one point—to recess until Monday.

Russia stuck to its no-compromise position. With the support of the Communist satellites she all but completed the job of River's future control heightened shoving through a new Danubian pact pledging free navigation but denying the western powers any say in its administration.

Out the window went an American-sponsored amendment to write into the convention firm guarantees foreign vessels would get equal treatment with the Danube countries in the way of navigation privileges, customs charges, port, docking, and shore facilities.

The vote was 7 to 3 with the United States winning support only from Britain and France. Lined up with Russia were Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Romania and the Soviet Ukraine.

United States Ambassador Cavendish Cannon said the draft would leave the door wide open to Russian domination of the Danube.

British Ambassador Sir Charles Peake echoed Cannon's words.

Their accusations drew quick countercharges from Hungary's Zoltan Santo, Romanian Foreign Minister Anna Pauker, and Soviet Ambassador Anatole Lavrentiev.

U. N. Machinery Stalled Pending Moscow Results

Lake Success, Aug. 14 (AP).—The United Nations today reached the stage where little further progress can be expected on major issues until Moscow and Washington reach an agreement.

With this situation prevailing, the Security Council is idling along while keeping a close watch on the Big Power talks over the Berlin situation. It is the general feeling here that the impact of the Kremlin conferences extends beyond the German problem. The ultimate outcome is viewed as a barometer of future East-West relations in all spheres.

If the Moscow talks fail, the situation may come to a head anyway in Paris at the fall meeting of the 58-nation General Assembly.

The futility of endless debate at Lake Success under present conditions has become apparent in the handling of plans for a world police force and international control of atomic energy. Both are deemed necessary to a successful peace agency. But after nearly three years, delegates still are stalled by basic differences between Washington and Moscow.

Monday Earliest Day For Resuming Meetings

Moscow, Aug. 14 (AP).—Informants said today that no new meeting of the American, British and French diplomats with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov was expected before Monday at the earliest.

United States Embassy spokesmen refused to comment on the status of the talks with Molotov on Berlin and East-West differences, but a mood of guarded optimism persisted.

Berlin, Aug. 14 (AP).—Communists were reported today to be speeding plans for a police state on the Soviet model in eastern Germany.

Details of a plan for "complete Sovietization" of the Russian occupation zone were published by the Berlin Christian Democrat newspaper, Der Tag.

The anti-Communist newspaper said Bernard Bechler, interior minister of the state of Brandenburg in the Soviet zone, disclosed the plan in a recent speech.

Bechler, former major on the German general staff, who turned Communist after his capture by the Russians in 1943 and joined Moscow's wartime "Free Germany Committee," was reported to have said:

"The time is now ripe for creation of the Socialist state we planned in 1945."

A feature of Bechler's plan as reported by Der Tag is the centralization of the Russian zone police force "to make the entire police organization of the zone the weapon of the Socialist Unity Party."

The laws of the Allied Control Council for Germany, to which the Russians subscribed, forbid centralization of zonal police.

The official Socialist Party organ, Neues Deutschland, admitted for the first time that serious food shortages exist in the Soviet zone.

The Anglo-American aerial supply line was back on a near-normal schedule today after heavy rains yesterday.

The Berlin Trade Union Federation and the city's three non-Communist political parties petitioned the Western military governments to make the Western-sponsored deutschemark the sole medium of exchange for western Berlin "because our people have shown their faith in it" and because "Soviet-sponsored currency would only be used as a means of Russian exploitation."

[The New York Herald Tribune said the Western allies tonight ordered an emergency advance of between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000 west Deutschemarks to enable the municipal government partially to meet West-sector wages due Monday.]

Uranium Discovered In British Columbia

Vancouver, British Columbia, Aug. 14 (AP).—First discovery in British Columbia of radioactive uranium, the world's most coveted mineral, was reported today

The strike of the mineral used in atomic energy production was by Ernest Johnson, 35, a veteran Canadian prospector. The find is near Gunn Lake, about 120 miles north of Vancouver.

Greek Victory Hints Change In Cabinet

Athens, Aug. 14 (AP).—The prospect of victory over the rebel forces in northern Greece precipitated today a demand within the Liberal Party of Premier Themistokles Sophoulis for a new government to replace the present coalition cabinet.

The demand was made by a group of dissatisfied Liberal members of Parliament headed by deputy party leader Sophocles Venizelos, a former Premier.

Venizelos last night said.

"Now that operations on the Grammos front are drawing to their close, collaboration between Liberals and Populists should end.

"The country is in need of a government which, aloof from party interests, should proceed to the settlement of all problems for restoring democratic institutions and paving the way for free and honest elections."

Sophoulis, who became Premier in September, 1947, replied he did "not want to be bothered with such questions" while attention is centered on the military situation.

An optimistic report of the military situation was offered today by United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady, who predicted the Greek government drive to crush guerilla forces in the Grammos Mountains "is certain to be successful within the reasonably near future."

Grady said he toured the battlefields and gained great confidence in the successful outcome of the war in western Greece.

A general staff communique earlier reported attacks from inside Albania on national forces closing a trap on the Communist-led guerillas in the Grammos area.

Greek newspapers said the incidents were reported to the U. N. Balkan Commission at Salonika.

Nenni Admits Leftist Union Is Impossible

Rome, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Leftwing Socialist leader Pietro Nenni, in his first statement since his return from the Soviet Union, said today he saw no possibility of creating a new leftist coalition to replace the Communist-led Popular Front, which was dissolved during his absence.

However, Nenni declared there will be no change in the pro-Communist policy of the leftwing Socialists. Although deposed as party chieftain, Nenni still is one of his party's major leaders. His statements were published in both his newspaper and the Communist organ.

Nenni avoided discussion of his tour through eastern Europe and Russia from which he returned yesterday. He did not comment on his talks with Russian Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and A. A. Zhdanov, member of the Soviet Communist Party's Politburo.

"Only the U.S.S.R. and the new (eastern) democracies are marching toward peace," said Nenni.

State Seizes Bank Control In Romania

Bucharest, Romania, Aug. 14 (AP).—All banking credit facilities in Romania were taken over by the Government today under a decree issued by the presidium of the National Assembly.

The decree announced dissolution of all private and State credit and banking institutions except the National Bank of Romania, the National Society for Industrial Credit, the State Savings Bank and "all banking and credit institutions created by special convention between the Romanian state and any foreign state and whose capital belonged to both states."

These remaining institutions will be governed by the ministry of finance and the National Bank of Romania, the decree said. No new credit or banking institutions will be permitted to organize.

Not more than 50 big banks are affected by the decree, many having been dissolved previously. A couple of thousand small banks also will be dissolved unless they change into economic cooperatives within 30 days.

The National Bank has established more than 500 new agencies throughout the country.

Radicals Ask Peron Ouster

ing conditions in privately owned industries.

After an eight-day absence from the chamber of deputies, 42 Radical Party members last night resumed their opposition to Peron's regime and withdrew their resignations as congressmen. They lost their first battle, which was waged against the constitutional convention bill.

The Radical deputies had threatened to resign because of the expulsion from the chamber of Dr. Ernesto San Martino for a speech which the majority said had insulted Peron.

A Radical Party announcement today declared there was in Argentina a "continuing plan to build a totalitarian system conserving the appearance of normal institutions but perfecting the concentration of all political, economic and cultural powers and combining under one sign the state, government, official party and its chief."

Vandenberg Speech A Dewey Prologue

By The Associated Press

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) may make a foreign policy broadcast soon to help lay the groundwork for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's vigorous discussion of that issue in the campaign.

Before he left Washington for a vacation, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee told a reporter he hopes to outline on a Nation-wide hookup his view that Republicans have every right to talk about the "historical aspects" of foreign policy in the campaign.

As the chief congressional architect of the bipartisan international policy, Vandenberg is in agreement with Dewey and John Foster Dulles that nothing shall be said which might make other nations think this country talks with two voices on current foreign affairs. But the Michigan Senator made it plain the Republicans have no intention of keeping complete silence on an issue they regard as vital to the Nation's future.

Hits Democratic Platform

Dewey himself said a month ago that the Democratic platform contained "extremely partisan and provocative assertions concerning foreign affairs." He didn't go then into the details he is expected to provide in at least one—and possibly more—campaign speeches.

Vandenberg's observation that the "historical aspects" can be aired was regarded as significant in the light of a July 24 statement by Dewey, after the GOP Presidential nominee had conferred with the Senator and Dulles, his foreign affairs adviser. At that time Dewey said the Russian blockade of Berlin had become critical largely because the Administration had neglected "elemental principles" in the original occupation agreement.

"Our representatives at London, Yalta and Potsdam unfortunately relied on assumptions rather than specific inter-governmental agreements to define our rights in Berlin," he said.

Cites Corridor Lack

He alluded to the lack of a written agreement giving the United States, as a partner in the occupation of the German capital, a corridor into Berlin under its own control.

Dewey's reference to the London, Yalta and Potsdam meetings is in line with assertions of other Republicans that a large share of the world's present ills can be laid at the door of agreements made by Democratic Presidents in which the GOP did not share at the time.

For Governor

Connecticut Democrats Pick Bowles

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 14 (AP).—A shouting, whistling, handclapping Democratic convention today chose former OPA Administrator Chester Bowles, the man it said was "right" about high prices, to be the party's nominee for Governor.

The choice was unanimous, made so at the motion of Thomas J. Dodd, Bowles' erstwhile opponent for the nomination, who withdrew earlier in the week after party leaders had thrown their support to the former national price administrator and stabilization director.

Dodd, a former Nuernberg war crimes prosecutor who wanted the convention to take a stronger stand than it did in repudiation of what he called the Communist-dominated third party, said he offered the motion to make Bowles' nomination unanimous because he was "anxious that no Republican take comfort from any effort on my part to help steer the course of the Democratic Party."

In his acceptance speech, Bowles disclosed that within a few days he will submit to Republican Gov. James C. Shannon, who undoubtedly will be nominated to oppose him when the Republicans convene September 13 and 14, a plan for meeting the housing shortage in Connecticut.

GOP Claims Huge Saving

on what he called the Democratic Administration's "spending spree." He issued a formal, brief report yesterday on what he contends the meat ax has hacked away.

Declaring that "people have been misinformed as to the amount of appropriations made by the eightieth Congress," he said these reductions have been made in budgets submitted by Mr. Truman:

In fiscal 1947 (ending June 30, 1947), a $3,600,000,000 saving.

In fiscal 1948 (ending June 30, 1948), a $2,741,481,291 saving.

Total saved in two years, $6,341,000,000.

Government expenditures now are running at a rate of over 40 billion dollars a year.

Dingell said Taber's $2,741,481,291 figure for the last fiscal year is padded by more than $1,600,000,000. He contended the correct figure is $1,008,031,936 and that ought to be reduced by 687 million dollars to cover expected tax refunds.

Mr. Truman told Congress last January he expected a budget surplus of $4,800,000,000 for the fiscal year which began July 1, 1948. Now he is reported as ready to predict, in his budget review today, a deficit of close to two billion dollars.

Indications are he will put most of the blame on the income tax cut, which was enacted over his veto.

The President will fire his second gun at the Republicans Monday, on the cost-of-living issue. The GOP Congress ignored his call for restoration of limited price, rationing and wage controls and for a four-billion-dollar excess profits tax. They write their own anti-inflation ticket.

Mr. Truman already has called the GOP measure a concoction of "feeble compromises." But he may sign it. This is not certain.

The Federal Reserve Board is all set to restore in 30 days the controls over installment buying provided in the Republican bill.

If the President signs the bill the curbs on the easy-payment plans will become effective about September 16.

Thurmond to Carry Campaign Into North

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 14 (AP).—J. Strom Thurmond, presidential candidate for States' rights Democrats, expects to run on the general election ballot "in every State where it is possible to do so."

Thurmond, Governor of South Carolina, indicated yesterday that he and his running mate, Mississippi Gov. Fielding L. Wright, would try to carry Northern as well as Southern States.

"We have men working now compiling information in all the States with regard to getting on the ballot," Thurmond declared.

Thurmond has just returned from Houston, Tex., where he and Wright officially accepted the nomination of the States' Right Democrats, a party pledged against President Truman and his civil rights program.

Dixie Revolt Threat Eases

the GOP presidential nominee, he has a chance to carry some Dixie States, and he may therefore drop below the Mason and Dixon line for some speech-making. His running mate, Gov. Earl Warren of California, is almost certain to do so.

McGrath already has said Mr. Truman is thinking about campaigning in the South. His No. 2 man, Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, knows the ground well and can be expected to get in some political licks there.

Dixiecrats Miss Chance For Missouri Challenge

The States Rights Democrats can't challenge President Truman in his home State of Missouri next November.

The new party's headquarters has been informed it can't qualify its presidential ticket for the ballot by the August 23 deadline.

IT WASN'T EASY—John H. Callahan, afflicted with cerebral palsy, rose above the handicap to get a law degree and pass the District bar exam. He was permitted to dictate his answers

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

The fingers of his right hand fumbled awkardly with the package of matches—but he managed to light one.

It wasn't easy. Nothing has been easy for 24-year-old John H. Callahan. He is afflicted with cerebral palsy.

Callahan has risen above his handicap. He received his law degree at Georgetown University in June 1947 and four months later passed his bar examination.

Callahan was sitting in the office of Dan Piver, an attorney, telling his story, Piver, intensely interested in the subject of cerebral palsy and a director of the District Society for Crippled Children, has befriended many young men like Callahan.

70 Pct. Above Normal

"It's a shame that jobs are so difficult to obtain for young men like John," Payne commented. "You know, 70 per cent of cerebral palsy cases are above normal intelligence."

Piver has attempted to place Callahan in a job. He has sought out more than 50 of his friends in the legal profession, but jobs are scarce.

Callahan wants to specialize in tax and corporate law. This would not necessitate trial work.

"If I can't get a job here," said Callahan, "I think I'll go back to Georgetown for my master's degree. After that I would return to Battle Creek, Mich., take the State bar examination and open an office of my own there."

Like others who suffer from cerebral palsy, Callahan has trouble controlling his legs, his arms and his speech.

In the past it was believed cerebral palsy was the result of an injury to the brain. Now, however, authorities have come to believe it results, in most cases, because of variations in the developmental structure of the brain.

Callahan has forged ahead despite his handicap. He was graduated, at the age of 18, from Campion High School in Prairie du Chien, Wis. He received his bachelor's degree at Georgetown in March 1945.

Callahan has no use of his left hand, but therapy has developed his right hand so that it is serviceable.

He couldn't use a fork until he was 9 or 10. He wasn't able to use a spoon until he was 15.

"I couldn't keep anything on the spoon," he said.

When he was 7, Callahan was placed in a special school started in Battle Creek by the Kellogg Foundation. This school was for cases such as his. After two years, he moved on to a Catholic parochial school in Battle Creek.

After coming to Washington in 1942, he received physical and occupational therapy at Gallinger Hospital. He visits the hospital every day.

He required speech therapy, too, so he enrolled at the Washington Academy of Speech. The theory at the academy was that the existing speech pattern had to be completely erased and a new one created.

His first instruction was to maintain absolute silence for two weeks.

Arranged With Waiter

"At that time," Callahan recalled, "I was living in a rooming house and eating out. I arranged in advance with a waiter in the restaurant I patronized to order my meals merely by pointing to the menu.

"But one day I ran into complications. My waiter was absent. I wanted a menu from which to order but I couldn't say so to the waiter. He brought me all sorts of things. Finally the head waiter sauntered over with a menu and solved the situation."

Callahan is unable to write. This, he admitted, was quite a handicap in his law classes, where other students were able to scribble notes.

"I did the next best thing," he said. "I borrowed the other fellow's notes."

When Callahan took his bar examination, he was permitted to dictate his answers.

The determined youth plans to solve this problem as he has solved so many others in the past—by intense concentration. He's now learning how to operate a typewriter as part of his occupational therapy at Gallinger.

Several days ago he took an examination for an attorney's post with the Securities and Exchange Commission. However, his physical condition merits him no special consideration.

Because he thought it would help him in his intended branch of law, Callahan last year took an accounting course at Columbus University.

Callahan lives with his mother at 1702 Summit pl. nw.

'Paste-Over' Campaign Suggested in Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Aug. 14 (AP).—Oklahoma State rights Democrats today considered steps to help Southern Dixiecrats who oppose the election of President Truman and Senator Alben W. Barkley in November.

A "paste-over" campaign has been suggested since it is doubtful if they will be able to get the Dixiecrats' names on the Oklahoma ballot. Under the plan, stickers with Thurmond's and Wright's names would be pasted over the regular Democratic ballot this fall. J. William Cordell, secretary of the State election board, has said such action would result in each of the marked ballots being thrown out.

'Mr. America' Picked in London As 'Mr. Universe'

London, Aug. 14 (AP).—John Grimek, 31, of Perth Amboy, N. J., and York, Pa., won the title of "Mr. Universe," the most perfectly developed man in the world, today.

Another American, 22-year-old Steve Reeves of Oakland, Calif., was judged second with a Frenchman, Andre Drapp, third.

An enthusiastic audience—at least half of them women—cheered the verdict wildly in London's Scala theater.

Both United States entries were former winners of "Mr. America" titles—Grimek in 1940 and 1941 and Reeves in 1947.

Grimek's prize winning body is five feet, nine inches tall and weighs 196 pounds. Reeves stands six feet, one inch tall and weighs 216 pounds. Both have blue eyes, light brown, wavy hair and lots of beautiful bulging muscles.

'Sitdowns' Charged At Ia. Packing Plant

Ottumwa, Iowa, Aug. 14 (AP).—The big Morrell packing plant here suspended operations in six departments today after what the company described as "a series of sporadic sitdowns."

The CIO Packinghouse Workers Union challenged company assertions that "sitdowns," "slowdowns" and "attempted sabotage" had taken place. The union's approximately 3000 Morrell workers have been without a contract since midweek.

No violence was reported at the plant today but the company said there were some instances where workers "cornered" department foremen and kept them hemmed in while they argued grievances.

Meantime Mrs. Etta Swartz, 33, remained hospitalized as the result of an altercation which took place last night when a plant official sought to relieve a colleague who had been surrounded more than an hour by 25 women workers.

A company statement said plant officials had reported "numerous evidences of sabotage in certain departments involving serious metal objects which might cause serious damage to machinery."

"It seems obvious," the statement said, "that the developments of the past two days are the result of a planned program to stage a series of sitdown strikes and slow-downs in various departments of the plant designed to cripple operations."

Ed Filliman, chief steward of the UPWA-CIO local, said:

"We have no reports of so-called sabotage and I don't believe it. The union denies that any sitdown strikes have occurred. When our contract expired the company posted working rules which do not provide any grievance procedures. Our people are just trying to work out their troubles the only way they can."

Hundreds of workmen left the plant at midmorning at the order of plant foremen. As the plant prepared to close over the weekend the company said it would open for normal operations Monday. The union said its members would report for work.

Communications Strike Studied by Workers

Chicago, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Officers of the CIO Association of Communications Workers assembled today to discuss setting a date for a Nation-wide strike against the Bell Telephone System's Western Electric Co.

The union's 25,000 members, who install Bell equipment, voted strike authority two months ago. A walkout could tie up communications across the country.

'Bumps' for Charity . . .

The Washington Post

BACK YARD HULA—The 50 odd children and parents attending yesterday's "charity circus" in an 8th st. back yard saw Pat Solano, 4-year-old female impersonator, do a hula with a few extra "bumps" thrown in for the audience's delight. The show, staged at the home of Mrs. Mary Napolitano, 5131 8th st. nw., raised $11, which will be turned over to the Children's Hospital building fund

ITU Members Are Advised To Participate in Politics

Milwaukee, Aug. 14 (AP).—President Woodruff Randolph told the International Typographical Union today that members' efforts must be directed toward politics.

In his annual report to the union convention, Randolph asserted, ". . . since the Taft-Hartley law has had such a terrific impact upon our wages, hours and working conditions, it is obvious that the efforts of our members must be seriously and continuously directed toward civil politics.

"There are enough working people in this country to control the political machinery of all parties."

Randolph said labor's prime political job in the past has been to get organized labor and working persons to register and vote. "That prodigious task," he continued, "must be accomplished before the voters can be asked to vote for any particular candidate for any particular reason."

In outlining the union's past year to the members, Randolph said the "benefits and special assistance paid to support striking and locked-out members of Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 from November 24, 1947, to July 20, 1948, totaled $3,471,538.57; since the inception of the strike in the job branch in Philadelphia, $741,518.63 has been expended for benefits and special assistance in that city."

In opening his speech, Randolph told the delegates, "We are a law-abiding organization and our determination to abide by law is stated in our collective bargaining policy. We have followed that policy so far as we have been permitted to do with the result that the ITU is today standing stronger and even with increased membership over a year ago."

Contempt Action Still Under Consideration

By The Associated Press

Government lawyers yesterday were reported still considering contempt action against the International Typographical Union, but nothing has been definitely decided.

On March 27, Federal Judge Luther M. Swygert issued a temporary injunction ordering the union not to insist on closed-shop conditions in the composing rooms of the Nation's newpapers.

General Counsel Robert N. Denham of the National Labor Relations Board has received complaints that the union was continuing its former policies in some respects, despite the injunction.

About two months ago Denham issued a statement saying such complaints were being investigated, and if they proved true, his office would ask Judge Swygert to cite the union for contempt.

American Airlines Picketed at LaGuardia

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Members of Local 501 of the Transport Workers Union of America (CIO) picketed American Airlines installations at LaGuardia Field today in protest over the laying off of maintenance men.

Picketing lasted for one hour at the Airport as union and company spokesmen advanced different stories of the circumstances surrounding the discharges.

An airlines spokesman explained the company replacing DC-3S and DC-4S with twin-engined Convairs and consequently requires less maintenance work.

A union spokesman said picketing would be continued Monday. He said it would start next Saturday on a country-wide basis, spreading to American Airlines installations in Washington, Tulsa, Fort Worth and Los Angeles.

Textile Workers Make Strike Call Threat

Rome, Ga., Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Members of the CIO's Textile Workers Union of America today authorized their bargaining committee to call a strike "at any time this weekend at the big Celanese Corp. of America plant here.

The labor dispute threatened to close down the plant which carries the second largest payroll in Floyd County and employs 2200 persons. The union claims 1650 members. The main issue was wages.

NLRB Finding In ITU Case

tracts that could be canceled on 60 days' notice be forbidden.

There was no immediate comment from Woodruff Randolph, president of the ITU, but the union's counsel, Gerhard Van Arkel, said the union will let the examiner's findings go to the NLRB for further action.

Said Van Arkel:

"Trial Examiner Leff's intermediate report is the fourth of a series of reports by the NLRB examiners, all dealing with substantially similar allegations and evidence concerning the ITU.

"Each of these reports has, in most instances, reached differing and conflicting conclusions. It is typical of the confusion bred in the Taft-Hartley Act that no two examiners can agree on its meaning or on the legality of the policies followed by the ITU."

There was no immediate comment from Cranston Williams, general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

In another case heard at the same time, Leff found the ITU and its affiliate, the Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, guilty of violating the act by refusing to bargain in good faith with the Chicago Newspaper Publishers Association, and by insisting upon closed shops in the composing rooms of the five Chicago daily newspapers. A strike by Chicago printers has been in progress since November 24.

Leff's report in the American Newspaper Publishers Association case, the most important of the NLRB cases involving the ITU, is 35,000 words in length.

It will probably get immediate response from ITU—which began its annual convention in Miuwaukee yesterday.

At the Cleveland convention a year ago the union established its policies under the Taft-Hartley Act—policies which now have been declared illegal, so far as they related to the continuation of closed shop conditions.

The new law made it illegal for an employer to discriminate against nonunion workers in hiring, and it also made it illegal for a union to cause an employer to discriminate. This outlawed the closed shop, an agreement under which the employer agrees to hire only members of a union.

The publishers association filed charges last November 17 on behalf of its more than 800 member newspapers. Robert N. Denham, NLRB general counsel, issued a complaint on November 21 against the ITU and its national officers.

Denham's staff prosecuted the union at hearings before Examiner Leff which began December 9 and ended May 18, with many interruptions.

"There can be no doubt," Leff said, "on the record of this case, that primary purpose of the 1947 ITU 'collective bargaining' was to continue closed-shop conditions."

"The ITU and its locals made no effort to conceal their purpose, although at times they sought to disguise it by phrasing it in terms of the protection of the historic 'right and prerogative' of individual members not to work with nonunion men."

Throughout all these cases the union's lawyers have argued that a union cannot be guilty of causing or attempting to cause an employer to discriminate against a nonunion employe until an actual, specific case of discrimination occurs.

The examiner rejected this contention.

He said it "appears obvious" that the very existence of closed-shop hiring practices operates in a discriminatory manner against all prospective nonunion applicants for employment.

That is, nonunion job seekers are discriminated against "as a class," and no case of discrimination against a particular employer is necessary to prove illegality.

Leff's report in the Nation-wide case marked the first time an examiner has ruled upon the legality of the ITU's long-standing reproduction rule, sometimes called the "bogus work" rule. This requires the resetting in type of advertisements which have already been supplied to newspapers, from some other newspaper or some outside source. These advertisements are usually supplied in the form of paper mats from which printing plates can be cast.

The Denham office had charged that the resetting requirement is featherbedding, violating the Taft-Hartley provision which says a union must not require payment for services that are not performed.

Leff held that the charge was not "sufficiently established." He said that what Congress was seeking to prohibit was "extortion by the forcible introduction of standby or similar practices to secure payment for which no services at all were required or expected in return."

Leff did not find, in the Nation-wide case, that the ITU was guilty of refusing to bargain in good faith. In fact, Denham did not charge this directly—that is, he said the ITU had refused to bargain but he did not charge a violation of the Taft-Hartley provision requiring a union to bargain.

Instead he said that the union's refusal to bargain was a violation of the provision relating to coercion of employes. Leff brushed this aside. He said he did not have to decide the question of whether the union's conduct would have constituted a refusal to bargain if such a specific violation had been charged.

However, in the other case, involving Chicago only, a specific charge of refusal to bargain was made under the refusal-to-bargain clause of the law. And here the examiner found both the ITU and its Chicago local guilty.

He recommended that the ITU and the local not only be ordered to cease trying to cause the Chicago papers to discriminate against nonunion men, but also be ordered to bargain collectively in good faith, and if an agreement is reached, to embody such agreement in a written contract in conformity with past custom.

In the Chicago case he further recommended that the ITU rescind its instructions and other documents by which it has given effect to the collective bargaining policy adopted at the 1947 convention.

Weak, Watery Blood Blamed for Making Men and Women Look and Feel Older THAN THEIR YEARS

How do you feel at the end of a day? Is that old time pep and drive lacking? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Thousands now regaining glowing good looks and vitality through the release of vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a general run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, great freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out your whole body, greater freshness sold. Men to Fill Million Jobs by June Sought

By the United Press

This country's record-smashing 61,600,000 job-holders must be boosted by another one million by June, Director Robert C. Goodwin of the United States Employment Service said last night.

Goodwin said in a labor market report that the country apparently has outgrown the 60-million-job goal heretofore considered requisite to full employment. The Census Bureau recently estimated United States population at more than 143 million.

By June, Goodwin said, the armed forces will have added to their numbers and will have to have additional civilian employes. More workers will be needed, too, for producing military equipment.

Goodwin said both total employment and non-farm employment are now the highest in American history. The 60-million-job goal has been outgrown even in the face of extensive technological improvements such as farm mechanization, Goodwin said.

Farm mechanization he added, is enabling the country to produce near-record crops with considerably less labor than a year ago. He said the biggest mechanization gains had been in the cotton belt and in beet sugar States of the South and Middle West.

Goodwin said the mechanical cotton picker and the mechanical beet sugar planter and weeder have cut down the use of hand labor considerably. But, he added, there has been no unemployment problem because of continuing strong demand for non-farm labor.

The greatest labor shortages, Goodwin said, are in the industrial Middle West around the Great Lakes. He said the greatest shortage in types of labor is in the building and other skilled trades.

Goodwin said the need for one million more workers by next June creates "the greatest placement problem since the war ended" for the employment service. He said the defense program and the draft will cause a big labor turnover.

Farm mechanization, meanwhile, has lessened the need for importing Mexicans and other foreign workers, Goodwin said. So far, only 22,000 workers have been imported this year, as compared with 50,000 in 1947.

24-Truck Convoy

D. C. Guard Police Unit Goes to Camp

Some 300 officers and men of the 163d Military Police Battalion of the District National Guard left Washington this morning, for two weeks' training at Fort George Meade, Md.

Headquarters Detachment, Medical Detachment and Line Companies A, B and C, under the command of Lieut. Col. George O. Weber, traveled in a 24-truck convoy to the camp.

Training at Fort Meade for the battalion will include range firing, basic weapon instruction, scouting, patrolling and traffic work.

The last ground convoys of the Distict Air National Guard that aided in the 15-day summer encampment at Dover, Del., arrived at Andrews Air Force Base yesterday afternoon.

Paymasters began paying a total of $32,394.66 in cash to the 403 officers and men who participated in the training.

Since July 31 the men had been in summer encampment at Dover, engaging in aerial target practice, ground crew instruction and training 129 recruits in the group.

Gen. Bissell Charges Sifted

By The Associated Press

Anonymous letters charging Maj. Gen. Clayton L. Bissell with "unauthorized transactions" have led to an investigation of the Air Force officer.

The United States Air Force said yesterday that the accusations were made in unsigned letters received by the department, and that a preliminary investigation fails to establish their validity.

But, it added, Secretary Symington has ordered further inquiry into the charges that Bissell engaged in "unauthorized transactions" while serving as military and air attache in Great Britain.

The Air Force said it was established policy to make thorough checks on all allegations contained in reports, anonymous or not.

Bissell recently returned to the United States and is now on 30 days leave.

Army to Return 'Axis Sally' Here For Treason Trial

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—"Axis Sally" Gillars, 30, the American girl who allegedly sold her voice to the Nazis and then used it to try to lure GIs across combat lines during the war, is going home to be tried for treason, reliable Army officers said today.

These officers said Miss Gillars will leave Monday by air and probably will land at Washington, where she is scheduled to be tried.

Sally, not as pretty as she allegedly tried to make her GI radio audience believe, has been in and out of custody in the United States zone of Germany since the war ended.

Jews Set to Push War on Arab Armies

Tel Aviv, Israel, Aug. 14 (AP).—Israel threatened today to drive the invading Arab armies out of all Palestine "by means of war" unless the United Nations compels their withdrawal.

David Ben-Gurion, prime minister of Israel, told a council of the labor party (MAPAI) that the Jews must be prepared for "a renewal of war activities."

"If the United Nations is unable to implement its own decisions and compel the Arab states to withdraw their invading armies, not only from Israel but from the whole Palestine territory, then the Jews will have to do so themselves," he said.

"The presence of foreign armies in Palestine threatens Israel's existence and is furthermore a spectacular breach of international law."

Ben-Gurion said it is "impossible for us to continue with a never ending truce * * * the United Nations must expel the invading armies from Palestine or we will do it by means of war."

He declared that his country's foreign policy is based on United Nations policy "without leaning eastward or westward."

Count Folke Bernadotte, the U. N. mediator, said in Stockholm today that Egypt had rejected Israel's proposal for direct Palestine peace talks between Jews and Arabs.

(Egypt informed the mediator it could not accept pretensions of the Israel government that it could discuss the future "of any part of Palestine."

Headquarters of the mediator in Rhodes said a report Israel had refused a cease fire order in Jerusalem had been transmitted erroneously from Haifa, and that the request was still under discussion.

(Bernadotte said yesterday the Jews had rejected the request while the Arabs had agreed. However Bernadotte said today he had been informed by his Rhodes headquarters that the Jewish commander in Jerusalem was going to Tel Aviv to discuss the cease first order with Jewish leaders.

The Israeli government said water is being supplied Jerusalem over a secondary pipeline. Saboteurs blasted the Latrun pumping station Thursday night, destroying U. N. hopes to deliver water to the city.

Arabs Seen Seeking Red Aid in Palestine War

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—A high official of the Arab Higher Committee in Palestine asserted today that the Arabs "may throw themselves into the laps of the Russians if America continues to support the pretensions of the Zionists in the Holy Land.

Jamal Husseini, vice president of the committee and a representative of that group before the United Nations, made the statement as he left by plane for Damascus.

The Arab leader said, "I expect the war will recommence" in Palestine.

U. N. Seeking Kashmir Truce

New Delhi, India, Aug. 14 (AP).—The United Nations Kashmir Commission today proposed a cease-fire agreement between India and Pakistan to pave the way for a peaceful settlement of the struggle for Kashmir.

Pakistan has characterized as "unauthorized" reports she has troops fighting in Kashmir, which actually is part of the Indian union. India charges that a Pakistan expeditionary force is fighting the Indian army there.

The United Nations proposal came as Pakistan celebrated its first birthday and India was on the eve of a similar commemoration of its first year of independence. (Story on Page 2, Sec. II.)

An official announcement by the U. N. Commission which was transmitted simultaneously to Indian Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and Pakistan Foreign Minister Sir Mohammed Zafrullah Khan, said:

"The commission recommends that the governments of India and Pakistan order a cease-fire and simultaneously accept certain principles as a basis for formulation of a truce agreement to be followed by consultation with the commission to determine fair and equitable conditions whereby the free expression of the will of the people will be assured in the state of Jammu and Kashmir."

The area in conflict is the princely state of Kashmir and its satellite province of Jammu, more properly identified as the State of Jammu and Kashmir, but commonly referred to as Kashmir.

Hindu-ruled Kashmir, which has a Moslem majority, joined the Indian union last October.

The so-called Azad Kashmir government demanded that Kashmir join Pakistan instead of India. India sent troops into the state and charged that Pakistan troops also entered and joined the fight.

The 33-year-old attorney, a graduate of National University himself, began practicing law here in 1939, and has lectured at the school since before World II. In 1941 he entered the Army cavalry as a first lieutenant, leaving in 1946 as a lieutenant colonel.

Defection Denied

Vienna, Austria, Aug. 14 (AP).—Both Hungary and Austria denied today a report in the British-sponsored Weltpresse of Vienna that a company of Hungarian frontier police had fled to the British zone of Austria Wednesday.

Scotland Solving Flood Problems

London, Aug. 14 (AP).—Army engineers helped restore normal traffic today in the flood-ravaged Scottish border lands.

Sappers of the Scottish command readied Bailey bridges in the East Lothian and Berwickshire areas where eight important spans were swept away by swirling floods that followed Thursday night's rains, said to be the worst in 70 years.

Harvest hopes arose elsewhere in England as sunshine broke across the isles in the early afternoon. Prayers for continued good weather will be said in churches and chapels throughout England and Scotland.

Rivers in the English-Scottish border country returned to normal after rampaging through many miles of lowland, drowning hundreds of head of livestock and washing thousands of tons of stacked food, grains and fodder into the North Sea.

Cut Rates Show Narcotics 'Boom'

By the United Press

Bargain prices on illicit narcotics indicate a "noticeable postwar upturn" in drug traffic, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said last night.

Tentative reports from Snyder's Narcotics and Customs Bureaus placed the year's narcotics seizures at 6755 ounces. In fiscal 1947 seizures totaled 6091 ounces.

"Narcotic drugs are still considered to be scarce," Snyder said, "but price decreases in certain areas indicate a noticeable postwar upturn in the underworld trade."

He added, however, that the rise was "far less" than expected. He said his agents had done "splendid work" in suppressing the traffic.

Narcotics and Customs Bureaus reported seizures of Turkish heroin, Italian morphine, Peruvian cocaine, Lebanon hashish, opium from India and Iran, African "dagga" and Tunisian "takouri."

The bureaus also confiscated about 40,000 ounces of marihuana, nearly twice the previous year's take. They also seized 17,015 marihuana cigarettes, 8000 more than were seized in 1947. Much of the marihuana was from Mexico.

The first seizure of smuggled narcotics ever made on a transatlantic airliner was reported by customs officials. Nine and one half pounds of uncut heroin were seized on a French plane in New York.

License Report

Complaints Filed Against Loan Firms

Complaints about the operations of District money-lending establishments have been rapidly increasing, License Supt. C. T. Nottingham disclosed yesterday in his annual report to the District Commissioners.

A total of 22 such firms were licensed in the year ending June 30, 1948, and the volume of complaints about operations of some of these has increased the workload of the department, Nottingham said. The license of one company was suspended for a brief period recently because of failure to keep proper records.

A total of 48,149 licenses were issued at charges of $871,264, an increase of $57,783 over the previous year, the report noted.

Seals Yield 70,142 Skins

By the United Press

There will be 70,142 Alaskan fur sealskins on the market this year—8695 more than last year, the Government said last night.

If these were all put into coats, they could make some 9500 women happy.

The increased take of surplus bachelor seals was allowed because the Government-owned herd on the Pribiloff Islands increased 6 per cent over last year—perhaps to 3,837,171 animals.

The Fish and Wildlife Service is not too sure of its figures because, for some unexplained reason, the number of surplus bachelor seals appear to be increasing at a rate different from the total herd.

The service sent a plane over the island at 1000-foot altitude to photograph all the breeding places when the bulk of seals were ashore. When these photographs were enlarged, someone will sit down and count.

Canada gets 20 per cent of the seal take. The United States Government auctions the rest to commercial fur dealers.

Air Parcel Post Starts on Sept. 1; Rates by Zones

By The Associated Press

Domestic air parcel post begins September 1, handling sealed or unsealed packages weighing more than 8 ounces and not more than 70 pounds and more than 100 inches in length and girth combined.

Rates are by zones like surface parcel post. They start at 55 cents for the first pound and 4 cents for each added pound in zones 1 and 2, and run up to 80 cents for the first pound and 65 cents for each extra pound in zone 8. Sealed air parcel post weighing more than 8 ounces will be subject to a minimum charge of 3 cents an ounce or fraction thereof.

There is a flat rate of 80 cents a pound for certain long hauls. A 10-pound minimum charge will be made for packages weighing less, but exceeding 84 inches in length and girth combined.

Maritime Union Row Continues On West Coast

A White House fact-finding board reported yesterday that the prospects of settling a West Coast maritime dispute "seem slim" indeed" but on the East Coast are "very good."

The board made its final report to President Truman under the national emergency provision of the Taft-Hartley Act.

It made no recommendations, but merely described the situation. The dispute over methods of hiring is still the bigger barrier to a general agreement, it said. Under the law, inquiry boards must make up their final reports 60 days after the issuance of an injunction.

The Justice Department blocked an all-coast strike of seamen and dock workers by getting court orders on June 14 at New York, Cleveland and San Francisco.

Comdr. DeLany Among Missing In Seaplane Loss

Lieut. Comdr. Russell G. DeLany, 30, former commanding officer of the Plastics Division of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., was a passenger on the Navy weather reconnaissance plane which crashed on Rota Island in the Pacific Thursday, the Navy Department disclosed yesterday.

Commander DeLany, whose home address was given as Kansas City, Mo., was a leading figure in the development of the improved plastic artificial hand at the laboratory.

The plane, a PB4Y Privateer, carried 12 persons when it took off from the Naval Air Station at Agana, Guam, the Navy Department said. Its burned wreckage has been positively identified, but it was not known if search parties had reached the scene or if there were any survivors.

ECA Cuts Costs Of Shipping Relief Packages Abroad

By The Associated Press

The Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday specified how it will subsidize freight charges charges on relief packages sent to nine Marshall Plan countries and China.

The agency will pay amounts ranging from a little under 1½ cents to almost 4½ cents a pound on packages going to France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Great Britain and the Allied zones of Germany, Italy, Greece, Trieste and China.

The regulations do not cover individual parcel post packages which already have qualified for a reduction of 4 cents a pound in postal rates.

The new plan will reduce the costs to persons who send relief packages through stores or through food-packaging companies which ship a quantity of packages on a single bill of lading.

Fairfax Group to See Tuck on School Funds

A Fairfax County delegation will call on Governor Tuck Thursday to ask that emergency funds be made available immediately for school construction in the county.

Led by State Senator Andrew W. Clarke, the School Emergency Committee, together with county officials, is scheduled to meet with the Governor in his office in Richmond at 10 a. m.

The group will present a petition signed by 1400 voters asking funds be released for new schools and that a special General Assembly session be called if necessary to provide the money.

County school authorities recently estimated they need $7,500,000 to build new schools. County schools with a capacity last year of 10,000 housed 12,000 students and Supt. W. T. Woodson has estimated at least a 1000 increase this fall.

The School Emergency Committee came into being last spring after the State Literary Fund dried up, leaving Fairfax County without any source of funds for school building in 1948.

The delegation to Richmond will include G. Wallace Carper, chairman of the Board of Supervisors; Fred W. Robinson and Richard Shands, chairman and member of the school board; La Rue Van Meter, Falls Church town attorney; Hubert Gerken, chairman of the emergency committee; Mrs. G. A. Justusson, chairman, Northern Virginia Parent-Teacher Associations; Mrs. Hugh McDiaraid, president, Fairfax County P-TA; Mark Regan, Mrs. E. A. Salzman and Harold Ward of Falls Church; Albert Hussey of Tauxemont, and Omer Hirst of Annandale.

Governor Tuck has once refused requests from the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors and school board for the special General Assembly session.

Hay Fever Season Opens in District

The Washington Post

SNEEZING ZERO, NOW—Robin Dorr, The Washington Post's favorite "copy boy," examines the pollen-counter atop the Weather Bureau. So far it has counted little ragweed

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

A small, simple indicator atop the Weather Bureau Building on M st. between 24th and 25th sts. yesterday began producing sad news for hay fever sufferers, who have a nose for this type of news.

The indicator is the D. C. Medical Society's pollen counter, which before yesterday had been registering zero as far as ragweed, the chief cause of hay fever, is concerned.

With mid-August upon us, however, the counter went into its period of hay-feverish activity by registering five grains per cubic yard of air for the 24-hour period ending yesterday at 9:30 a. m.

The count is usually published through the September peak of pollination and up to the first few days of October, when cool weather cuts down the pollen in the air.

This year, the indicator here will be supplemented by one at the National Airport, which will check any differences there may be in the air across the Potomac River, though not on a daily basis. Another may also be established in nearby Maryland.

Sneezers will also have available this year the results of Nationwide pollen surveys made under the direction of the American Academy of Allergy, which has set up index figures showing where sufferers suffer most, least and in between.

The pollen index has given allergy specialists the opportunity for a quip to the effect that "if you really have it bad, you should see your doctor—or go to Alaska!" For Alaska, along with cities in the State of Washington, Mount Rainier National Park and Bermuda, rates a good, sneezeless zero.

Other locations regarded as refuges for sufferers are most of Florida, Maine, California, upper New York State and the White Mountains in New Hampshire. The District, with an index of 45, is a pretty good place to move out of at this season, as any spot with an index higher than 10 is no refuge, according to the academy.

Much worse off than District sneezers are those in the central part of the country. The highest index recorder is 190 for Cold Water, Mich. Detroit is high, with 83; Kansas City is estimated at 109 and Dallas is recorded at 120.

The index in each case is made up of three factors—the pollen count taken on individual days, the number of days of high intensity and the length of the season.

The little gadget on top of the Weather Bureau is nothing more complicated than a glass slide lightly coated with petrolatum, held by struts in a horizontal position between two horizontal circular steel plates. The whole instrument is supported by a 30-inch standard.

Slides are exposed for 24 hours, and the number of pollen grains on a unit area of the slide are counted under the microscope. The number of grains of ragweed pollen deposited on 3.6 square centimeters of the slide is equivalent to the average number of grains per cubic yard of air.

The average untreated hay fever case, Dr. Kallin said, has trouble when there are more than 20 grains of pollen per cubic yard of air.

District Anti-Ragweed Spray Success Limited

District Trees and Parking Division employes have sprayed more than 600 acres of ragweed area since spring, Supt. John W. Batson announced yesterday.

But, says Batson, better success against the hay-fever producing plant cannot be obtained until Congress gives the local government power to kill ragweed on privately owned land at the owner's expense.

Additional aid to the city's sneezers is given by National Capital Parks employes, who have sprayed weed-killer over thousands of acres of parklands, including that along the Potomac River.

The Federal Diary

Red Domination Of UPWA Shown

Editor's note: The column today is reprinting extracts from a comprehensive story on how Communist domination of the CIO's United Public Workers of America is wrecking and has produced secession in that union. The article appears in the July-August edition of North American Labor, a labor magazine. It was written by Les Finnegan, its Washington editor.

Labor's persistent effort to keep Communists out of dominant positions within its ranks is like the tortoise who raced the hare. Labor, like the tortoise, is winning. But the Communists, like the hare, are raising a tremendous ruckus along the course. The noise made by Communists in labor is coolly calculated to be a blow to the heart of democracy, because its aim is to divide and ruin.

This month one of the most notable retaliations against Communist-dominated union politics is being made with the granting of charters by a separate CIO union to seceding members of the Communist-led United Public workers of America CIO.

Ten thousand Federal workers are leaving the UPW, and charters are being granted by the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers CIO, with which they are affiliating. The move has the tacit approval of CIO President Philip Murray. It is an action which follows a course already well-established by anti-Communist groups who have decided to remain loyally within the CIO after finding the battle against Communist Party control in their own union to be futile.

Won Hollow Victory

Last month the Communists in the UPW won a complete victory. That victory now has become a guarantee that their power and influence among millions of United States Government workers is near an end.

The secession of these 10,000 Federal workers is the end of a sad story, and the beginning of a happy one. It is sad because, despite a militant and loyal struggle, the anti-Communists in President Abram Flaxer's UPW were unable to duplicate the success of their brothers and sisters in the United Auto Workers, the Newspaper Guild, and similar unions in tossing out Communist leadership.

It is happy because it is proof that within the ranks of labor there is still a vast majority of union men and women willing to aid in the fight against Stalinist intrusion.

It's 'Rule-or-Ruin'

The story of the UPW is a nearly perfect case history of the Communist "rule-or-ruin" philosophy in American trade unionism. It is a typically consistent history of: (1) Destruction of internal democracy; (2) Subscription to the vicissitudes of the Communist Party line; (3) Sponsorship of and contributions to Stalinist-front organizations; (4) Loss of membership because the union leaders were more interested in political haymaking than in strengthening the union; (5) Suppression of minority groups through suspensions and explusions; (6) Defiance of national CIO policy; and (7) Placement of well-known fellow travelers on the union payroll, etc.

The UPW was formed in March, 1946, out of a merger of the United Federal Workers-CIO and the State, County and Municipal Workers-CIO. The SCMWA's president, Abram Flaxer, long known as a Communist fellow traveler, became the first (and to date, the only) president of the UPW.

At the time of merger the new union claimed 75,000 members. In April of 1947 the figure had dropped to 55,000. At its convention in May, this year, in Atlantic City the total was given as 86,000. However, it was admitted that of the 86,000 only 23,000 were Federal employes.

Confession of Failure

The 23,000 figure was an object confession of failure in view of the hundreds of thousands of eligible Government employes. But not for a moment either before or after the convention did the leadership ever concede that this failure was due to the "Red" reputation that has accrued to the union for such actions as favoring Russian over American foreign policy. Earlier this year it became known that the UPW barely escaped being named on the Attorney General's list of "totalitarian, Fascist, Communist and subversive" organizations. (When the list appeared no unions were mentioned.)

There was disgust and rebellion over the union's party-line policies even before the merger. Many anti-Communists resigned; many others were persuaded to stay in when they were shown the gradually successful fights to overthrow Stalinism in other unions. But the rebellion crystallized into organizational form only after the 1946 convention, when the now-notorious foreign policy resolution was approved. The resolution caused a sensation and throughout the country in the daily press and among anti-Communist UPW members it was denounced as a pro-Soviet expression straight out of the Communist Daily Worker. The resolution was rammed through the convention and thus the fellow travelers presumed to commit thousands of employes of the State Department, the War Department and other Government agencies to a pro-Soviet and anti-American position!

Rank-and-File Revolt

After this convention, the Build-The-Union Committee was formed. If ever there was a genuine rank-and-file revolt, it was here. The anti-Communists had no important names to lead them, no minority on the executive board around which they could rally. Their leaders came from their own ranks and these along with others worked late into the night turning the cranks on mimeograph machines and writing letters to others cities trying to contact other UPW members of similar conviction.

From the very outset the "BUC" as it was called, was handicapped. The Flaxer officialdom rejected appeals and resolutions asking for a directory of local unions in good standing, although most other unions issue such a directory or list.

Meanwhile Flaxer began to show the iron hand behind the "rule-or-ruin" philosophy which culminated in the expulsion of four locals.

Flaxer's puppy-like devotion to the Communist Party line has been well-documented by unionists and before Congressional committees. Forty-four years old, he was born in Lithuania and is a graduate of the City College of New York. On February 2, 1948, after evading a U. S. Marshal's subpena for a week, he appeared before a special subcommittee of the House Labor Committee and flatly refused to declare whether he was or ever had been a member of the Communst Party. He also refused to answer whether he had ever been a member of or had lent his name to a dozen or more Communist front organizations. There was testimony, however, that on January 30, 1941, Louis G. Hines, at that time secretary of the Pennsylvania State Department of Labor and Industry, had declared that Flaxer "has been singled out on a number of occasions as one of the leading members of the Communist Party in America."

Flaxer Gains Control

By the time of the second biennial convention of the UPW last May, Flaxer had control of the UPW sewed up. First the figure of 23,000 Federal employes in the UPW became more ridiculous than ever when it was found that about 15,000 of these are employed in the Panama Canal Zone and many are Panamanian citizens. Thus, out of the several hundreds of thousands of United States Government workers employed in the United States the UPW had no more than 8000 left! There could be no better example of Communist "success' in an American trade union!

There was evidence that the national CIO had less and less liking for the odor of Flaxer's administration. Outsiders were astonished when they noticed that there was not a single speaker from the national CIO; not even a message of greetings from the national CIO.

The payoff came quickly. Flaxer had invited two speakers. One was Paul Robeson, the singer an ubiquitous Communist Party stooge. The second was President Albert J. Fitzgerald, of the United Electrical Workers. Fitzgerald, whose administration in UE resembles Flaxer's more than it differs, is chairman of the labor division of the Wallace-for-President Committee. He has withdrawn his union from CIO-PAC.

Fitzgerald denounced CIO President Philip Murray and the rest of the CIO leadership for its official stand against the Wallace Party. He said that Murray was opposing the best interests of the CIO rank-and-file and launched into a campaign speech for Wallace. He was cheered wildly.

ECA Move Killed

The essence of the Flaxer-controlled convention's sentiment came when BUC delegates sought to include an indorsement of the European Recovery Program. This, of course, would have been fully in accord with national CIO policy. But the move was smothered.

Uprisings have occurred in New York, Milwaukee, Atlanta and other cities. The New York BUC condemned the "NKVD tactics" of the executive board in suspending Local 191's leadership, and denounced the New York State leadership of the UPW for indorsing Wallace's candidacy in violation of national CIO policy. The anti-Stalinist UPW group swung a punch straight from the floor when it charged:

"The callous disregard of our leadership for the welfare of our members has once again been demonstrated by this action which places the interests of the Communist Party above that of the American labor movement."

That sentence, in fact, is probably the most accurate characterization that could be made of the UPW's leadership. The build-the-union committee and others in the UPW feel that they have been betrayed too many times into playing the Communist game. "There comes a breaking point," said one BUC leader. "You can't keep butting your head against a stone wall forever. The people in UE and in Mine, Mill & Smelter found that out. We're turning it over to Comrade Flaxer knowing that in a little while he'll have nothing left in his hands but a hollow shell."

Alexandria Realty Taxes Held Too Low

Councilman-elect Beverley Contends Assessments Below Actual Valuation

Alexandria's listed real property base is less than one third of its actual valuation City Councilman-Elect Marshall J. Beverley declared last night.

Beverley was one of three city officials participating in the Jaycee Radio Forum, sponsored by the Alexandria Junior Chamber of Commerce over WPIK. Others on the panel were C. Aubrey Callahan, commissioner of revenue, and Col. Everett A. Hellmuth, chairman of the council's finance committee.

Attorney William F. Raugust acted as moderator of the discussion on Alexandria's tax assessing and collecting machinery.

The city's real property base could be "conservatively" placed at 160 million dollars rather than the $53,183,794 carried on its books, Beverley said. He based this figure on a study of more than 1550 transactions made in 1946, he said.

The total assessed value of the property involved in these sales, he said, was $5,115,831, while the sales prices aggregated more than $15,835,000. In addition, he said only 251 adjustment increases were made last year, compared with 1486 in 1946.

Commissioner of Revenue Callahan admitted the tax basis is too low, but said no general reassessment is planned at present. He mentioned that this year's tax bills will be mailed before the November 15 deadline.

Beverley also pointed out that the city is now dangerously near its authorized borrowing limit, a situation he would strive to correct when he goes on the council September 1. Only a $96,000 margin now is left, he said.

Green Backing Francis Clair In Board Race

John Locke Green, Arlington County treasurer, yesterday announced his support of Francis J. Clair for the Arlington County Board in November elections.

Clair, a Republican, is running as an independent because the Republican Party put up no candidate.

Green, the only Republican holding a county office in Arlington, accused County Party Chairman Edgar W. Pumphrey of acting in bad faith on the question of holding a primary to select a party candidate.

Clair, a freelance writer and former national research director of the Republican Party, filed last June for the primary he said Pumphrey had called for August 3. Pumphrey, however, declared the committee had never decided to hold a primary.

Green yesterday charged Pumphrey had announced in the press and at public meetings a primary would be held.

Green said he was "one Republican" who will not support Lee Potter, vice chairman of the county GOP committee, whose candidacy as an independent has been indorsed by the Citizens Committee for School Improvement.

Papal Benediction Given Students of Catholic Action

The Washington session of the summer school of Catholic Action at Catholic University ended yesterday, with papal benediction given the 1000 attending students by the Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J., of St. Louis, director of the session.

Thirty courses were offered during the six-day session. Included were courses on communism and democracy, lay apostleship, missionary opportunities and Sodality work.

The staff which conducted sessions here will begin instruction Monday at Fordham University. The two schools are among eight in various cities scheduled to receive the courses.

Woman's Death Held Suicide

Dr. W. C. Welburn, Arlington County coroner, yesterday certified as suicide the death by hanging Friday of Mrs. M. Ruth Dabbs, 1017 S. Glebe rd., Arlington.

According to police, Mrs. Dabbs, a 54-year-old clerk for the Department of Agriculture, hanged herself by a cord tied to the grillwork of a ventilator in her home. She was reported to have been in poor health.

Water Heater Sails 450 Feet After Blasting Through Roof

Things were popping in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Juhl at 804 Jackson ave., Takoma Park, Md., yesterday.

It wasn't trivial. A 50-gallon electric water heater exploded with a roar in the basement of the prefabricated bungalow occupied by the Juhl family at 6:10 a. m., smashed a passageway through the house and sailed about 1000 feet in the air, landing 450 feet from the house.

"It raised us two feet in our beds," said members of the family.

The Juhls who have two children, Eugene, 11, and Irving, 7, offered a quick prayer of thanks that yesterday had been a Saturday, a work holiday.

On a weekday at that hour, Juhl, an auditor with the War Assets Administration, would have been breakfasting in the kitchen.

The water heater turned jet missile when it took off from its basement mooring and cleaved a hole through the kitchen floor, shattered the breakfast table and continued on through the roof of the bungalow. Fortunately, the family was sleeping on the other side of the house and none was hurt.

After smashing its way from basement to roof, the water tank slashed through the air some 450 feet. It landed on a gravel driveway, gouged a hole eight inches deep, and then rebounded 30 feet into the back yard of a home at 753 Flower ave.

E. B. Fetty, Takoma Park's electrical inspector, after a preliminary investigation said apparently the thermostat system, which ordinarily would turn off the heater when the water reached a heat of 120 degrees, had failed to operate. He noted also that the tank had no safety valve.

The blast left the Juhl home a shambles. Furniture and dishes were smashed. The door was ripped off the refrigerator.

Woman Seriously Hurt Is in Hospital; 3 Other Accidents Reported in Area

An 18-month-old child and four adults were injured when a bread truck and an automobile collided at 9:45 a. m. yesterday at 3d and F sts. sw.

John E. Leach, 35, of 1004 K st. ne., was driving the auto south on 3d st., and Charles B. Campbell, 43, of 100 Jefferson st. nw., was operating the truck west on F st., police reported.

Most seriously injured was Leach's wife, Catherine, 35. She is in serious condition at Emergency Hospital with a fractured right shoulder and injuries to the head, hip and chest.

Passenger Released

Mrs. Myrtle McDonald, 51, of Sunbury, Pa., a passenger in the Leach car, was also taken to Emergency. She was released after treatment for a fractured ankle.

George B. Hawkins, 15, of 711 2nd st. nw, who was riding in Campbell's truck, was released from Emergency after treatment for a fractured elbow and cuts to the ear.

Leach's 18-month-old son, Charles, was treated at Providence Hospital for face cuts. Campbell was also taken to Providence and treated for minor injuries.

Police charged both drivers, Leach with failing to yield the right of way and Campbell with failing to give full time and attention to driving.

A father and his 7-year-old son about 8 o'clock last night were seriously injured when struck by a hit-run automobile while walking across Key Bridge. Phillip James, sr., 52, 2020 N. 20th st., Arlington, and his son, Phillip, jr., were both admitted to Emergency Hospital. The child suffered a skull fracture and the father a possible skull fracture.

A McLean (Va.) man was apprehended 1½ hours afterward by Motorcycle Police Pvt. Horace Carmichael after witnesses had supplied the tag number of the striking vehicle.

Hurt in Silver Spring

Reginald W. Davis, 39, of Fairland, Md., an employe of the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board beer warehouse, was struck down at 11:48 p. m. Friday, in front of the Montgomery Hills Shopping Center in the 9100 block of Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md.

Suburban Hospital in Bethesda reported Davis, a brother of County Policeman Calvin Davis, suffered injuries to his head, back and leg and was in serious condition.

Police said the car that struck Davis was operated by Robert Lee Wilson, 22, an apprentice bricklayer, of 1010 Massachusetts ave. nw. Wilson was charged with reckless driving and released in $500 bond pending a later court appearance.

Bernard O. Bice, 32, of 1223 S. 28th st., Arlington, suffered cuts and bruises to his head and arms about 9:45 p. m. Friday when he was struck by a car on Route 1, 3 miles south of Alexandria on Snake Hill. He was reported in good condition yesterday at Alexandria Hospital.

Police identified the driver as Robert M. Hawkins of Walkertown, N. C.

56 Tuberculosis Beds Available At Gallinger

New Cases Shown In Recent X-Ray Chest Survey; Personnel Needed

Gallinger Hospital yesterday completed opening all beds set aside for tubercular patients, adding 56 new beds for persons found suffering from the disease during the mass chest X-ray survey.

An additional 50 beds are still unavailable at the Glenn Dale Sanatorium because of lack of personnel to man them. Dr. Sol Katz, head of the Gallinger tuberculosis section, said additional nurses and rehabilitation experts were needed there, too.

Almost 1000 beds are now available in the Washington area for treatment of tuberculosis victims. These include 230 at Gallinger, 617 at Glenn Dale and 135 at Freedmen's Hospital.

Last month when the results of the chest survey were announced, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, estimated that 100 additional beds were needed immediately for urgent cases. At that time, the number of available beds was about the same except for the 56 opened since then at Gallinger.

Dr. Ruhland suggested then that private hospitals might accept tuberculosis cases of "certain types," but thus far no such arrangements have been made.

The Upshur Street Hospital, which handles mainly convalescent cases, is presently operating about 95 beds, an increase of 25 over three months ago. An additional 30 beds, however, are still closed for lack of personnel.

At Gallinger, Dr. Katz said streptomycin used in treatments is running short but additional supplies are on order.

The hospital announced yesterday the addition of Mrs. George C. Nield as an occupational therapist in the tuberculosis service. She will supervise the woodworking, weaving and servicing activities in the occupational therapy shop.

Loses Payroll

Junk Dealer Beaten Up; $5000 Taken

A thug severely pummelled a junk dealer who was about to enter his office at 1125 1st st. nw. early yesterday, then escaped with the proprietor's payroll, $5000 in cash and checks.

The victim, Aaron C. Selis, proprietor of the Federal Junk Co., was treated at Sibley Hospital for three fractured ribs and face injuries.

Within 10 minutes of the robbery at 6:30 a. m., police located the red truck in which the robber made his escape, then abandoned at 2d and K sts. ne.

Selis told police he was attacked from behind and beaten as he was opening the door of his store. The assailant snatched from his hand a paper bag containing the payroll, $1000 in cash, $4000 in checks, indorsed and payable to the company, Selis said.

Selis described the attacker as a dark-complexioned Negro about 30 to 35 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 160 to 165 pounds and wearing a red T-shirt and Army fatigue trousers.

Selis was attacked shortly after his wife drove away after leaving him at his store. The getaway truck was stolen from a garage at 1220 I st. ne., and was owned by the Burgess Electrical Co. of 910 I st. ne., police said.

Girl, 3, Dies Of Burns in Farm Blaze

A 3-year-old Herndon, Va., girl died Friday night at Children's Hospital here from burns suffered the day before in a Fairfax County farm fire.

The victim was Kay Sowers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Sowers, Route 1, Herndon. The cause of the fire is still undetermined.

Mrs. J. H. Launders, who rents Sowers the farm where they reside, said that Kay had been dressed to go on a short trip and was told by her mother to play on the porch. Shortly afterward, the girl's screams were heard and she was seen running with her clothes afire from the dairy house to the barn, Mrs. Launders related.

Sowers and three farm helpers were milking the cows and apparently did not hear the screams immediately because of the noise of the milking machinery. But when they finally heard her, Sowers rolled the girl in hay debris on the barn floor, beating out the flames with his hands, Mrs. Launders said.

Besides the parents, the child is survived by a brother, Wayne, 9, and a sister, Rebecca, 8

Raedy Returns Borrowed Files To West's Office

Judge Ellen K. Raedy on Thursday returned the drunken driving files she borrowed August 5 from the Corporation Counsel's Office, it was disclosed yesterday.

She asked for and received the files on two cases shortly after she charged that the Corporation Counsel's office was guilty of favoritism in disposing of drunken-driving cases. A few days thereafter, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West issued an order forbidding the removal of files from the office. West wrote Judge Raedy a note asking her to prove the favoritism charge in Municipal Court and he says he has received no reply.

The cases she received involved Thomas L. Dabney, 38, of 6 Woodhaven blvd., Bethesda, Md., whose drunken-driving charge was nolle prossed, and Allen M. Boettcher, 43, of 1628 Columbia rd. nw, who pleaded guilty before Judge Raedy and was fined $30 for drunken-driving.

Plane Crash Tip Leads Police on Fruitless Trek

A report of a plane crash in the Potomac River between Key and Chain Bridges sent police and firemen out yesterday in a vain search of the area.

Police said the report originated with an astronomy student at Georgetown University observatory who thought he saw a plane plummet out of sight at tree level.

More than a score of police cars and motorcycles and Fire Department vehicles were dispatched to the area, with a bevy of newspaper reporters and photographers in their wake.

3 Agencies Praise Jail Traffic Class

Success of the District Jail's traffic school for serious traffic offenders was acclaimed yesterday in a report by three District government agencies participating in the instruction program.

Only three of the 210 students at the unique educational institution have been returned to the jail for failure to comply with traffic regulations upon release.

The course is conducted by the police, jail and the Department of Vehicles and Motor Traffic. Classes are held three times a week and result in issuance of certificates which are considered in the restoration of driver's permits.

It's Still 'No Parking'

Vandals have defaced some 60 no-parking signs between the Peace Monument and Sunnybrook on the narrow Defense Highway to Annapolis, H. J. Nebel, Bladensburg police chief, said yesterday.

Nebel said defacement of the signs did not remove the ban on motorists parking on the highway, which is the heavily traveled route to Severn River and Chesapeake Bay beaches.

He asked that any person having knowledge of the person or persons defacing the signs telephone him at Union 1661. Penalty for wilfully destroying or damaging public property is imprisonment up to 20 years, or a maximum fine of $1000, or both, Nebel said.

The black-on-yellow signs read: 'No Parking, 8 a. m. to 9 a. m., 4 p. m. to 7 p. m. All Day Saturdays, Sundays, Holidays" The words "All Day" have been painted out.

Woman's Purse Snatched

Mary Elizabeth Nelson of 1523 Park rd. nw., reported to police yesterday that two youths grabbed and escaped with her pocketbook, containing $35, glasses and personal papers.

Her purse was grabbed, she said, while she was walking near her home.

She described the purse-snatchers as two Negro boys, about 16. One was about 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds and dressed in white shirt and dark trousers, and the other about 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing about 145 pounds and wearing white shirt and khaki trousers.

Doughnuts in News (boys)

It's dollars to doughnuts there'll be no more complaints from the Argyle Pharmacy, 17th st. and Park rd. nw., to police.

For several weeks the Colonial Baking Co. has been delivering a daily order of doughnuts to the pharmacy early in the morning. The doughnuts would be left in front of the door. And, regularly, the doughnuts would disappear.

Yesterday Tenth Precinct Police Pvt. Charles A. Smith stationed himself near the entrance to the drug store. Soon a newsboy came by and casually helped himself to a handful of doughnuts. A second newsboy came by. He liked doughnuts, too. Two more newsboys came by and the supply of doughnuts dwindled further.

Smith managed to get all four of the boys. He turned them over to their parents pending possible Juvenile Court action.

Two 'Tomboys' of Girlhood, a Century Ago, Will Observe Birthdays in Area This Month

MRS. FRANCES R. KELEHER, 102, CAN'T GET USED TO WASHINGTON WEATHER
Her parents didn't think she would grow up—"too delicate," they said

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Two Greater Washington women, who were "tomboys" in girlhood, will celebrate birthdays past the century mark this month.

They are Mrs. Flora B. Hiett of 6732 N. 25th st., Falls Church, who will be 104 years old Tuesday, and Mrs. Frances R. Keleher, who lives at Kendall House Sanatorium, 1323 Ogden st. nw., and will be 102 years old August 30.

James K. Polk was elected President the year Mrs. Hiett was born, 1844, and a bill for annexation of Texas was defeated in the Senate. Emerson's "Essays, Second Series," and Smith's "The Drunkard" appeared; Morse sent out his first message by telegraph, and a boundary dispute in the Northwest with Great Britain was causing fight talk.

Two years later, when Mrs. Keleher was born, the war with Mexico began, Abe Lincoln was elected to Congress with a plurality of 2000 votes, the Oregon territory was acquired and Iowa admitted to the Union. Elias Howe patented the sewing machine, and Poe's "Cask of Amontillado" and Hawthorne's "Mosses From an Old Manse" were published.

The two women, whose husbands were on opposite sides during the Civil War, have never met, but last year they exchanged greetings.

Both Mrs. Keleher and Mrs. Hiett have active minds and recall their girlhood days with relish.

Mrs. Keleher said, "I was the youngest of 10 children—the only one left. My parents didn't think I would grow up. I was delicate and didn't like to eat, but I was a born athlete and could do things no boy in town could, and they knew it, too."

She was born near Albany, N. Y., at "old Kinderhook," Martin Van Buren's home town, and remembers him riding through town—"a very fine looking old man."

Mrs. Hiett, born on her father's farm near Winchester, Va., learned to ride a horse as soon as she was old enough to hang on, and still would like to go for a gallop. She remembers the war around Winchester very clearly and how she and her brothers, as children, watched the Blue and the Gray.

An "unreconstructed rebel," she still does not understand why the war was not compromised. "The Government could have bought the Negroes and their old masters hired them," she says.

In 1872 she was married to Capt. Joseph P. Hiett of the twelfth Virginia Cavalry, who had two horses shot from under him during the war and was "within 20 feet of Lee when he surrendered."

The Hietts settled at Falls Church in 1886, where Captain Hiett died 41 years ago.

Mrs. Hiett's vision has faded away. Her hearing is poor and she spends much of her time in her rocking chair, though she still makes her own bed.

Mrs. Keleher has a little difficulty in hearing and she believes her eyes are beginning to weaken a little. An inveterate reader, vision is especially precious to her.

In addition to following the newspapers, she will sit up half the night with a book—"anything good, but no trash." She doesn't care much for contemporary novels, for the most part, though: "too vulgar, to put it plainly. I think to put that stuff in books is a crime."

Mrs. Keleher wanted to attend college and be a school teacher. She didn't get to college because she married her school teacher, who had waited for her to grow up after his return from the Civil War.

During the war her husband, Robert Proseus, had contracted a tubercular ailment. After they had been married about three years he became an invalid. They had moved to Illinois, and to support them both she became a school teacher, ironic fulfillment of her wish.

From Illinois she went to Philadelphia where she worked for a publishing house for a time, and there met Preston Howell Keleher, who became her second husband, and who died many years ago.

In 1885 she came to Washington and worked for the old Pension Office for 33 years before retiring because of "old age." Despite her long residence in Washington, she doesn't like the climate. "I'll never get used to it," she says.

Keenly interested in current affairs, she has "great faith in Dewey," thinks Truman "a good man," and wonders "how long it will be before we have a woman President?

"I won't see it," Mrs. Keleher says, "but you will."

Rock Creek Cemetery

One of the Many Private Tombs

Your cemetery plot is a very personal thing. It is a bit of your home and your heart that you cherish and want to keep as a retreat, different from all others in the cemetery.

Rock Creek Cemetery appreciates this desire for privacy, and has scrupulously adhered to a policy protecting it. At the same time, they realize the sense of security derived from being part of a closely knit group. The policy of the cemetery, maintained by the continuing Board of Trustees, takes both these factors into consideration. Kindly suggestions are offered as to type of monument you might care to erect and shrubbery that will conform to the overall cemetery landscaping. Care of your lot or grave is guaranteed for perpetuity under the provisions of a trust fund. And you are offered additional care for a nominal sum.

In the same spirit of kindliness, Rock Creek Cemetery suggests that, if you have not yet acquired a cemetery lot, you consider the purchase of one now, while you are free from emotional strain. Visit this sanctuary, located so conveniently within the city. There are still many attractive sites available, and the cost is moderate. Prices may be budgeted if you so desire.

N. J. Cross Burning Is Blamed on Klan

Ringwood, N. J., Aug. 14 (AP).—Officials of the Nature Friends Camp, where a cross was burned last night atop a flagpole, said today, "Klan elements" dislike the fact that "we do not practice discrimination."

The fiery cross was found after three shots were fired to attract attention.

Police, who were summoned to the 200-acre camp for mixed races, said no trace of the lighters of the cross had been found.

Police Chief Henry Roach said he knew of no Ku Klux Klan activities in the area for many years. He said there were "some" a number of years ago.

Police were investigating a note scribbled on a piece of cardboard, found at the base of the flagpole, which read, "This is the U. S. A., not Russia. If there is any trouble, you Communist ——— get it first."

Camp officials said their organization is not political.

The committee of the camp, which is in a wooded area near the New York State line, said in a formal statement:

"The Nature Friends was organized in the United States in 1910. The camp was founded 28 years ago. Membership in the organization and its camp is open to people of all races, creeds, color and partisan affiliation."

Graham Named

Trade Board Chest Effort Encouraging

Support of the Community Chest Federation campaign in October by members of the Washington Board of Trade was termed "encouraging" yesterday.

Graham

Leon Chatelain, jr., Board of Trade president and newly appointed vice chairman of the Chest's general campaign, said he was "very much heartened" by the offers of cooperation tendered to Col. Chauncey G. Parker, general chairman, during the last 48 hours."

Appointment of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John S. Graham as chairman of Treasury Department volunteer solicitors for the $4,509,170 campaign also was announced yesterday.

Graham, a former commander in the Navy and Winston-Salem, N. C., attorney, was named to the fund-raising post by Assistant Secretary of the Interior C. Girard Davidson, campaign Government unit chairman.

Chatelain said the Board of Trade directors have designated the first general membership meeting on September 30 as the opening rally for the campaign business units.

5 Prominent Californians Die in Crash

Tijuana, Mexico, Aug. 14 (AP).—Five prominent Los Angeles residents, including the former Elaine Hammerstein of the stage and screen, her husband and a millionaire bachelor, perished in a head-on automobile collision last night on the Tijuana-Ensenada highway.

Five other persons, all Mexicans, were injured in the accident, which occurred on a curve 12 miles south of Tijuana.

The dead, identified by relatives of the victims, were in addition to Miss Hammerstein:

James Walker Kays, 60, Miss Hammerstein's husband and former national financial director of the California Democratic Party, and at one time Los Angeles police commissioner; Richard Garvey, about 60, wealthy bachelor; Mrs. Jane Shafer Richards, 50, and Mrs. Gladys Goldie Hall, 45.

Kays, his wife and the other two women were killed instantly. Garvey died a few hours later in a Tijuana hospital.

Mexican highway patrolmen said the heavy, expensive sedan driven by Kays swung around the curve at high speed and crashed into a south-bound car driven by Angel Saad Andres of Ensenada. Kays' car then careened off the highway and rolled down a steep embankment.

Bed-Sharing Trouble Cited in Wife's Suit

Elizabeth, N. J., Aug. 14 (AP).—The old adage that "two's company, three's a crowd"—especially in bed—popped up in a Chancery Court petition yesterday.

Mrs. Lorraine K. Kopp charged that she had discovered her husband, Karl, making love to a woman with whom they shared their bed during the housing shortage in California.

The incident, she charged, took place not too long after their marriage in 1944. The housing shortage forced them to share their sleeping room with a "young lady."

"My plan," she explained, "was that the young lady should occupy a cot in the bedroom while the defendant and I slept in the bed."

This did not suit her husband, she charged. His idea, she continued, was that "the three of us could share the bed—the defendant sleeping at one end and the young lady at the other end and myself in the center."

Mrs. Kopp explained that she objected but agreed at her husband's insistence in order "to keep harmony."

Then, she said, she was "aroused from deep sleep" one night, only to find herself on the edge of the bed while her husband made love to the young woman.

The petition continued that when they returned to west New York in 1946 she eventually ordered Kopp from the house after he made advances to a friend of hers in the living room of their home.

The New Jersey State Employment Service today issued an urgent call for all unemployed cowpunchers from Hackensack to Cape May. And they don't want the drugstore variety.

The service explained it was complying with a request for help from employment services in Oklahoma.

Tidal Wave Alert System Is Devised

By the United Press

The Government disclosed last night that it has devised a system for warning Pacific areas against approaching destruction in the form of giant tidal waves caused by undersea earthquakes.

Such waves, dubbed tsunamis, have caused untold damage and killed many thousands of persons in the long history of man's struggle against the sea. A tsunami killed 173 persons and destroyed 25 million dollars worth of property at Hilo, Hawaii, in April, 1946.

Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer said the Coast and Geodetic Survey had perfected what it calls "a seismic sea wave warning system."

It will depend on information from seismographs—sensitive instruments which detect the occurrence and locations of earthquakes—and a lookout service. A special new device has been developed for spotting tsunamis at sea where they often escape notice.

The Coast and Geodetic Survey already is operating seismographs at Tucson, Ariz., and at Honolulu. Similar facilities soon will be set up at Fairbanks, Alaska, Sawyer said. Watchers, including lighthouse keepers, harbor masters and other waterfront observers, will report by special Navy radio communications to Honolulu headquarters.

The survey has developed a chart for determining arrival times on populated coasts of Tsunamis caused by distant seaquakes.

A seismic sea wave detector has been developed which sounds an alarm when it encounters waves that behave in a characteristic tsunami fashion.

Officials said the giant waves travel at fast as 600 miles an hour. In open water they are not high—perhaps four feet—but they stretch for as much as 100 miles from crest to crest. On approaching a coastline they rise to damaging proportions in shallow water.

'Butterfly' Scores at Watergate

By Paul Hume

"Madame Butterfly" as presented last night at the Watergate by the Lyric Opera Association was the most perfectly staged of the six operas they have given here.

New stage sets and beautiful costumes made a constant series of colorful pictures, enhanced by lightning and all the factors needed for really correct mise-en-scene. Musically the score came off with varying degrees of success.

Nicholas Rescigno showed himself one of the finest opera conductors in the country in his control of the fluent phrases Puccini gave both orchestra and singers. It is a tricky business to mold the long lines into a moving entity, but Rescigno has such problems under masterly technique. His sense of climax propelled the focal second act with a keen sense of proportion so that the various sections were made to flow into each other.

Conley Shines

Eugene Conley as Lieutanant Pinkerton contributed the finest singing of the evening, making one regret anew that the tenor role is so short. His voice and stage business are in the best manner. We hope to hear him soon again and often.

Among the ladies Lydia Edwards ranked first in the beautiful conception of Suzuki, Butterfly's maid. Her deportment and her singing were all that one could ask.

Of course, the central figure of the tragedy is Butterfly. Eva DeLuca made much of the dramatic moments of the part. Her acting was by turns properly childish and mature, as the weight of the part developed. However, there were moments in Acts 1 and 2 when her conduct was more coy than shy, more skittish than timid. Butterfly is a great part and every soprano with sufficient voice seems to want to sing it.

Voice Lacks Fullness

DeLuca's voice is not round enough to carry the big moments in the opera. Thus the lines following the announcement, "Abraham Lincoln" in Act 2, when she sighted Pinkerton's ship, were too thin and strident. And no singer can afford to sing underneath the proper pitch. It is a matter of production, not range.

John Rossi, Ralph Telasko and Victor Tatozzi gave good service in the smaller parts of the opera. Angelo Pilotto's voice is a bit rusty for Sharpless, and his conduct was too routine. But in pictorial effect, and from the orchestra and the singers noted, it was a fine performance.

Tonight: "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," final operas of the season.

List of Arlington Voters Put on Sale at $50

You can now buy a list of Arlington County's registered voters giving name, address and precinct of each—for $50.

The Arlington County Board yesterday agreed to a county electoral board proposal that copies of the county's registration list, compiled this year to facilitate elections, be made public.

The charge of $50 a copy was set to defray expenses, after Electoral Board Secretary Bankhead T. Davies said the board had to cut 500 stencils to list the 25,000 names. It was pointed out, however, that any person may copy names himself from the registrars' lists free of charge.

In other actions, yesterday, the county board:

1. Learned from Deputy County Treasurer George Rucker that $3,556,007, or 94.8 per cent, of taxes levied on real estate and personal property in the year ended last June 30, were collected.

2. Ordered a report for its August 28 meeting from the County Public Service Department on two bad drainage complaints, one reported by citizens in Westover subdivision, and the other by Nelson T. Halmark, 2516 N. 1st rd.

3. Awarded a contract for a $13,000 fire engine with a pumping capacity of 750 gallons a minute to the Ward-LaFrance Truck Corp.

4. Heard State Parole Officer W. W. Cooper express a desire to help organize a National Guard unit in the county and instructed County Manager A. T. Lundberg to learn if Westover School gymnasium could be made available for training purposes.

World to Get Seat At Md. Farm Show

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

All roads will lead to Mrs. Nellie V. Thrasher's 175-acre farm near Jefferson, Md.—just 10 miles west of Frederick—Wednesday.

On that day, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., the farm operated by Mrs. Thrasher and her two teen-age children will be made over into a model plot. All modern methods of farming will be demonstrated by expert farmer crews.

Admission will be free. Food will be sold on the grounds; telephone and telegraph facilities will be at hand, and sanitary facilities available.

Parking grounds sufficient for 12,000 to 15,000 cars will be nearby. Traffic will be controlled by 60 Maryland State patrolmen assisted by 100 National Guardsmen.

300 to Put on Show

Five hundred men—mostly farmers now members of Maryland Conservation Districts—with more than 200 of the latest types of farm equipment, will put on the show.

Visitors will be shown how to do nearly everything the modern way that may be done on Maryland and Virginia farms. This will range from proper operation of farm woodlots—for farm lumber supply, wind protection and soil and moisture conservation—to strip-cropping, diversion trenching, gully-sodding, pond building, fertilizing and liming, modern fencing, wildlife refuges, "living fences" built of multiflora rose, etc.

All farm buildings will be demonstrated as they should be constructed for most convenient and sanitary results. Drainage of farm lots, tree surgery—in fact, everything that the Government teaches is best for profitable farming with proper maintenance of the land and buildings—will be shown.

The demonstration is attracting world-wide attention. The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization is sending a group of experts to watch the work, and to take motion pictures to be used in other countries as an example of American farming methods.

Brig. Gen. Robert A. McClure of the Civil Affairs Division of the Army will head an Army group. They also will take still and motion pictures for use in the occupied zones of Austria, Germany, Japan and Korea. Writers from Army foreign language magazines circulated in foreign areas will be on hand to report the day's operations.

The State Department also will be represented, and a story of the day will be sent over the Voice of America to all foreign lands. This will be supplemented by movies and still pictures, from which posters will be made for State Department information offices abroad. Joseph Leeming, feature editor of the Division of International Press and Publications, will head the State Department group. Already they have taken movies of the farm as it is now, with later pictures planned to show the "after" results. It will form an edition of the "Democracy in Action" series of that department.

E. H. Crickenberger, general manager of Maryland Conservation Day, has had requests for information and directions to the farm from groups from New England, and as far away as Tennessee, New York, Ohio and Indiana.

Agricultural attaches of nearly every embassy or legation in Washington have notified Crickenberger they plan to attend—several with groups including Ambassadors and Ministers.

The day's ceremonies will be started with a crash. A row of dynamite sticks will be exploded, to signal the start and also to demonstrate how to build a drainage ditch with explosives.

Then 'Flag-Raising'

Then will come a unique "flag-raising." At the signal of the exploding dynamite 13 lime spreaders will start across the steep hillside at the eastern end of the farm and move horizontally across the field that extends halfway up the Catoctin Mountain. In their wake they will leave 13 broad stripes, alternately of red and white limestone.

As they finish, 47 war veterans of Frederick County will each uncover a previously located star of crushed white limestone. As a dramatic climax, Paul J. Wiedorfer, 24, of Baltimore, Maryland's only living resident with the World War II Medal of Honor, will then uncover the forty-eighth—the Maryland star.

At the close of the day, Mrs. Thrasher's farm—roughly valued at $18,000—will be increased probably double that amount in value. Besides the work of 500 men for eight hours, each with full equipment of the latest type, a fully equipped dairy barn to meet the rigid new specifications for the Washington milkshed, valued at about $10,000, will be erected.

Domestic distribution of pictures and movies showing the day's events will be undertaken by the United States Soil Conservation District and the Farm Extension Service.

It is planned to send them to all the Nation's agriculture schools and to farm meetings throughout the entire country. FAO plans to show pictures and provide complete reports of the affair for an international farm meeting in Florence, Italy, next month.

Physically Handicapped To Hold Convention Here

The American Federation of the Physically Handicapped will open a three-day convention Friday at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Like any other convention there will be speeches, panel discussions and exhibits. But there will be something else, too.

The delegates will hear AFPH President Paul A. Strachan—but he won't hear their ovation. He is completely deaf.

They will hear Col. Robert S. Allen, the radio and news commentator. He lost an arm while fighting under General Patton in Europe.

There will be Harry P. Fishel, AFPH member from Apollo, Pa. He jumps, runs and rides a bicycle, although he has only one leg.

Convention committee chairman H. Richard McCamant, rehabilitation officer of the Civil Service Commission, will run the show wearing an earphone, a souvenir of wartime service in the Navy.

Heading the hospitality subcommittee will be Mrs. Mary Jim Werdig. She is deaf.

The 200 handicapped delegates will be welcomed to Washington Friday by Joseph Short, president of the National Press Club. The convention will be concluded at 2 p. m. Sunday with a buffet luncheon at the Roosevelt Hotel.

De Gaulle Crusade Sweeps Alsace Off Its Feet

By Theodore H. White

Copyright, 1948, Overseas News Agency, Inc.

PARIS, Aug. 14.—The politics of France have suddenly crystallized once more about the figure of Gen. Charles De Gaulle, the man who led France to victory in 1945 and cast away the power that victory brought him seven months later.

There is no recent French parallel to the personal crusade the general has now launched to regain that power. Almost half a million French citizens have cheered themselves hoarse as the barnstorming general preached his simple thesis: the constitution of France must be torn up and rewritten, and power to govern must be returned directly to him if France is to recover her lost greatness.

This correspondent has just accompanied De Gaulle for 200 miles on the Alsace-Lorraine leg of a campaign that will roll across every province of France between now and November. In Alsace-Lorraine, where De Gaulle's partisans already control city and village governments through their local election victories last fall, his campaign is moving with the dispatch of a military operation.

Impressive Procession

THE general's convoy races down the road, in the lead the general's open car, banked with flowers thrust on him by admirers. His personal bodyguard of four black-helmeted and black-uniformed motorcyclists roars alongside.

Strung out behind are 10 or 15 automobiles carrying his personal staff, Mme. De Gaulle and local political leaders.

The roads are smeared with white painted slogans that proclaim "Vive De Gaulle" beneath the wheels of his convoy. The villages are hung with tricolor pennants; shop windows show his flag-draped portrait.

As the general approaches a large city and crowds block the streets, he descends and stalks on foot through mobs that go wild with ecstasy. He marches to the public square, where his local organizers have prepared triumphal arches. De Gaulle's people see to it that the American flag always hangs prominently among the French colors.

At Metz this correspondent saw 20,000 citizens wait through a drenching rain to hear him speak. In Nancy, 40,000 followers waited an hour in the blazing sun.

Radiates Sincerity

DE GAULLE has aged perceptibly in the past three years. His hair is graying at the temples and his huge frame sags in the middle. He wears an unadorned olive-drab uniform.

His face is usually melancholy, until at the climax of his talk it lights with wrath and fervor. His right arm saws stiffly up and down, but beyond that he lacks oratorical trickery.

His power comes from a vibrant, overwrought sincerity that infuses his essentially simple speech. He talks without notes, always on the same theme: the greatness of France.

It is France's destiny, he tells his crowds over and over again, to save Europe and Christian civilization from Oriental despotism. His crusade is against communism and Russia, but these are rarely the object of specific denunciation. That is reserved for the present government of France, which De Gaulle claims is held captive by partisan politics.

Occasionally his indignation gives way to a pleading pathos, and then he sweeps the audience with passion as he begs: "Francais, Francais, aidez-moi" (Frenchmen, Frenchmen, help me.) The mob roars back, "Oui, oui," as if trying to comfort him.

He usually concludes his speeches with his rallying cry of "Vive la Republique, Vive la France." The audience responds with the battle chant of the movement, "De Gaulle—Au-pour-voir" (De Gaulle to power), beating in cadence of two long syllables and three short ones.

The speeches last no more than 10 or 15 minutes.

AS HIS movement picks up experience, De Gaulle has been polishing up the techniques of personal appeal.

In the cities he is a thunderer who denounces all that is today and promises to recapture tomorrow all the glory of the past. In the villages he is gentle, slow-spoken, the kindly father who promises to heal the suffering of his children.

France is studded with war memorials. Three or four times a day De Gaulle's racing caravan halts while he places a wreath on a village monument or unveils a plaque to a fallen hero.

He speaks for a moment on the glory of France and the greatness that this village has given to the greater glory of the nation. Then he steps back into his car and roars away.

Each stop is a tiny pageant which France's parliamentary government seems powerless to match. Everywhere he goes, De Gaulle brings the tired people a moment of color and brilliance, the sound of drums and power.

De Gaulle misses no opportunity to underline the drama of his movement. In Metz he was met by the Archbishop, dressed in crimson robes and bearing his golden staff, on the threshold of the great Gothic cathedral. As the Te Deum sounded and the cathedral choir rolled the music, his followers lowered their banners before the altar, blending their new pageantry with the older pageantry of the church.

At Nancy, when the city elders gave a reception in his honor at the city hall, De Gaulle spied a little knot of timid, work-stained miners. He commanded that they be brought forward, led them to the place of honor, served them some of the golden Moselle wine that had been offered him and chatted with them intimately for five minutes to the exclusion of the neatly dressed officials.

De Gaulle's present campaign, which began when the Schuman government was replaced by the Marie government, has already

General De Gaulle has developed different oratorical techniques for city and village, in his current crusade. This is his press conference technique, demonstrated to a cosmopolitan group of newspapermen recently in Paris

Racketeers 'Rat' on Cleveland Cops

(Cleveland is cleaning up a numbers racket in which police and underworld figures have cooperated to do a business of 10 million dollars a year. One police officer is in jail and others who shared in more than $200,000 in bribes from the rackets are on their way to disgrace and punishment.)

By Forrest Allen

Cleveland Press Reporter

CLEVELAND, Aug. 14.—A police-underworld combine which controlled this city's 10 million-dollar-a-year numbers rackets for nearly eight years, is being smashed by a fighting assistant safety director who already has one police scalp to his credit.

Conviction of Police Lieut. Ernest L. Molnar, who was sentenced two weeks ago to 6 to 60 years in the penitentiary, is expected to lead to grand jury investigation of 10 other members of the department.

Alvin J. Sutton, former FBI agent and now assistant safety director, conducted the investigation that brought Molnar's conviction. He is now devoting full time to "cleaning the rackets out of the police department."

Testimony of policy racketeers in the Molnar trial described a city-wide numbers syndicate run by a "Big Three" of policy and clearing house operators under police protection.

MOLNAR, as head of the police vice squad from 1938 to 1941, wrecked the numbers rackets run by the old Mayfield mob. On its ruins he built a new numbers syndicate, it was testified, from which he was paid some $80,000 in bribes by two racketeers alone.

Statements given Sutton during his investigation indicated bribe payments of more than $200,000 since 1944 from a few of the operators, the money being paid to Molnar for distribution to other police officers.

In a scorching preamble to his sentencing of Molnar, Common Pleas Judge Joseph A. Artl told Molnar, "These rackets could not have existed without your protection, and the warfare in rackets today results from your crime."

The warfare Judge Artl referred to was responsible for Sutton's first break in his investigation. Three policy operators were indicted last winter on charges of kidnaping and assault to murder. Luis Lorenzo, kingpin policy operator, was one of the three charged with attempting to "put away" a player who had "hit the number" last August.

Lorenzo and the others claimed a "frame" by rival operators. But prior to his conviction, Lorenzo decided to tell Sutton all he knew about policy payoffs to police. Then the others talked, all of them charging they had been double-crossed by Molnar.

It developed later that the August number had been "rigged" by the alteration of a number appearing on a local financial page, the number being played heavily by a gang fighting Lorenzo.

'Educational Assessment'

AT Molnar's trial, the State paraded a long list of operators who told of Molnar's intimate association with the racket. Lorenzo told of regular bribe payments of $1500 a month to Molnar, from 1944 on. He testified to special payments for "police examination time," "election time," and for "sending Molnar's boy away to school."

The State introduced evidence of department store purchases by Molnar running into thousands of dollars; of extensive real estate deals; of his paying $18,000 in two years to an exclusive Eastern school for his son's education.

Telephone records were introduced in support of testimony on the many calls by racketeers to Molnar's home.

"Molnar's corrupt control could have continued except for the greediness of Frank Hoge, who wanted to wipe out Luis Lorenzo," Victor DeMarco, assistant prosecutor, said in his closing argument.

"Were it not for Hoge's greediness, there never would have been a kidnaping trial of Lorenzo and this mess and corruption in our police department would never have come to light."

The Gallup Poll

Voters 10 Years Ahead of Red Probers

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

ALTHOUGH the Washington spy hearings have put a fresh and lurid emphasis on the Communist issue, the American people have been acutely suspicious of Communists in this country for at least 10 years.

The suspicion took firm root after August, 1939, when Moscow signed the pact with Hitler, and the public's attitude never altered much during the war, even though we became allies of Russia.

The suspicion rests principally on the belief that American Communists are loyal to Russia, not the United States, and that in any war against the Soviets they would work in the interests of the enemy. The Communist Party in America is not viewed by the people as an indigenous party voicing social protest, but a party controlled by a foreign power.

The majority of voters have long favored drastic measures to curb American Communists. The public is in a mood to accept any program which the experts think will work. Registration of Communists, for example, as provided in the Mundt-Nixon bill, has strong support. Fairly widespread public approval of outlawing the party has been found in the past.

While Congress Met

A TEST of sentiment on the Communist issue was begun by the institute two days after the special session of Congress met July 26. One question dealt with a major provision of the Mundt-Nixon bill, and another with the issue of the loyalty of American Communists. Results follow:

"The Mundt-Nixon bill now before Congress would not stop anyone from belonging to the Communist Party, but it would require every individual who belongs to the Communist Party or Communist organizations to register with the Justice Department in Washington. Do you think Congress should or should not pass this bill?" (Polled during July 28 to August 7.)

Should	63%
Should not	22
No opinion	15

Although the Mundt-Nixon bill died with the Eightieth Congress, Washington observers report that it will almost certainly be revived next January when the new Congress meets.

The second question in the poll was:

"In general, do you think most American citizens who belong to the Communist Party in this country are loyal to America or Russia?"

Loyal to U. S.	23%
Loyal to Russia	56
No opinion	21

A separate survey was conducted in July on a variation of the above question, with results as follows:

"If we should get into a war with Russia, do you think the Communists in the United States would help this country or would they try to work against the United States?"

Would help U. S.	8%
Would work against	73
Qualified answer	4
No opinion	15

Fair About It

THESE doubts about loyalty undoubtedly explain why the majority of voters favor two other curbs on American Communists.

More than two thirds (67 per cent) express the opinion that members of the Communist Party should be forbidden to hold Civil Service jobs in the Government. An even larger proportion fears the damage that might be done by Communists in industries that would be important in wartime; hence 80 per cent would favor steps to remove known Communists from such industries.

However, the American people are not in favor of railroading suspected Communists out of their jobs without a fair hearing.

In September, 1947, when loyalty tests for Government employes were being discussed, a poll found that nearly seven voters in every 10 (68 per cent) thought that no Government worker should be dismissed in loyalty purges without the right to a fair hearing on the charges and a chance to present his side of the case.

Even During War

THE ISSUE of outlawing the Communist Party has been debated for many years. In 1941, four days before Hitler invaded Russia, rudely terminating the Moscow-Berlin pact, the institute found that 71 per cent of American voters thought membership in the American Communist Party should be forbidden by law.

Six years later, after we had been allied to Russia in the fighting against Hitler, a new poll found that 62 per cent still favored outlawing the party. The same percentage expressed the opinion that Communists in this country were actually taking orders from Moscow.

Last week's spy testimony in Washington must hardly have come as any surprise to the general public. Two years ago, in August, 1946, an institute poll found that 78 per cent, an overwhelming majority, believed Russia had spies at work then in the United States.

A religious element enters to some extent into the attitude of Americans toward Communists. A very substantial majority feel that the Communists would destroy the Christian religion if they could.

This was shown in a poll last October which found that 72 per cent think the Communists are out to destroy Christianity.

The Iron Curtain

Soviet Agents Awed by Lush Life in Canada

Installment VIII

(This is the story of the former Russian cipher clerk who exposed Stalin's spy ring in Canada in September, 1945. It is remarkably like the story now unreeling before congressional investigators.—Editor's Note.)

By Igor Gouzenko

THE next days were occupied in forming and memorizing my "Legend." Each Soviet agent going abroad travels under a false biography.

The idea behind these "Legends" is rather curious.

In case authorities of a country, wherein the subject of a "Legend" is assigned, wish to check on him, they communicate with their embassy in Moscow. The embassy, however, would find itself incapable of attempting a private investigation, for the simple reason that practically all such "Legends" give phony home addresses outside Moscow.

My "Legend," submitted to the Canadian immigration authorities for passport visa, was as false as those of all others sent to Ottawa.

Later, I was recalled for further discussion concerning my "Legend" by Major Dashevsky, one of the assistants to the chief of the American Section.

"It has been decided," he said, "to class you as an 'Employe' of the Military Attache. If the Canadian authorities want to know what you are doing tell them that you understand your work will be reading newspapers and acting as translator and secretary. Keep the fact that you are a cipher clerk a closely guarded secret. The reason is that, as a cipher clerk, the counter-espionage is liable to become interested in you and make life uncomfortable as well as dangerous."

Hazy on Canada'

THIS is a practical illustration of the atmosphere of deceit under which the Soviet conducts its relations with foreign nations and even among my colleagues.

The other members of the staff were, of course, also living under falsified "Legends." One man, for instance, did not appear as a military radio engineer; that would be a dead giveaway. Instead he was listed as a courier-guard.

Several weeks before departing for Canada, I was sent to the People's Commissariat of External Affairs for my passport. In handing it to me, the official said:

"You are being given a civilian passport. In this way your army identity is removed and your position will be actually that of a civilian employe of the Soviet Military Attache in Canada."

Major Dashevsky conducted a series of lectures that we found most interesting, and not without humor.

One lecture dealt with Canada.

Major Dashevsky apologized for lack of

Koreans Hope Liberation Is 'Mansei' This Time

By Evon N. Clark

TODAY is Liberation Day in south Korea. The Chungs, the Paks, the Kims, the Oks, the Koos, the Us and millions of other families will leave thatch-roofed cabins or tile-roofed houses to celebrate the third anniversary of their liberation from the Japanese who had dominated them for 40 years.

Many times during the day, men in white blouses and pantaloons tied at the ankles, women in bright pantaloons topped by flowing skirts of vivid colors, will rise on their tiptoes, stretch both hands toward the heavens and cry, "Mansei!" They will repeat it three times, in the hope that this time everlasting freedom is truly theirs.

Several times in the history of this people exploited first by their own rulers and then by the Japanese, some brave ones have cried "Mansei! Mansei! Mansei!" Their red, white and blue Tae Kuk Ki or flag has been raised by dauntless ones. Each time their hopes were crushed, the brave ones slaughtered in reprisal.

Even in 1945, when the Americans took over south of the thirty-eighth parallel, Koreans were not sure that the day of freedom had really dawned. This year, with a new government of their own choosing, south Koreans feel positively that Liberation Day is Mansei, the Hankul word for "everlasting."

KOREANS know what Liberation Day means. The old men know, the ones with their topknots grown back, topknots which the Japanese made them cut off.

They know what liberation can mean in vital matters. Did not Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge give tenant farmers the right to purchase the lands they tilled, for the first time in Korean history?

The new landowner knows that in the Russian-dominated north the farmer's toil as well as his soil belongs to the government and that taxes and tithes are even higher than under the Japanese.

Men and women who crave knowledge know what Liberation Day means, too. Since 1945 more than 15,000 adult education classes have been inaugurated. The number of adult illiterates has been reduced from eight million to two million.

South Koreans have learned much about democracy. They have been through their first free elections. They avidly absorbed the election instructions prepared by the Office for Civil Information. For millions of Koreans this was a feat.

In some parts of the country, people had never seen a newspaper, never heard a radio. But through one telling another, the knowledge of what a free election is and how it is conducted became known. They learned that a president and a national assembly of 200 members would be elected by them, the people.

Protocol of Politics

WHEN election day came May 10, balloting was opened with ceremony. Here where politics is still a life and death matter, election officials first bowed low to the sun, then bowed to each other, then bowed to the ballot boxes and then bowed to the ground for a moment of silent prayer.

As the day wore on, men followed by women with children strapped to their backs and children clinging to their skirts, went to the polls. And out of the 90 per cent of the population that voted, 55 per cent were women! This in a country where women have always been considered inferior. In the few instances where election officials attempted to "help" women or illiterates to vote, they were politely but firmly told by American observers that this would not do in a free election. They bowed low, with profuse apologies.

The Koreans know about freedom of thought as expressed by their elected assembly. On July 27, when President Syngman Rhee nominated Li Yoon Yawng as Premier, the assembly proved its independence by voting 122 to 59 against his confirmation. This served to disprove Communistic propaganda that the Rhee government was a dictatorship and the assembly a lot of puppets.

A Nation's Baptism

TWO days earlier Dr. Rhee had been inaugurated in front of the great stone capitol in Seoul. The ceremony, attended by nearly a million Koreans despite rain of monsoon proportions, was as democratic as an inauguration in the United States.

Dr. Chyun Kyn-Hong, secretary general of the assembly, a Princeton man, was there in tail coat and striped trousers as official greeter to the American representatives. Old Dr. Rhee wore a white blouse and pantaloons tied at the ankles, a pale grey dust coat and a leghorn hat. His coppertoned face was wrinkled in smiles.

His wife, a diminutive Viennese whom Dr. Rhee met in Washington while he was carrying on a sort of Korean government in exile, wore a native style dress of hand-woven and embroidered silk over silk pantaloons. Over it she had flung an American yellow slicker to make her umbrella carrier's job less difficult.

Mrs. Rhee is regarded as her husband's mainstay on political advice. Some say it was Mrs. Rhee that inspired women to go to the polls in such numbers, and that it was because of her that a woman ran for the assembly. That woman lost out, but when Dr. Rhee formed his cabinet August 4, a woman, Miss Louise Yim, was made secretary of commerce.

South Koreа practiced democracy in its first elections May 10. Here a citizen drops his ballot in a padlocked box under the eyes of election officials

Self-Administered Oath

KOREANS will not soon forget that first inaugural day for another special reason. Their first elected president, having no chief justice to administer the oath of office, like Napoleon, administered it to himself.

He simply raised his right hand and spoke the words that made him president of the world's twelfth largest nation. Immediately the throng of Koreans stood on tiptoe, flung their arms heavenward and cried, "Mansei! Mansei! Mansei!"

That cry of hope will reecho throughout south Korea today.

India's Starting Brickwork After Year at Drawing Board

By G. P. Jain

Information Services, Indian Embassy

A YEAR ago today, on the transfer of power from British to Indian hands, problems the size of the Himalayas faced the new Indian government.

There was the incredible poverty of the people (the average daily income was 5 cents); the rate of illiteracy (87 per cent); a low expectancy of life (23 years), owing to malnutrition; an agricultural economy depending entirely upon the vagaries of nature, and, last but not least, there were 600 princely autocracies empowered under the Indian Independence Act to cut themselves loose from the rest of the country and thereby break up India, already divided into 600 fragments.

These problems were big enough for any government new to its job. On top of them, there began, shortly after Independence Day, the largest human migration in history. Nearly five million men, women and children trekked to India from Pakistan. These people who had lost everything had to be fed, clothed, housed and given employment.

The last blow fell on January 30, 1948, when a long spell of communal disturbances saw its culmination in the assassination of Mahatma Gandhi, a tower of strength to the Indian people.

No Overnight Task

IN THE year that has gone by, the Indian government, under the leadership of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, has met its responsibilities courageously. It has solved some urgent problems, has made a good beginning with many and has touched the fringe of some others. But one year is not enough to make a lasting impression on the evil legacy of the last war or of imperialism.

India today is in the planning stage. It is like the area around Dupont Circle in Washington. It is a messy sight today, but in two years there will be on this spot a safe underpass for traffic. Likewise India, after the first few years of hard and perspiring effort, will be able to put her house in order.

The Indian government's record is remarkable for two achievements: (1) Industrialization and (2) the consolidation of princely states.

The first aircraft rolled off the assembly lines at Baroda this year. The Hindustan Aircraft Co. at Bengalore expects to manufacture 30 planes by the end of 1949.

The first India-built steamer, Jala Usha, was launched at Vizagapatam on March 15, 1948. Another will be ready by the end of this year. Next year three will be produced and from 1950 on, five a year.

Three automobile factories, two at Bombay and the other at Calcutta, are under construction. Their combined annual capacity will be 20,000 vehicles.

A locomotive factory will be completed by 1950. A steel works with a capacity of one million tons will be ready in five years.

Harnessing Its Rivers

A DOZEN or more hydroelectric projects on the TVA model, when completed in a few years, will produce 10 million kilowatts of power to operate the new factories and will irrigate 10 million acres of land.

Seven national research institutes are planned at a cost of seven million dollars to do research in glass and ceramics, fuel, leather, metallurgy, electro-chemistry, etc.

The 600 princely states have been welded into about two dozen and democratic governments have been set up in their territories without shedding a drop of blood. The only exception is Hyderabad, whose ruler still refuses either to join India or to set up a democratic government.

This is a very inadequate picture of present-day India, of her immense tasks and the courage with which her people are facing them. Like Americans after the War of Independence, the Indian people are laying, brick by brick, the foundations of a progressive, prosperous and enduring social structure.

Inflation Puts Hirohito on a Diet of Hash

By Allen Raymond

TOKYO, Aug. 14.—The inability of Emperor Hirohito to make both ends meet on a parliamentary allowance of eight million yen last fiscal year was explained to the Japanese public in the Nippon Times this week under the headline, "Despite frugality, the Emperor has been unable to balance his budget, due to inflation."

(Since July 6, the military conversion rate for the yen has been 270 to $1. Before that it was 50 to $1.)

Food alone cost the imperial household 1,200,000 yen, despite efforts of the palace chef to use leftovers.

"The court chef says he does not prepare meals nowadays for the imperial family according to previously planned menus," an officer of the Household Ministry reported, "but improvises on whatever materials are available." Chicken today is hash tomorrow.

Because of inflation, the Emperor's expenses ran 2,340,000 yen over the parliamentary grant, the report said. To meet the deficit, the Emperor dug down into cash deposits of 51 million yen which were left to him after he transferred the bulk of his fortune to the state, the report said.

Donations to sufferers from various calamities and subsidies to scientific and cultural research took 1,600,000 yen of the total, and without his charities the Emperor would almost have broken even. Entertaining cabinet ministers and other important persons privately accounted for a good deal of the food bill.

Cursed Hawaiin Island Is 'Most Shot at' Terrain

HONOLULU, Aug. 14 (AP).— Kahoolawe sits as an island of death in the Hawaiian chain. For seven years, ships and planes have raked and blasted it with virtually everything except the atomic bomb.

The 45-square-mile patch of lava rock and sand west of Maui Island is a target area visited only by foolhardy adventurers and unfortunate castaways. So many unexploded shells and bombs infest the little spit that even military men hesitate to land. Inspections when necessary are made from the air.

Civilian aircraft are barred from flying within a mile of Kahoolawe's highest point. Surface craft must skirt its barren shores by a mile.

The Navy warmed up its guns on Kahoolawe before nearly every major Pacific battle. The spot, still a bull's-eye for the Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force, maintains its reputation as the world's most shot-at island. A dummy airport and planes are prime targets.

Named for the red clouds of dust that blow from it, the island fills a romantic niche in Hawaiian history. It has been a place of banishment, a penal colony, a haven for South Sea smugglers and a parched ranch where wild goats starved out beef cattle.

Military officials say they expect to use Kahoolawe for a target range indefinitely.

Old-time Hawaiians say Kahoolawe, always a forlorn stepchild in the family of eight major islands, is forever kuamuamued—that is, cursed.

East-West Crisis Made Certain in 1945

By Stefan Osusky

(Dr. Osusky, Minister of State of Czechoslovakia in 1940-42, served the Czechoslovak Republic in various diplomatic and ministerial posts, including assignments to the post-World War I peace and reparations conferences and the League of Nations. Educated at the University of Chicago, he is now back in this country teaching and lecturing.)

UPON recovering from the nightmare of 1941-42, the Kremlin began to shape its postwar policy. Shrewd diplomats stationed in Moscow and Kuibyshev detected signs of a new policy as far back as the summer of 1943. The recall of Ambassador Litvinov from Washington and of Ambassador Maisky from London made some observers believe that the decision had already been taken.

However, the Russians' alternating gestures of collaboration and distrust in their dealings with the Allies, was reminiscent of the Kremlin method employed in 1933-34, when the Politburo was in quest of a policy to give the Soviet Union security against eventual Nazi aggression.

At that time parallel negotiations were allowed to go on: Marshal Tukhachevsky negotiating with Germany for a military alliance and Litvinov exploring the situation for an alliance with France and Czechoslovakia.

Similarly, from the summer of 1943 on, two contending policies were allowed to run parallel: The policy of collaboration, in order to rehabilitate Russia, and the policy of noncollaboration pending the collapse of Western capitalism.

Price of Recovery

THE spokesman for rehabilitation was Mikail Kalinin, President of the Soviet Union. He held that the prime postwar Soviet task was rehabilitation of the country with the greatest possible speed, even if it meant collaboration with capitalism.

Against this policy, Vyacheslav Molotov, Commissar for Foreign Affairs, advocated a Bolshevik (Maximalist) policy in world affairs, as Lenin advocated the Maximalist policy within Russia in the revolution of 1917. He saw an analogy between the situation of Russia in 1917 and that of the world at the close of the Second World War.

The First World War, he argued, wounded capitalism seriously; the depression of the early '30s shook it to its foundations, and the Second World War gave it a death blow. In his view, the policy of Soviet rehabilitation with the help of the United States and Britain, meant nothing less than to save, with Soviet help, the tottering West from certain doom.

One would have expected that before deciding definitely, the Politburo would wait for the report of Emil Varga, the leading Soviet economist and personal adviser of Stalin, whom the government charged in the summer of 1944 with studying the effects of the Second World War upon western capitalism. But the radicals pressed for decision. They counted on the support of Stalin, whose prestige and vanity were involved.

Belated Announcement

THUS, in the autumn of 1945 the Politburo decided on the Molotov policy. But Stalin did not announce the grave decision publicly until the eve of the general elections on February 9, 1948. At that time he declared:

"It would be incorrect to think that the war arose accidentally or as the result of some statesmen. Although these faults did exist, the war arose in reality as the inevitable result of the development of the world economic and political forces on the basis of monopoly capitalism."

The decision which Stalin announced in terms of inoffensive historico-philosophical reflections was a momentous one. It implied acts pregnant with incalculable potentialities: the deliberate sacrifice of the rehabilitation of Russia from war destruction and the continuation of lean years for the Russian people; a change of philosophy from the impersonal Marxian-Leninian law of materialistic determinism (in which individuals are nothing but blind tools of the law) to a Soviet conception in which Soviet facts are the source of a new Communist philosophy; a definite change of policy of nationality within Russia; a decision with regard to the function of the Red Army in the postwar Soviet Union, and finally a refusal to collaborate with the Western world to organize peace and order on the basis of Western political, social, economic and cultural ideas and institutions.

Unorthodox Reaction

OUR aim in this article is not to expose the nature and the import of the implications referred to above. All we wish to say is that everything seemed to work out according to plan (Europe and Asia were disintegrating, the British Empire agonizing) except one thing: America failed to play the game according to the rules laid down by Marx and elaborated by Lenin.

What impertinence! What stupidity to revolt against the law of history discovered by Karl Marx!

The United States has not withdrawn into isolation. It has not become a victim of grave economic depression followed by unemployment. On the contrary, the American Congress voted a European Recovery Program which is giving the European nations both a chance and a means to get on their feet and thus to defend themselves against communism and against Soviet domination. This American stubbornness was not written in the Marxian law of dialectic materialism. It confounded the Kremlin oracles.

Surprised by America's unorthodox behavior, the Kremlin hastened to meet its effects upon Russia herself, upon Europe in general and upon her satellites in particular.

Russia enlisted the adhesion of its Slav satellites (Poles, Czechs and Slovaks, Yugoslavs and Bulgarians) to its imperial policy by promises to protect them so that they might develop their particular Slav personalities, cultures and traditions. She promised all her satellites (Romanians and Magyars included) to protect them against a new German aggression so that they might work out their national destinies.

But what is Russia doing today? In a supreme attempt to defeat Europe's recovery by winning Germany to her side, she is betraying both the Slav trust and the pledge against a revival of the German danger. She endeavors to bring about a unity of beliefs, of political, economic and social systems, a unity of culture and behavior.

Built Upon Sand

THUS Russia, instead of safeguarding the individual national particularities, which linked the satellite nations to Moscow, has subjugated them to her own will and purposes. She promised to solve the ethnic, national, social and cultural antagonisms of the central, eastern and southeastern European countries, but only manages to inflame the passions she sought to amortize. Individuals, families and nations are reduced to the role of a mere human material with which the Kremlin means to build its Soviet empire.

But in order to subjugate individuals, nationalities and nations to a foreign multi-national state, the Kremlin is forced to increase its state secret police, its measures of rigor and its propaganda of lies until it threatens to succumb under their weight. In doing so, it engenders the degeneration of the peoples whom it claims to regenerate, the dead weight of which soon or late will fell the imperial structure.

Undoubtedly Russia could, for some time, prolong its grip upon the subjugated nations, while offending their human and national feelings, if she could satisfy their material needs. However, she is unable to give them the raw materials, machine tools and machines of which they are in need.

Having misread the Marxian law of materialistic determinism, the multi-national state of Russia is violating the law of her own existence and her imperial policy has degenerated into tyranny. Had the Kremlin sages studied, for instance, the Roman Empire, they would have found that Bolshevik fanaticism and Soviet imperialism are incompatible. The Stalin-Tito feud is in point.

Comparison Available

THE worst enemies of Russia are not the Western capitalist countries, but her own inherent contradictions. As time goes on, the Kremlin sins more and more against the everyday interests of her own numerous nationalities and tribes; defeats the interests and offends the feelings of the satellite nations which she pretends to serve.

If they had nothing with which to compare their lot, the satellite peoples might sink lower and lower in their degradation and misery, and lose the moral stamina needed for resistance. Fortunately, the European Recovery Program, if implemented in western Europe, will set a different example of the pursuit of happiness — an example they should find worthy of emulation.

Army's Still Short 1-Year Enlistments

By the World Staff of the Associated Press

OTHER reports to the contrary, the Army says definitely that it is not getting enough 18-year-old one-year enlistees.

By law it may enlist 15,000 in this special class by September 1. From then until June 30, it hopes to get 10,000 18-year-olds each month. But the current rate of one-year enlistments is far less than that.

The Army is especially eager to get its full quota of one-year men. It says the one-year enlistment program comes as close to universal military training as it's possible to get under the law.

It's a sure thing the Army will need to draft men under the new Selective Service Act. Even if voluntary enlistments kept up with the July level (39,000), it would still leave a gap between authorized and actual strength.

July was the record voluntary enlistment month for a period in which Selective Service was not in operation. But Army manpower experts say July is traditionally a "good" enlistment month, well above the average.

Hyderabad Guerillas

BOMBAY—The Indian Socialist Party's "Hyderabad Struggle Committee" is preparing to organize guerilla warfare inside that state. The committee says it is running camps in Indian districts bordering Hyderabad to train Hyderabad youths in guerilla tactics.

Hyderabad is predominantly Hindu, but its ruler, the Nizam, is Moslem. India wants the state to accede to India, but the Nizam is agin' it. The Socialists often have condemned the Indian government as being too soft toward him.

The party committee has asked Indian youths to enter Hyderabad and "organize workers and peasants for the clash with the totalitarian gangsters—leaving the task of liberating state territory to Indian troops."

World's Workers Winning Voice in Industry

By Sigrid Arne

Associated Press Staff Writer

WORKERS around the world appear to have made tremendous strides since the war's end in getting some say-so about the conditions under which they work.

Reports have just been collected by the Labor Department from our embassies abroad and from many labor federation meetings held this spring. Here are highlights:

Belgium

THE March meeting of labor, management and government agreed on a pay raise for only the lowest paid.

Belgians have been battling the need for a general pay raise in the hope of keeping prices down. To cushion their austerity program, the Parliament has passed a law to allow vacation bonuses for 1948. Workers over 18 get five weeks' pay for a two-week vacation. Workers under 18 will get five weeks' pay for three weeks' vacation.

France

THE General Confederation of Workers (which broke off from the old Communist-run federation) came out in April for independence from political activity. But it requested several changes.

French wages have been frozen by the government. Now the CGW wants a return to free collective bargaining. It asks an increased share in management and wants government planning for production, price cuts and nationalization of credit and critical industries.

High prices are the big French headache. The government has tried to bring them down through several decrees but with little success.

Great Britain

JULY 5, the final steps of a modified Beveridge Plan went into effect. It extends benefits for sickness, old age, unemployment and industrial injuries. It gives free medical and hospital care to everyone. Self-employed are included in everything except unemployment compensation and accident benefits. Even the nonemployed get old-age payments.

Money to cover the program (except for the needy) will come from workers, employers and government.

The other top labor news from Britain concerns the 100,000 foreign workers who have been taken in—Italian foundry workers, Poles who fought with the Allies, German prisoners of war and European volunteers, most of them Germans and Austrians.

The volunteers get the same working conditions and benefits and pay the same taxes as the British. Poles who stay five years and serve one year with the British armed forces may apply for citizenship.

Italy

THIS month at Carrara, a cooperative clothing factory is being set up with the help of a $500,000 fund collected by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Americans will supervise the plant and finally turn it over to the Italians. Clothing will be sold to Italy at no profit.

The YWCA will run a welfare center at the factory for women employes.

Norway

THE government has extended the life of the Wages Committee, which has the job of preventing work stoppages and whose rulings are binding on both management and labor.

In April management, on a request from labor, agreed to give the lowest paid workers a raise.

Austria

THE Austrian Federation of Labor is opposing wage increases and pushing production on the ground that only more goods will solve its members' troubles. But farmers are screaming for higher agricultural prices (the government sets them.) The trade unions warn that higher food prices will mean demands for higher wages.

New price control and rationing laws were passed this spring on the demand of labor, which is also asking a capital levy and a capital gains tax.

Germany

LABOR and management in the British-American zone were told in April they could negotiate wage increases up to 15 per cent. Negotiations are being delayed until the buying power of the new mark has been determined.

Greece

IN APRIL Greek workers held their first freely elected congress in 14 years. The rightists and moderates tangled bitterly.

In May the government was forced to repeal a decree which set penalties up to death for anyone promoting a work stoppage.

Romania

THIS Communist-run government is having strangely capitalistic troubles. The country had runaway inflation last year, and the government had to grant big wage increases. These were promptly followed by a big jump in prices, with resulting benefit to nobody.

Turkey

UNDER a new law, workers are forming industry associations with authority to negotiate on working conditions, the duty to appear before arbitration boards and the right to run mutual aid funds.

The cost of living remained constant all last year. Strikes and lockouts are forbidden by law. In March, a dock workers' strike was stopped when the leaders were arrested.

Employers must pay into a fund to meet the costs of maternity, industrial accidents and occupational diseases.

India

A NEW law says employers must recognize legally registered unions. Such unions have the right to negotiate working conditions.

A labor-management conference last December agreed to a three-year truce on work stoppages to help raise the Nation's living standards. A report says that work days lost had dropped 50 per cent.

Wallace Partisans Had Prototypes in Prague

By Semour Freidin

FOR many, the spectacle of the third party may appear daring, challenging and fresh. For someone recently returned from eastern Europe, the tune is familiar, the story is old.

The Progressive Party's leaders refer disparagingly to the Democrats and Republicans as carbon copies of each other. But the methods of the third party look like a carbon copy of those that led to the establishment of the "people's democracies" in central and eastern Europe.

The third party's techniques, still in the cruder stages, are still disconcertingly similar to those used in preparing the Prague coup six months ago. The utterances of Senator Glen Taylor—his glib denunciation of the European Recovery Program, his references to "cartelists" and demands for an end to American "interference" in the sovereignty of European nations—might well have emanated from any one of those little politicians in the Balkans who were used in the establishment of "progressive people's republics."

'Peer' of Wallace

TAYLOR'S aptitude for that kind of demagoguery marks him, in the writer's opinion, as the American politician likeliest to follow—or attempt to follow—in the footsteps of those who shared responsibility for the internal political changes in eastern Europe.

Henry Wallace, at present, undoubtedly possesses more appeal for the policy-makers of the American Communist Party. But Wallace lacks the fire to whip the faithful into frenzied support. Studied demagoguery is an essential qualification.

Taylor parrots the slogans without a tinge of hesitation. Wallace occasionally wonders aloud if a Soviet-sponsored project may be a wee bit off the beam. The men who were used in the Balkans didn't last too long if they were questioned, however vaguely.

The operation of the Wallace-Taylor bloc matches most closely perhaps the early organization of the "people's forces" which took over Czechoslovakia. The Progressive Party, of course, does not possess police powers, nor the helpful presence of a Red army on the country's borders. Its program is unlikely to succeed here the first or second time, but it may plant the seeds of the harvest.

THE driving force behind the Progressive Party has also employed the practice of proclaiming that someone now dead but whose influence is great today would most certainly have supported its aims. The Wallace-Taylor organization will continue to attempt to sanctify itself by insisting that its aims are actually the objectives of President Roosevelt.

When the Communists seized Czechoslovakia the name of the President-liberator, Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, was similarly exploited. The practice continued through the sham election at the end of May. Now that Masaryk's prestige is no longer needed, his photographs are fast being replaced by pictures of Stalin, Lenin and Premier Klement Gottwald.

The totaltiaritan mind must rely peculiarly upon the assumption that a great national figure smiles upon its destiny. In Bulgaria, Stamboulisky was used. The Hungarians reached back 100 years for Louis Kossuth, the Romanians for military heroes in the wars against the Turks.

The Progressive Party scrupulously emulated the techniques of eastern Europe's coalitions and "fronts" by calmly disapproving each amendment suggested from the convention floor which did not have the sanction of the platform committee. By placing on the United States the lion's share of the blame for the precarious condition of world peace, the whips behind the Wallace-Taylor ticket mouthed the pet phrases of the "people's democrats."

Forgotten, of course, was the fact that the United States was not behind the subversion of a freely elected government in Hungary. Forgotten, too, was the destruction of the only traditional democracy in central Europe—Czechoslovakia.

A Moscow 'Scoop'

PERHAPS Wallace would care to repeat the statement he made after the Czech crisis accusing American Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt of attempting a "rightist putsch." It appeared a strange coincidence to the writer that the phraseology was virtually the same as that in the Soviet magazine New Times in an article by the Tass correspondent in Prague, N. Medov. The article appeared about 10 days before Wallace gave his approval to the destruction of Czech liberty.

The most demagogic of all slogans employed in Philadelphia was "Wallace or War." That was a favorite pronouncement in Italy before last spring's elections. There it read, "Togliatti or War." In Prague it went, "Gottwald or Fascism." In Budapest, "Rakosi or Reaction." The sameness, the demand for unanimity, persists in the totalitarian mind.

It was a shock to return from a long stay in the "people's democracies" to hear the familiar slogans being parroted by American politicians. Fortunately, in view of the lack of popular support for the Progressive Party's program, the imported techniques and the imported jargon must appear ridiculous rather than alarming.

T. R. Left a Mark to Shoot At

By Alexander R. George
Associated Press Staff Writer

THE CANDIDACY of Henry A. Wallace is the fifth sizable third-party bid for the Presidency since the Civil War.

No third-party candidate has come close to winning election, but Bull Moose Progressive Theodore Roosevelt got more votes than one of his major party opponents. He received 88 electoral votes to eight for President Taft, the Republican, in 1912. Democrat Woodrow Wilson won with 435 electoral votes.

The Republicans were a third party when they organized in 1854, but in the 1856 campaign they became the major opponent of the Democrats. Four years later they elected their first President, Abraham Lincoln.

Wallace is the second Iowan to head a third-party ticket. The first was James B. Weaver, presidential nominee of the Populists in 1892. He received 22 electoral votes and more than one million popular votes.

Third best showing in the post-Civil War period was made by Senator Robert M. La Follette, sr., Progressive candidate in 1924. He won the 13 electoral votes of Wisconsin and about one sixth of the total popular vote in a race against President Coolidge and Democrat John W. Davis.

Horace Greeley, standard-bearer of the liberal Republicans in 1872, was also the nominee of the Democratic Party. President Grant, regular Republican candidate, defeated Greeley by an overwhelming electoral majority.

Teddy Roosevelt's showmanship made the 1912 campaign one of the liveliest in history. It reached a dramatic climax when Roosevelt was shot and wounded by a fanatic three weeks before the election.

The Roosevelt supporters, first third party to adopt the title Progressive, chose the bull moose emblem to compete with the GOP elephant and the Democratic donkey. Regular Republicans dubbed them "elephadonks."

The title Progressive stemmed from the National Progressive Republican League, organized early in 1911 by the elder Senator LaFollette and Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon.

The name Progressive was again taken by LaFollette supporters who bolted the Republican convention which nominated President Coolidge in 1924. Burton K. Wheeler, Democratic Senator from Montana, was LaFollette's running mate.

Cancer Requires a 'Trojan Horse'

By Frank Carey
Associated Press Science Reporter

SCIENTISTS are seeking a chemical "Trojan horse" to carry atomic energy against man's worst disease enemy—cancer.

Radioactive by-products of A-bomb development have the power to destroy cancer by direct "bombardment." These by-products are radioisotopes — man-made, ray-emitting forms of chemical elements found in nature.

But most of these cannot be used in effective amounts in the human body. The few that can be used cannot always be "aimed" properly at the wily cancer target.

There have been a few real "hits"—against cases of thyroid cancer—but that's all. (The thyroid is a gland in the neck.)

What the scientists would like to find—and they have made some exploratory progress — is some dependable means of getting their radioactive ammunition right inside the cancer fortress without doing damage on the way.

They are seeking some chemical which cancer—and cancer alone—will attract to itself. If they find such a thing, they will attempt to load this "Trojan horse" with enough radioactive stuff to destroy the cancer.

Except in the case of thyroid cancer—and in only a few selected instances of that—it has been impossible to find a dependable means of concentrating fire on cancer areas without endangering healthy tissue.

MANY of the radioactive isotopes are useless for the direct treatment of cancer because they are poisonous. Radioactive arsenic is an example. The radiating power of some others is far too lasting for the body to tolerate. For example, radioactive carbon "14." In 5000 years only half its original radiating power would be dissipated. The body couldn't tolerate any significant dosage of that baby even for a few minutes.

But there are a few radio isotopes which are nonpoisonous and which have radiating power of relatively short duration. Radioactive iodine and phosphorus have proved the best bets so far.

Iodine tends to concentrate naturally in the thyroid gland. Phosphorus is attracted naturally to the blood-producing centers—the bone marrow, the spleen, the lymph glands.

Because of this feature, radioiodine has proved successful in treating toxic goiter—a noncancerous condition in which the thyroid is overactive. Similarly radiophosphorus has proved the best treatment to date for polycythemia vera—a noncancerous blood abnormality in which there is an overproduction of red corpuscles.

But cancer is a different story. . . .

Less Absorptive

YOU'D think that iodine's affinity for the thyroid gland would automatically solve all cases of thyroid cancer. Unfortunately not.

The cancerous thyroid often does not pick up as much of the radioactive iodine as does normal thyroid tissue. Hence, thyroid cancers cannot always be destroyed by iodine "bombardment."

Radiophosphorus has been tried as a possible cure for leukemia, a cancerous blood condition marked by an excess of white corpuscles. Results have been no better than those achieved with X-ray. The disease can be modified temporarily, but not cured.

A Nation-wide research effort is under way to extend the uses of radioiodine, radiophosphorus and possibly radiosodium. But a drawback to sodium is that it spreads pretty generally throughout the body. Concentration at a particular site may prove difficult.

A tiny step has been taken toward finding a "Trojan Horse" that might carry radioipdine to cancerous tissue other than the thyroid. At the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cencer Research in New York, nature's "antibodies" are being used as carriers in animal tests. Antibodies are substances in the tissues which act in opposition to certain harmful materials, such as toxins and bacteria.

Sloan-Kettering researchers have extracted antibodies from the livers and kidneys of rats and mice. They've "tagged" these antibodies with radioiodine and reinjected them into other rats and mice. The antibodies head straight for the liver and kidneys, carryjng strong radioactive dosages.

Fleeting Exposure

AT Massachusetts General Hospital radiocarbon is being incorporated into protein compounds that are rapidly absorbed in cancerous tissue in experimental animals.

(While radiocarbon has a long-lasting radiation, researchers hope its use in proteins might allow it to be quickly eliminated from the system after doing its work.)

But the Atomic Energy Commission, in its latest report to Congress, emphasizes that most of the investigations are still within the area of fundamental research.

"Effective radiotherapy for cancer must wait upon a better understanding of basic bodily processes," the commission says, "and the same is true of all future applications of radiotherapy."

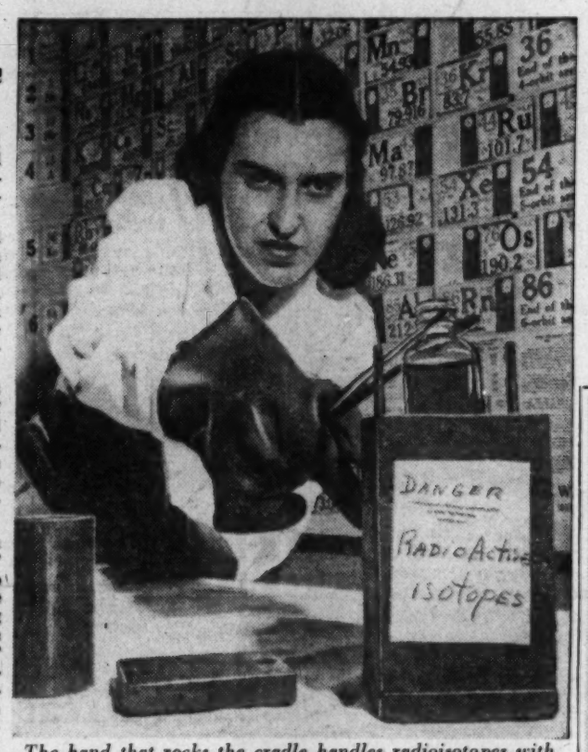
Researchers have another line of attack for possible use in external cancer. They are studying the possibilities of using radioisotopes of gold, cobalt and tantalum made into "needles" to be inserted into cancerous tissue.

A few cases of malignancy already have been treated with radioactive gold by other methods —by direct injection into a tumor or by putting the gold in a material that is "attracted" to certain areas of the body. Results still are under appraisal.

Calcium 'Spreads'

STILL another possibility in the cancer field is the radioisotope of calcium. It is nonpoisonous and its radiation duration is relatively short. But, like sodium, it doesn't concentrate very well in specific areas.

Researchers are hopeful that still other isotopes may show some promise. But in the case of a disease when the raising of false hopes is such a saddening thing, they are not going out on a limb.



The hand that rocks the cradle handles radioisotopes with the respect they deserve. Infinite care is used in preparing them for human ingestion, and their radioactivity is checekd even after they enter the alimentary canal. Maine Alert for Smoke Signals

By Leonard J. Cohen

PORTLAND, ME., AUG. 14.—Maine people, in the grip of a drought for the second year in a row, are again haunted by the specter of forest fires.

They remember vividly the raging flames that swept parched woodland and leaped into towns and villages to take a toll of 16 lives and 1000 homes, that left 2500 homeless and destroyed 15 million dollars worth of property.

That was in October.

Their fears this year may be dissipated by normal autumn rains, but as of today the State's forests are in a much more dangerous condition than they were last August.

For a year, rainfall in Maine has been below normal. Last month it was only 30 per cent of normal in the southern part of the State.

This year the State is in a somewhat better position to fight forest fires. It is more alert to the danger. It has more equipment and more trained men. It has a new, energetic Forest Commissioner.

Individual towns have been buying equipment wholesale — tank trucks, trailer pumps, back pumps, thousands of feet of hose and new fire engines. Some towns—like ruined Bar Harbor—are maintaining constant motor patrols.

The State has $1,500,000 worth of Government surplus equipment, much of it flown into Maine at the height of last year's emergency.

Epidemics Suggest New Theories

Polio 'Progresses' With Science

By Lester Grant

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Two of modern society's proudest achievements — improvement in sanitation and the increased speed of transportation—may be contributing, paradoxically, to the rising tide of poliomyletis in the United States, doctors suggested today.

This is one of a number of theories—each of them open to some question—which attempt to account for the general upsurge of infantile paralysis in this Nation in the last five years.

Dr. Hart E. Van Riper, medical director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, pointed today to three possible explanations, among others:

Dr. Van Riper said, however, that this would not account for all of the increase or possibly for even an appreciable percentage of it.

1. Case finding and diagnosis are improved over 20 years ago, which means that investigators may be uncovering cases which were missed in the past. In other words, there was more poliomyelitis say, 20 years ago, than the record showed.

2. In the brave new world, where man hopes to fly faster than the speed of sound, the localizing of epidemics becomes more and more difficult. An outbreak in North Carolina one day can lead to an outbreak in, say Los Angeles, the next. The virus can climb on an airplane with its host, man.

3. Man can build a resistance to certain diseases by being exposed to these diseases in mild form. He can acquire a relative immunity through exposure to the disease in such small doses, so to speak, that the infection is not powerful enough to overwhelm him but is powerful enough to summon bodily defenses to his protection. And these defenses guard him against future infections for a certain number of years.

In the case of poliomyelitis, improved sanitation is believed to have eliminated many sources of infection. It has thus reduced a person's chances of exposure to the virus in a degree that would confer a natural immunity. Therefore, relatively more persons are reaching adulthood today with relatively less natural immunity.

This theory is supported in part by observations that where sanitation is not up to American standards, as in Oriental countries, there is relatively less infantile paralysis than in the United States. Furthermore, Americans going to the Orient seem to be less resistant to the disease than the natives.

Age Records Conflict

THIS theory has a questionable side to it in that older age groups often have higher attack rates than younger age groups, a point brought out by Dr. Albert B. Sabin of Cincinnati at the recent International Poliomyelitis Conferenee here.

He argued that if the so-called latent immunity theory were sound, then older age groups would stand less chance of being attacked by the virus than the younger, since however small the opportunity of meeting the virus in a hygienic community, the older group must contain a larger percentage of immunes than the younger.

In Sweden, however, the older age groups often have higher attack rates than the younger in hygienic communities. Therefore, the latent immunity idea must be supported by the hypothesis that the chances of exposure to the virus are fewer in infancy than at an older age, which, many argue, has no basis in observed facts.

But Dr. Van Riper pointed out that it is possible that in modern American society, fewer children are exposed to the virus—because of better sanitation and more hygienic living—and it is not until they reach their teens or young adulthood—when they begin to mingle consistently in large groups—that they really get an exposure to the disease. He says this is a plausible hypothesis, but only a hypothesis.

Empty Charge?

Corporation Counsel Vernon West appears to be thoroughly entitled to the inference he has drawn from Judge Ellen K. Raedy's failure to substantiate her charge that Municipal Court prosecutors are playing favorites in handling driving-while-drunk cases. "The conclusion is obvious," said Mr. West after waiting six days for a reply to his request for actual instances of favoritism, "that if the judge had any proof she would give it to me. And so far, I have not even been given an acknowledgment to my request."

Judge Raedy has had ample opportunity to learn of late that candor is the best antidote for error. She may have been guilty of hasty judgment or irritability when she made the charge of favoritism in a "bench conference" a week ago. If so, an admission that she was mistaken would dispose of the matter very simply; unintentional error is forgivable. But to leave an error uncorrected is somewhat like leaving the scene of an accident. Judge Raedy ought to know as well as anybody that the effect of this is to compound the consequences. Since she cast a very unpleasant reflection on the integrity of the corporation counsel's office, either a justification or an apology seems inescapably in order.

Confidential Files

It is a fact that Senator Ferguson's investigation committee is far more punctilious about procedure than the House Committee on Un-American Activities. We are glad to testify to this. We also accept the word of Mr. William P. Rogers, chief counsel of the Ferguson Committee, that in the Remington case the Senator did not ask for the loyalty file of the employe in question, but only for the employment record. In general there is no difference between the two terms, but in this particular case, Senator Ferguson specified the exact data he wanted, and it seems to us that his committee is entitled to them. In his consistent stand against handing over loyalty files about employes, the President is acting, in our opinion, in the public interest; but in this instance he is in the wrong, and Senator Ferguson is in the right.

It is a pity that Senator Ferguson did not make this clear to the newspaper reporters. The newspapers, reporting the speech in the Senate on August 7 in which he raised the question of the impeachment of the President, carried the report that the Senator wanted "the loyalty files." Most of them relied on the news agencies for their reports, presumably because of the press of news on this end-of-the-session day. The Associated Press said that "his (Senator Ferguson's) complaint was against the Executive's refusal to let the lawmakers have loyalty investigation records of Government workers." The United Press reported, "Mr. Ferguson denounced Mr. Truman for refusing this week to turn over to congressional investigators of alleged Red espionage the loyalty files on Federal employes involved." Our editorial was based on these reports. The speech itself, which substantiates in general the statement by Mr. Rogers, was not immediately available, and Mr. Rogers himself had gone out of town, and so was equally unavailable.

Senator Ferguson has a perfect right to get the specific information he is seeking. If that is all he wants, the President's refusal is hard to understand. A check in this matter is in order. Indeed, on August 7 we editorialized on "Faulty Hiring," and commented adversely on Federal administrators who were "occasionally very naive or very reckless in their hiring of personnel." Senator Ferguson raised the same question in his August 7 speech. He also cited the President's veto of the bill authorizing the Senate members of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy to require reports from the FBI on nominees to the Atomic Energy Commission. These men are appointable with the advice and consent of the Senate; so that they are in a different category from existing employes appointed by the Executive alone. On May 18 we criticized the President for this lack of cooperation with the Senate. This is what we then said:

> It is well to remember, in dealing with questions of this sort, that, while we have a separation of executive and legislative powers, we have one government and not two. An arbitrary attitude on the part of either Congress or the President can upset the normal cooperative relationship which alone enables the American system to function satisfactorily. Congress has attempted various encroachments upon the executive, and it may be that the President feels it necessary to strike back in a narrow spirit to sustain his position. We cannot help thinking, however, that in this instance he pushes his argument too far.

Again the President seems to have pushed the argument too far, though in his general attitude toward the release of confidential files in matters within his exclusive jurisdiction, he remains, to our view, on sound ground.

Third Anniversary

Three years ago yesterday the Japanese agreed to lay down their arms, and the series of wars beginning in 1939 came to an end. The world did not rejoice as exuberantly as it did in 1917. It knew that the problem of reestablishing peace would be vastly more difficult than the business of waging war. Even the older generation in 1917 knew it. For the anniversary that is observed in relation to the First World War has remained down the years the day of armistice, not the date of the Versailles Treaty of peace. But in 1945 the shape of our present troubles was clearly limned in the pattern of events; the Soviet Union was already reneging on the pledges that had been made six months earlier at Yalta.

At the Crimean resort the Russians promised free elections to the captive countries back of what Mr. Churchill subsequently called the iron curtain. This was in February, 1945. In July, when the Potsdam Conference was held, Stalin is said to have confessed that free elections were inadmissible. The authority is Philip E. Moseley, one of the American experts on Russia at Potsdam, writing in a current headline booklet put out by the Foreign Policy Association. Stalin is said to have observed that Moscow could not hold free elections in our sense of the phrase because of the certainty that on the morrow of war the vote would be anti-Soviet. Those who have participated in the great events since 1945 are convinced that this decision flowed out of a much greater decision which Moscow arrived at between Yalta and Potsdam. This was to reject cooperation with the West and return to conflict. It is said that Kalinin, the Soviet Union's peasant President, now dead, led the procooperation school; Molotov the proconflict school, or, maybe, Zhdanoff. As is said to be customary, this latter school won out when Stalin sided with it. The decision called for the resumption of the world revolution, and this meant that the Red army henceforth should serve the Communist Party, not the state. Soon afterward Zhukov, associated with the cooperation school, was shifted from Berlin to the lesser post at Odessa as part of the arrangement for conflict.

The result is a condition between the USSR and the West which, in John Foster Dulles' words, is "not peace and not war." It requires the utmost art and the utmost craft on the West's part successfully to wage it. This sort of "war," unfortunately, is not suited to the American genius of direct action. But there are exceptional Americans who have the aptitude. We would single out the many-sided General MacArthur in Japan, a great soldier, a fine administrator and diplomatist and a proconsul to the manner born. However, circumstances have worked in his favor, for he is not harassed with the multipower coequality of rule with which General Clay has to cope in Germany. And he has profited from the retention of Japanese government and the Japanese Emperor. The unconditional surrender formula as applied to Germany was the greatest folly committed in the war, and the qualification of it in relation to Japan, due in great measure to the Byrnes-Forrestal effort, is what we particularly recalled on the three-year anniversary of the end of hostilities. What a struggle common sense had to wage with the bitter-enders and the so-called liberals!

As Taft Sees It

Whether or not one agrees with his conclusions, Senator Taft has done his party a signal service by issuing a thoughtful and on the whole surprisingly objective statement in defense of the legislative record of the special session, particularly of the credit control bill and the housing measure. Mr. Taft does not make the mistake of overrating the efficacy of the credit-control program as a means of curbing inflation. On the contrary, he realizes that it is a powerful weapon that has to be used cautiously at the present time "in order not to go too far." In other words, it is essential to avoid undue restraints on credit operations that might lead to an undesired degree of price deflation and bring on a depression. He also admits frankly that housing credit is one of the elements adding to inflation, but points out that the purpose of the housing bill passed by Congress is to encourage construction of small homes and low-cost rental housing projects. Whether this purpose can be realized in view of the existing strain on construction capacity (due to the great volume of residential building) is doubtful. But that is a moot question which for obvious reasons is not discussed in a document designed for partisan use.

Mr. Taft has been commendably candid in expressing disappointment at the failure of Congress to approve a public housing program and he promises to reintroduce the public housing bill at the beginning of the next session. He also vigorously attacks the Senate's ineffective cloture rule which made possible the disgraceful filibuster that prevented Senate action on the anti-poll-tax bill. The present situation is "intolerable," he says, and "may at times threaten the national security." A committee of the Republican conference is, however, preparing an amendment to the cloture rule that will be brought up at the next session. Mr. Taft gives assurance that this amendment will be determinedly pushed, even though it, too, might be held up by a prolonged filibuster.

The fundamental differences between Congress and the President are attributed by Mr. Taft to a difference in Government philosophy. To a certain extent this is true. While most Congressmen, regardless of political affiliations, favor Government aid or Government regulations that benefit their constituents, the Eightieth Congress unquestionably leaned toward laissez faire principles as opposed to Government regulation or regimentation of agriculture, labor and industry. There was a difference of emphasis that Mr. Taft quite properly considers an important cause of the quarrel between Congress and the President. The difference found expression in the President's request for powers to fix wages and prices and ration commodities and in the opposition of Congress to the grant of such far-reaching powers in peacetime. Mr. Taft sticks to his opinion that those powers are not needed and that there is no present emergency which would justify the President in asking for them. On the contrary, he cites the drop in wheat and corn prices as one of the many reasons for believing that we are in a trend to a stabilized price level—a conclusion with which this newspaper agrees.

Atomic Information

Writing in the current issue of the University of Chicago Law Review, Herbert S. Marks upbraids the American press and public for failure to inquire into and criticize the activities of the Atomic Energy Commission. As to the substance of this charge by the former general counsel of the agency, it is beyond denial. Despite the flood of material written about atomic energy in general, about various aspects of the McMahon bill, about the issue of civilian versus military control and about reappointment of the commissioners, the fact is, as Mr. Marks observes, that so far as specific decisions of the Atomic Energy Commission are concerned, "critical analysis and insight have been negligible."

The lack of inquiry and criticism cannot be condoned solely on account of the requirements of secrecy, although these help to explain a general reluctance to ask questions which may be indiscreet. The awe inspired by the destructive potentialities of atomic bombs and the mystery of nuclear physics are also inhibiting factors. But the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission has urged repeatedly that the public take an interest in atomic developments. "There is nothing in the nature of atomic energy," he declared, "nor in the necessary requirements of secrecy in certain areas of knowledge that prevents the people as a whole from exercising their historic role of judging what shall be the course of public policy." And every day the commission is making decisions concerning methods of developing atomic energy and industrial applications of it which may vitally affect the national economy.

"Throughout the history of this country," says Mr. Marks, "we have rarely tolerated departure from the principle that the chief protection of society against incompetence, unfairness and corruption in government is the unlimited opportunity for public scrutiny and protest. We have believed also that this is the chief means of assuring that officials will pursue the course upon which the public is set . . . Perhaps the test of our faith is our firm belief that it is the fatal weakness of communism and all other forms of totalitarianism that they can find no substitute for the self-correcting process of open discussion and criticism which is the democratic tradition."

The failure to bring the Atomic Energy Commission within the compass of the democratic process may have disastrous effects upon the public and the commission alike. So far as the commission is concerned, it may be said, as Mr. Marks puts it, to have deprived it of an "important source of strength—the strength that comes from constructive exposure of weakness and error and the opportunity thereby created for correction." Worse, it may lay the commission open to that subtle form of corruption which is the inescapable consequence of unchecked authority. From the point of view of the public, it amounts to nothing less than a relinquishment of control over a major element in the world's destiny. Secrecy which so insulates the management of public affairs is not to be equated with security. It seems fair to conclude, indeed, that the risk of disclosing what ought to remain secret is on the whole less menacing to the safety of the American state than the risk entailed in ignorance, indifference and abdication of responsibility.

SAGITTARIUS

I should like to see the centaur Sagittarius,
Fleet-hoofed, lithe-limbed, lordly to match the distance,
Twanging the bow as a god might twang the lightning,
Charging the arrow-flight with an eye of prescience,
Sending his heart, himself in the winging shaft.
Once in the forest green with the shadows shifting,
Willow and oak and poplar and silver maple,
Steady of hand as a painter drawing frescoes
Out of the plaster, I should like to see
Sagittarius
Sending his heart, himself in a winging shaft.
When I was a boy I had an arrow, an Indian arrow.
It sang in the wind as a bird might sing upsoaring,
Seeking its end for the joy of the flight and the seeking,
Making a neon arch in the summer sunshine,
Changing my heart, my will to a winging shaft.
Somewhere beyond the smoke and the scream of bombers,
Wanton and wild and artless as death, at dawn-flush
With water flowing and white clouds changing patterns,
I should like to see the centaur Sagittarius
Flinging his heart, himself in a winging shaft.

Crisis In Education

No other institution in a democracy has so much to do with the development of effective adult citizens as does the school. Because this fact is so universally recognized, it is difficult to understand the obvious neglect of adequate financial support of the schools of the United States.

Today, for example, there are more than 110,000 teachers in the schools of America who lack standard qualifications expected of teachers. There are many thousands more who hold degrees or have had training at substandard institutions.

But even more serious is the fact that more than three million children between the ages of 6 and 17 are not at school at all in the United States. These children are deprived of an education as the result of the closing of more than 70,000 schools across the country.

The American public cannot exact professional standards of a teacher whose salary is below the earnings of common labor. A teacher must be given adequate financial remuneration for the years of training she has undergone, for the years when she might have been earning an income instead of paying for an education.

Until the American public awakens to the reality of the present crisis, there is no hope for improvement. There are only 9 per cent as many teachers being trained today as were trained in prewar times and, of these, only about half actually enter the profession.

Pentagon Fare

I work at the Pentagon. It's a long way over there. And a long hike inside the thing when you finally get there.

But what hurts most about the Pentagon is the extra bus fare. During the war Capital Transit carried us without extra charge. Then that company succeeded in unloading, and we found ourselves encumbered with books of tickets, with the through fare upped to 13 1/3 cents. Recently we were informed that the combination rate would go up to 16 cents. With that news to cheer us up for the weekend we picked up the Saturday paper and learned that beginning the following Monday CTC would not honor the combination tickets; we would have to pay a straight 10 cent fare.

The Sunday paper gave us a little respite; the company would honor the tickets on Monday pending a court decision that day. The court rendered a temporary ruling, but we were told that a permanent ruling would be made by a three-man court. At this stage we never knew what we were supposed to pay whenever we got on a CTC bus. Then came another ruling: the company would continue to accept the tickets, plus 3 cents, for which we would be given a receipt. So now we are paying a grand total of 19 cents for the privilege of riding to the Pentagon. At any rate, I believe it is 19 cents. It is really quite confusing and a complicated transaction for driver and passenger.

CTC, as usual, will get what it asks for, and presently we shall be paying 20 cents for the thrilling ride to the Pentagon. That makes 40 cents a day, $2 a week, $104 a year.

I believe that Arlington County and Alexandria should be given back to the District. Then, I suppose Capital Transit would have to run its busses over those areas. But better still, suppose we have a publicly owned and operated metropolitan transit authority. HIRAM PENT.

Draft Protest

On August 9, I read in The Washington Post, "Pastors Day of Mourning Hits at Draft."

I want my son to learn that whatever one cares for, demands some responsibility and hardship. If he wants America as it has always been, to him, the "land of the free and the home of the brave," he must be willing to sacrifice something, even one or two years of his life, for it. He will realize more than ever that this is his country; he had a part in keeping it as he wants it, a strong, fine, free place to live.

And, from a mother's point of view, I am not an ostrich, so with eyes open to an unsettled world, I want my son to know how to protect himself, yes, and to learn "unquestioning obedience." It never hurt anyone—and some day it may save his life. MARY H. BREE.

"No" On DP's

I have read with interest in The Washington Post, August 7, your news story "Capitol Hill Hands Dewey 'No' on DPs," which says: "Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidental nominee, got his first 'No' from Capitol Hill yesterday when a Senate subcommittee turned down his request to liberalize the displaced persons law at this special session."

Mr. Truman, as well as Mr. Dewey, has tried to put pressure on Congress on matters of recent immigration legislation. This reminds one of the time back in 1928 when both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Smith opposed the national origins law. Mr. Hoover beat Mr. Smith for the Presidency, but Mr. Hoover split his party wide open when he tried to prevent national origins from becoming the law.

Congress is a lot nearer to the people than the President, but if Mr. Dewey and Mr. Truman want to know how the people think on the subject of immigration, they would do well to look over the American Institute of Public Opinion survey which appeared in The Washington Post and other newspapers on January 13, 1946. This impartial survery indicated that only 5 per cent of the American people wanted more immigration from Europe than we received before the war.

Newfoundland's Plebiscite

The recent plebiscite on whether Newfoundland should return to responsible government or join the Canadian confederation has ended with a four per cent majority in favor of joining Canada. This extremely small percentage (in spite of the Canadian Prime Minister's stating that confederation would be considered only if there was a substantial majority) has now been definitely accepted by both the British government and the Canadian cabinet as sufficient to consummate their plans. That it will be ratified is accepted as a foregone conclusion.

When the responsible government of Newfoundland rather than default on its bond interest agreed to a suspension of its government in 1933 and its replacement by a commission to be appointed by the British government, an act, known as the Newfoundland act was passed by the British government in which it was clearly stated that when Newfoundland was again financially self-supporting, responsible government or the wish of the people would be restored. As a means to ascertain whether Newfoundland was self-supporting, a year ago, delegates were elected to a national convention. A small but very vocal minority led by J. R. Smallwood succeeded in getting the agreement of the convention to send a delegation to Ottawa to request terms of union. The British and Canadian governments were extremely agreeable to the delegation.

The majority of the national convention opposed sending the delegation on the principle that negotiations were outside its authority and that the restoration of responsible government should precede confederation or any other change in national status. But, by holding out family allowances and increased old-age pensions as an attraction, the confederate members created a public demand, claiming that a large number of people had communicated with them demanding that the delegation should be sent.

A much larger number of the national convention requested permission to send a delegation to the United States Government to discuss an economic union. The British government refused to permit this delegation to go. When the British government announced that confederation should be on the ballot for a plebiscite, the majority of the national convention protested in vain.

It has often been claimed that the British government did a very unselfish thing by taking over Newfoundland's bonded indebtedness (about 100 million dollars) and putting a commission government in authority. Actually, Britain took this step as a kind of insurance to discourage other dominions and colonies from defaulting on much larger debts.

Incidentally, most of Newfoundland's dollar surplus has been given to Great Britain by the British-controlled commission government. This, if applied to Newfoundland's national debt, would reduce it to nearly half.

By far the greatest number of businessmen in Newfoundland are opposed to confederation, their preference is for closer commercial ties with the United States. The United States has always been considered the logical market for Newfoundland's products and the only real possibility of improving the earnings of the people of Newfoundland. Whenever there seemed any probability of such an agreement being made, the Canadian government has used its influence with the British government to prevent it.

Canada's desire to have Newfoundland seems to be for two main reasons. First, to prevent Newfoundland from entering into closer association with the United States. And second, to assure herself of the complete control of the iron and water power in Newfoundland Labrador. The Canadian government is hopeful that the Labrador iron will change the American-Canadian trade balance in her favor.

I think that it is safe to say that about 75 per cent of the people of Newfoundland would prefer joining the United States to joining Canada.

"Confidential Files"

A Communication

I AM writing to call your attention to certain incorrect facts in your editorial entitled "Confidential Files" of August 11. As you will see, the facts to which I refer are important in that they represent the premise on which the editorial is based.

Your editorial states as follows:

"Think for a moment of the effect on the lives of the affected persons and the conduct of Government of the broadcasting of the particular kind of information that Senator Ferguson is seeking. He wants the confidential file on a Commerce Department employe. This would contain reports of all the investigation agencies, including the FBI and the Loyalty Board. Now the former does not evaluate the data it collects. It gives gossip, malicious as well as friendly, and in fact, any oddment that the investigator happens to pick up. How unfair, how grossly unfair, to circulate this material!"

THIS STATEMENT is wholly inaccurate. The information which the committee is seeking is explicitly set forth in a letter from Senator Ferguson to the Attorney General and is herewith quoted in part:

"I am writing to you now to make certain that there is no misunderstanding as to what the committee wants and why we want it . . .

"Our committee has established by sworn testimony that our Government was put on notice in 1945 that a well organized group of espionage agents representing Russia appeared to be at work within our Government while employed by the United States. This information was supplied to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"Our committee has proved that at least one of the suspects, i. e. Remington, while an extensive investigation was being conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a grand jury, and before any conclusion had been reached as to his guilt or innocence, was transferred to three different top confidential positions in the United States Government where highly guarded strategic information of particular interest to the Russians was fully disclosed to him. Obviously, this illustrates a serious breakdown in our loyalty program. Our inquiry is aimed at how this happened, who was responsible and how such serious mistakes can be avoided in the future.

"With this purpose in mind the committee desires to find out (1) if the interested Government agencies involved were notified of Remington's alleged espionage activities, (2) in what manner, to whom and when was such notice given, (3) what action was taken by Remington's superiors upon receipt of the information."

YOU WILL notice that the committee does not desire reports of investigative agencies, including the FBI and Loyalty Board, nor does it request any gossip, malicious or otherwise. As Remington himself has testified he thinks it is fantastic that he should have held the positions he held while the FBI was investigating him for espionage. The request of the committee is aimed at finding out how this happened; whether our loyalty program or the people conducting it are at fault.

Later in your editorial you state as follows:

"Aside from this argument against disclosure, there is the argument of national defense. It is obvious that the FBI would be disturbed over the disclosure of the agency's sources of information, and rightly. As Justice Jackson said, when he was Attorney General, any handing over of confidential data would be 'of aid and comfort to the very subversive elements against which you wish to protect the country.' Name your sources, and you would soon find them stopped up."

You will see from the following excerpt that again your facts are incorrect. In the letter from Senator Ferguson to the Attorney General he states as follows:

"Let us point out here that our committee does not want to do anything to impair the loyalty program, but instead is most anxious to improve and strengthen it. For this reason we are not requesting the names of any informants, sources of information or investigative techniques. Therefore, if in the notices that were sent to the interested agencies, such material appears we ask that it be deleted. Once this is done, it is difficult to see how meeting our request could in any way impair the loyalty program."

In conclusion, I would like to point out that in the final paragraph of the letter Senator Ferguson said as follows:

"If there are any details about our request which you feel should not be complied with, if you will let us know, we feel sure we can alter it in such a way that we will meet your demands and still provide enough information to continue our inquiry beneficially pursuant to our sworn duty under the law."

Biased Cartoon

The July 30 cartoon by Herblock is to my mind typical of that cartoonist's biased, leftist approach. He attempts to discredit the congressional committee that for my money is conducting a long overdue housecleaning. He simply throws dust in the public eye without admiting or criticizing the very serious situation that brought about the investigation.

Chalk Up Greece to U. S. Credit

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

IT IS about time somebody pointed out that American foreign policy, that always handy whipping boy, has had a vitally important success. Almost unnoticed, Greece has been saved for the Western world. Soviet control of the whole eastern Mediterranean, which would have meant something close to victory for the Soviets in the great contest now in progress, has been averted.

This has been accomplished, thanks to the efforts of the United States, and despite loud protestations that those efforts were foredoomed to failure.

Only nine months ago, before the American program in Greece had really taken hold, the odds seemed hardly better than even that Greece could be saved. Almost three quarters of the land area of Greece was dominated by the guerillas, backed by the Russian satellite states and commanded by Communist Gen. Markos Vifiades.

Within the last 10 days, Markos has fled to Albania. His mountain stronghold in the Grammos area has been cut off. A great deal of immensely difficult mopping up remains to be done. But one thing is clear. Short of war between West and East, there is not the slightest chance that Greece will fall within the Soviet sphere of domination.

Between Halves System

THE Greek army has done the fighting, using British and American arms. But American Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet and his three hundred American officers can take a good deal of the credit for pulling the Greek army out of the lethargy and defeatism into which it had sunk since its magnificent showing against Mussolini's legions. Van Fleet is a former football coach and he has employed much the same methods for instilling the old team spirit in the dispirited Greek soldiers as he used in his football days. Oddly enough, this peculiarly American technique seems to have worked wonders.

The strategy was also largely of Van Fleet's conception. He used a two-pronged attack along the Albanian border to cut off the guerillas from their satellite supply bases. It was Van Fleet's assessment that this strategy must force the satellite either to join the civil war overtly, or to abandon Markos, and that the satellites would choose the second course. He was right, and his strategy is now succeeding.

This success is the most important consequence of the American effort in Greece, but it is not the only one. Last winter the Greek government was in chaos, and the Greek economy was suffering from galloping inflation. More than three years since the end of the war, reconstruction of the war-ravaged country had hardly started. The American mission, headed by Gov. Dwight Griswold, was still green at its strange task and had hardly begun to function.

Already, the Greek government has been quietly reorganized. As a start, eight thousand of Greece's underpaid and exceedingly purchaseable civil servants have been dropped from the rolls. Despite loud cries from the rich crop of red tape artists in Athens, the government is being decentralized. The Ministry of Supply, the most corrupt and inefficient department in a government remarkable for its corruption and inefficiency, has been restaffed from top to bottom.

Water Lifeline Restored

MEANWHILE, the Greek economy is slowly being forced back on an even keel. The Greek budget is balanced. Currency in circulation is being steadily reduced. The disastrous inflation has been stopped dead in its tracks.

While the civil war has been fought, reconstruction has gone forward. The vital Corinth Canal was reopened a month ago, amid much rejoicing. The three most important Greek harbors are repaired and work is in progress on others. Eight hundred miles of roads, hardly more than a collection of potholes a few months ago, have been resurfaced. In a word, Greece, however, slowly and limpingly, is beginning to come to life.

There is much left to do. The guerillas are not yet beaten, the Greek economy is still unhealthy and, above all, the Greek government is still no model of either efficiency or liberal democracy. But that so much has already been accomplished in a few months suggests certain conclusions, whose meaning extends well beyond the borders of Greece.

One conclusion is simply that first things must come first. It is fatuous to expect a healthy political life in a country whose very life is threatened by a civil war sponsored from without, and whose economy is teetering on the brink of collapse. When the civil war is finally brought to an end, and when the Greek economy is again functioning, there will be a new, free election. This will probably take place next spring. Then, and then only, will real reform of the corrupt and reactionary Greek government be possible.

The second conclusion which our experience in Greece suggests is that, political innocents though Americans may be, we are still capable of accomplishing a good deal more than many Americans had supposed. The fact is that, messy as it was, the job in Greece had to be done. And it is being done. Call it imperialism if you like, but it is saving Greece for the free world, and saving the free world in the process.

Counterfeit Scents

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

SPARKILL, N. Y., Aug. 14.—The lady with the mink coat was in tears.

Coat and all, she had chanced upon a skunk at a country home. The coat no longer was an object of admiration.

"So someone sent her to see me, and a bottle of this did the trick," said Charles V. Sparhawk, a chemist who works with animal odors.

The bottle contained a chemical (named Skunkadora) that takes the skunk smell out of anything. It smells sweet, like perfume. Sparhawk demonstrated. He wet his hands with some skunk-odor liquid, then applied the smell remover. It worked.

This invention came about because a friend had a new car that had harbored a frightened skunk in the back seat. The friend begged Sparhawk to do something about it. The smell-remover resulted. He also succeeded in using the skunk secretion as a fixative for perfumes, as a substitute for civet or alone as an intensifier. Some of the skunk-smell remover is used in the process. It neutralizes the chemicals in the skunk secretion that smell bad.

Conversationalist

SPARHAWK makes a business of talking to animals through scents. Animals, he explains, talk with their noses. Smells tell a story to them. By duplicating certain smells, man can command animals to stay away, or can invite them into traps.

Rats, for example, are afraid of skunks. So Sparhawk produced a chemical with a slight skunk odor, strong enough to be smelled by a rat but not by the human nose.

Muskrat trappers in Canada were having trouble with beavers, whose dams flooded or dried up muskrat homes. Beavers are afraid of otters. So Sparhawk produced an otter odor to keep beavers away.

Orchardists were having trouble with deer that ate the fresh young shoots and branches that held the buds. Sparhawk concocted an odor of wolf and fresh deer blood. The deer shied away.

During the war, Sparhawk developed a chemical to keep German dogs from trailing paratroopers. Again it was a combination. The odor was one that would attract dogs, but in the concoction was an odorless chemical that would paralyze a dog's sense of smell.

A strong extract of deer gland can be used to train fox hounds not to go after deer, Sparhawk added. It's so strong that it's sickening.

Sparhawk currently is experimenting with smells to help fishermen. The odors of worms, snails, crawfish or other bait can be duplicated and placed on lures, he says, and another smell can be substituted if the fish doesn't go for the first one.

Purely Poison

HIS latest invention abandons the field of smell. It's an odorless, colorless and tasteless gas for use against rats and mice. The gas is compressed inside a metal cylinder and released through a hose in an invisible cloud.

Demonstrating, Sparkhawk released some of the gas inside a big glass jar. A white mouse in the jar began racing about, and rolled over dead within 10 seconds.

He hasn't disclosed the killing agent. It works, he said, by paralyzing the animal's heart. But Sparkhawk said that human beings could breathe some of the gas without any effect. A lot of the gas, in an enclosed room, could kill a man, or a horse, he added, but human beings would never be likely to get enough of the gas.

In holds of ships, it would be much safer than poisonous gases now used against rodents. He said he has eaten cake and other food sprayed with the gas, and that animals can eat rats killed by the gas without any effect.

The big advantage, he said, is that the rat or mouse has no choice in avoiding the gas. It can't be seen or smelled, and there is nothing to eat. The killer gas still is in the experimental stage.

Brain Surgery Co-op

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 7 (AP).—A bold brain operation to help the mentally ill can be made better by careful teamwork, a new medical study shows.

The operation is the frontal lobotomy, in which surgeons cut the connections of the forepart of the brain with the rest. It's done through two holes, about the size of quarters, made above the forehead.

About 5000 lobotomies have been done in this country since 1935. They are used largely for schizophrenia, or split personality, the most common form of mental disease and the most hopeless. There have been successes and failures. It never has been possible to predict results.

Cooperating in the new study are the Connecticut State Hospital, Fairfield State Hospital, the Institute of Living and the psychiatric clinic of Yale University Medical School. Such collaboration between public and private mental hospitals and a university is unusual. It provides research and clincial facilities not otherwise available.

All four institutions use the same methods in classifying patients, in follow-up treatment and in the extent of the surgery itself. This eliminates many variables, and gives the clearest picture yet of just what happens due to the brain operation itself.

Many Can Work

AMONG 200 patients, 65 per cent showed great improvement or full recovery within a year after operation, said Dr. Burness E. Moore, Yale psychiatrist who reported the results, and Dr. Benjamin Simon of the Connecticut State Hospital, chairman of the cooperative committee. Dr. Samuel Friedman, clinical director of Fairfield Hospital, and Dr. Joseph Farmer of the Institute of Living also worked on the committee.

By a year's end, about half the patients could be sent home. Twenty per cent were able to work again at jobs of the same skills as before The patients had been in mental hospitals an average of five years.

Although 35 per cent were only slightly helped or not helped, many could be moved out of violent or closed wards. In about 75 per cent of the cases, the operation cured the patients of the most disturbing kinds of behavior.

Not every patient can or should be operated upon. Those who do have lobotomies still need psychotherapy, occupational therapy and social service aids for rehabilitation.

Personality Changes

THE operation has its bad side too, said Dr. Frederick C. Redlich, head of the Yale psychiatry department. The front part of the brain is put out of action. This means that finer aspects of personality and social behavior may be impaired in some cases. But these defects are usually minor compared to the total incapacity before operation.

Loss of this part of the brain's function doesn't affect intelligence, but it may lead to an "I don't care attitude," to lessened activity, untidiness or other results. Some of these can be corrected by training.

Sex and intelligence don't seem to make any difference in whether the operation will have good results. Age makes little difference, except that there was slightly less chance for good results in middle-aged people. The operation seems to have a better chance of succeeding if there is some known cause for the mental illness.

Certain types of schizophrenics react better than others. The operation has also been used successfully for manic depressive psychoses uncured by other methods, and for relief of incessant pain. Lobotomy doesn't take away the cause of the pain, but the patient seems not to feel or worry about it so much.

The same amount of brain cutting is being done on several hundred patients. With others, the surgeons are varying the amount of surgery. This should help show how much surgery should be done in different kinds of cases.

New sun glasses developed by Bausch & Lomb are coated with a thin metallic film. The film becomes denser and darker toward the top edge, cutting light transmission to only one tenth of 1 per cent. This system, the Rochester, N. Y., firm says, solves the problem of unequal glare intensities. It "will, for example, enable airline pilots to look at the sun and in the next glance at the plane's instrument panel without eye strain." The metallic coating is a nickel-chromium-iron alloy applied under high vacuum.

Truman Banks on 'Whistle Stops'

By Drew Pearson

DEMOCRATIC Congressmen Melvin Price of Illinois and Frank M. Karsten of Missouri got a lecture from President Truman on the importance of the small town vote.

Calling at the White House, Price and Karsten assured the President of their support next November. Whereupon Mr. Truman gave them a homely discourse on the coming campaign.

"I'm not worried about the election," he said. "We're going to win, that's sure. I know that's sure because we're right and they're wrong.

"I'm going to make it a rip-snorting, back-platform campaign to what Taft calls all the whistle stops, but I call them the heart of America. When they count the whistle stop votes, Taft may be in for a big surprise. I think the whistle stops will make the difference between victory and defeat."

Truman also expressed confidence that he would carry much of the farm vote. He said that Republican opposition to the world wheat agreement would play into Democratic hands.

"We have our biggest wheat crop in history," he said. "The Russians have their biggest wheat crop in history. The farmers know that if there isn't some agreement to protect them, all the farmers will be hurt. I am going to explain this to the farmers in the campaign."

'Grills' Colleague

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, but one member of the House Un-American Activities Committee has been under suspicion. He was even subjected to a preliminary probe by Chairman Parnell Thomas of New Jersey.

The Congressman is Representative John McDowell of Wilkinsburg, Pa., just outside Pittsburgh. McDowell is a stanch Republican with just as conservative a voting record as Parnell Thomas himself.

Nevertheless, Thomas solemnly called McDowell into a secret session the other day in the presence of Committee Counsel Robert Stripling to confront him with some un-American evidence. Handing him the letterhead of a leftwing organization on which was listed "John McDowell, Pittsburgh, Pa.," Thomas asked the Congressman why he had lent his name to a leftwing group.

Representative McDowell explained that it was a different McDowell.

"He moved from Erie down to Pittsburgh," remarked McDowell, thinking it was all a joke. "He has caused me lots of trouble before."

But Thomas didn't seem to think it was such a humorous matter. Though he accepted McDowell's explanation, he appeared unhappy.

Note to Thomas—Please don't blame Representative McDowell for leaking the recent news stories about you which appeared in this column. Honest Injun, Representative McDowell had nothing to do with them.

Bradley's Inspection Tour

BEST INDICATION that the Western powers don't anticipate early hostilities in Europe is that the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Omar Bradley, is making plans for an extended vacation trip.

General Bradley will combine vacation with business late this month and make a one-month tour of American outposts in the Far East. Though nobody will confirm it, it's considered likely that Bradley will take to General MacArthur another invitation from President Truman to come home and receive a hero's welcome. MacArthur has indicated that if he returns from Japan it will not be until after the November election.

Note—United States diplomats predict Russia's next zone of intensive operations will be the Far East—the area Bradley is visiting.

Merry-Go-Round

AFTER Congressman Hugh Scott of Philadelphia was made chairman of the Republican National Committee, he took his wife out to a bench in the Willow Grove Amusement Park where they could get away from telephones. It was the only place they could get any privacy . . . One Republican who has worked behind the scenes for lower prices is Representative Karl Stefan of Nebraska. He fought for and got higher appropriations for trust busting, has also pointed to the fact that eggs have sold for 35 cents a dozen in Nebraska while they were 91 cents in Washington. Stefan proposes a separate transportation agency to help equalize the distribution of food. Stefan worked so hard on trust busting activities that dour Congressman John Taber, czar of the Appropriations Committee, got irked . . . Some people are wondering why Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts, such a great friend of the veteran, refused to sign the discharge petition to force the housing bill out of the Rules Committee. Housing is what veterans need most.

Public Housing Vote

FINAL ROLL CALLS are frequently lost in the rush of news that comes out in the closing days of any Congress. However, millions of veterans and others anxious for homes will be interested in the final Senate vote on public housing.

Eleven Southern Democrats deserted their party's leadership to approve the real estate lobby amendment sponsored by Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin. This amendment killed Government-sponsored public housing and slum clearance, but provided juicy Government loans for private real estate ventures.

If the 11 Democrats had voted with their party, public housing would have passed the Senate.

At the same time 11 Republicans deserted Taft leadership and voted with most of the Democrats for public housing and against the real estate lobby.

The Southern Democrats who voted against their party were: Byrd (Va.); Eastland (Miss.); Hoey (N. C.); Holland (Fla.); McClellan Ark.); McKellar (Tenn.); O'Conor (Md.); Robertson (Va.); Stennis (Miss.); Thomas (Okla.); Umstead (N. C.).

The 11 Republicans who voted for public housing were Aiken (Vt.); Baldwin (Conn.); Bridges (N. H.); Cooper (Ky.); Flanders (Vt.); Langer (N. Dak.); Lodge (Mass.); Morse (Oreg.); Saltonstall (Mass.); Tobey (N. H.); Young (N. C.).

Navy's Potential Airlift

THE vitriolic battle over the 70-group Air Force has been pretty well forgotten. However, biggest proof that Air Secretary Symington was right and Defense Secretary Forrestal wrong about the importance of air power is being demonstrated around the clock in Berlin today.

However, without detracting from the magnificent job being done by the Air Force over Berlin, now might be a good time to demonstrate Army-Navy coordination. It happens that the Navy has the biggest air freight carriers of either branch—the Mars flying boats. Now operating to Hawaii, they carry 35 tons each, about ten times the cargo of the DC-3s, mainstay of the phenomenal airlift into Berlin.

Flying the 200-mile hop from Hamburg to Berlin, the Mars boats would need little gasoline, therefore could carry more than 35 tons of freight. They would also have the following advantages: (1) greater lift per gallon of gas; (2) fewer planes in the air corridor with less traffic congestion; (3) the trip from Hamburg to Berlin is less than the present flight from Frankfort to Berlin (300 miles).

So the Navy might get a little practice at unification by augmenting the Army over Berlin.

Note—The British carry their freight partly by Sunderland flying boats from Hamburg. The boats make two trips a day with five tons each. Meanwhile, our food is taken by rail from Bremen to Frankfort, then by air to Berlin.

Under the Dome

CALIFORNIA'S forthright Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas has a picture on her wall, autographed by Henry Wallace. It reads: "To Helen Gahagan Douglas, a Liberal who holds fast. Sincerely, Henry Wallace." Yet the Wallaceites are doing everything possible to defeat the lady who has waged such a valiant battle for public housing . . . "The reason I do not desire to remain in the Senate," writes Senator "Pappy" O'Daniel to constituents, "is because I can see slight hope of saving our Nation from going entirely socialistic or communistic. There are less than a dozen men in the United States Senate who consistently vote to maintain the American form of government willed to us by our forefathers." . . . Maybe the real reason is that O'Daniel couldn't have been reelected.

WITH the exception of infantile paralysis, the picture on communicable diseases indicates this summer will be listed as a pretty healthy one.

Other important reportable communicable diseases—such as measles, diphtheria and spotted fever—have been either below or approximately at "medium expectancy," says the Public Health Service.

Of the rest, more than 3,500,000 tons will be sought in the sea. If this item suffers as much as a 25 per cent setback, it is estimated it will cost the American people 60 million dollars.

French Finance

FRANCE'S new Finance Minister, Paul Reynaud, is struggling with a reform program which will get interested attention here at the Economic Cooperation Administration (Marshall Plan headquarters).

To get Marshall aid, France promised to cut down inflation and balance its budget. Among other things, this will require a cut in the number on public payrolls, the prime issue which forced the last government to resign.

In the long run, if France fails of financial stability, ECA funds can be cut off.

Balkan Reds Encouraging Esperantists

By Gaston Coblentz

BUDAPEST, Aug. 14.—Esperanto, the language of international symbols, is being revived in the Danube Valley with Communist blessings, according to the press section of the Hungarian Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The first Danube Valley Esperanto Conference, held here recently, unofficially launched a program to systematize the teaching of Esperanto in the high schools of Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, starting next month.

Two hundred thirty Esperantists at the conference were greeted with a friendly message from the Hungarian government, whose representative said Esperanto would help increase the solidarity of the new "people's democracies."

Postwar Esperantists in the Danube Valley apparently are trimming their sails to new political breezes. Lewis Kokeny, deputy president of the Hungarian Esperanto movement, said:

"We modern Esperantists do not concern ourselves any more with the old idea of corresponding in Esperanto with people in far-away places. That was an old-fashioned, romantic idea. Why should we correspond with Esperantists in the South Seas? Our immediate neighbors are what count. Esperanto coincides with the program of our new democratic governments."

Eastern European Esperantists are accordingly somewhat at odds with their former colleagues in Western countries who "still believe that our language must remain politically neutral," Kokeny said, adding: "Here, we are convinced that Esperanto must cooperate with progress and that neutrality is not possible."

Esperanto is already available as an optional course in the Budapest high schools. It is compulsory in some of Hungary's commercial schools.

Esperantists are relieved to find themselves in official favor after years of disfavor under the Nazi rule of southeastern Europe. The Nazis halted Esperanto, Kokeny said, because it was founded (in 1887) by a Polish Jew, Louis L. Zamenhof.

Some of the Hungarian government leaders favor Russian over Esperanto as a second language, Kokeny said. However, Esperantists here got another boost last week, because Hungary's new President, Arpad Szakasits, is keen on Esperanto.

De Gaulle Varies His Technique

made him leader of the national opposition. Though his tour is scantily reported by all but the Gaullist press, he has made French politics a war between himself and all the other parties.

De Gaulle does not allow himself to be trapped into specific debate. His lieutenants must work out the details of his program and debate it with parliamentary leaders. He operates on another level—as the mystic guardian of the French spirit and Christian civilization.

De Gaulle plans to continue his present high-powered campaign until the October elections determine the composition of the Council of the Republic. He believes they will give him a safe majority and will allow him to force dissolution of the present National Assembly.

With a new Assembly majority, he plans to rewrite the constitution, creating a presidency with sweeping powers. He will be a candidate for this presidency, and once installed he will reorganize French life.

De Gaulle is surrounded by some of the shrewdest men in France. Some, like Andre Malraux, are among her most distinguished men of culture; others, like Gaston Palewski, are among the cleverest practical politicians.

These men have already outlined the basic principles of the government they propose to form. Communism will be outlawed. France's army will be reorganized and integrated with the forces of Britain and America against the Soviet Union. A west European federation, including Germany, will be formed, with France as the leader.

The United States will remain France's first friend—the Gaullists claim that they are the only Frenchmen who can make effective use of Marshall Plan aid. The right to strike will be curtailed but not abrogated.

A Pleasant Solution

THE Gaullist leaders are foggiest on the vexing problem of prices, wages, fundamental economics. They say that as soon as France gains confidence in herself, black markets will evaporate and the wage-price spiral will halt. The general will give France this confidence.

This program reflects fairly well the sentiment of De Gaulle's middle-class support. The middle class, tired of strikes and creeping postwar recovery, is delighted to learn that its bread-and-butter worries can be solved by voting for the mystic glory of old France. And unless some basic reversal of French thinking takes place between now and October, most observers think the general will add enough peasant and worker votes to give him the majority he seeks.

The Gaullists claim that power will fall to them peacefully, by democratic vote, in the next six months. Only two events, they declare, could cause violence. The first would be an effort of the government to postpone or abrogate the fall elections; the second would be a Communist push for power.

If it comes to violence, the Gaullists are sure of themselves. They claim a million organized followers in their Rally of the French People; and, privately, they boast that their hoard of arms is greater than anything any other group can mass.

Western Europe Already on Upgrade

By Tom Williams
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Western Europe is on the road to economic recovery, propelled by the dollars and supplies of the European Recovery Program, an Associated Press survey indicates.

The survey shows that the mere prospect of American aid, now a reality, helped the 16 ERP nations over the hump in the critical days when Congress debated the Marshall Plan.

Though in some nations the improvement is not yet reflected in the hand-to-mouth economy, AP correspondents in Western and Southern Europe reported general increases in industrial production.

Crop reports, they said, indicate that agricultural production is certain to be larger than last year.

Burden on Britain

BUT DESPITE the progress made, the cooperating nations are painfully aware that four years is a short time to achieve the transformation the United States expects.

If the recovery plan is to be a success, they must establish economic equilibrium; expanded production, sound monetary systems, free convertibility of currencies, a steady extension of multilateral trading relations, and progressively reduced reliance on Western Hemisphere sources of supply.

Britain, no longer a rich nation, must provide a lot of the leadership. As No. 2 industrial power in western Europe, she will be called upon to supply a large part of the capital equipment needed to build up production in the other countries.

A number of political obstacles threaten to delay complete success. Among them:

1. France is moving from one governmental crisis to another.

2. Civil war continues in Greece.

3. Germany is a bone of contention threatening the peace of the world.

4. Large, active Communist elements are at work in France and Italy.

5. Dutch resources are being spent in an effort to restore Netherlands rule and the domestic economy in Indonesia.

Belgium, Portugal and Switzerland are islands of prosperity in Europe, but their economic well-being is threatened by the poverty of their neighbors. The obvious remedy is a miniature international monetary fund for Western Europe.

Exports Up Third

DESPITE THE imbalance of world trade, however, the trend shows definitely that western Europe is making long strides toward recovery.

British industry is producing about 10 per cent more than prewar and exports are 35 per cent higher than in 1938. Iron and steel mills are breaking all production records, coal mining is slightly ahead of schedule in the drive to mine 211 million tons this year, and price reductions indicate that inflation is about to be checked.

Despite a smaller planted acreage and the heat and drought of last summer, British agriculture produced considerably more in 1947 than it did in 1939. This year's crop prospects are good.

Belgium, having escaped severe damage, has made the quickest recovery. Belgian production is nearing prewar level.

But Belgium is dependent on outside sources for her wheat and is paying the penalty for surpassing her neighbors in economic recovery. The Belgian franc is known as the "European dollar," because it is so hard to get. The result has been that Belgium is having difficulty selling her industrial surplus.

The Swiss franc and the escudo of Portugal are Europe's other hard currencies. Both nations escaped war damage and made war profits.

Swiss exports this year are expected to reach 3,400,000,000 francs, compared with 1,320,000,000 in 1938. Increased prices for imports are taking most of the extra earnings, but Switzerland is on a firm economic footing. She has negotiated trade pacts with both Eastern and Western countries.

Poor Olive Crop

EXCEPT FOR defeated Germany, strife-ridden Greece is in the worst shape economically.

Loans from the United States and Britain have propped up the national economy since Greece was liberated. Favorable weather promises a 780,000-ton wheat crop this year, but olive oil, a basic food as well as one of the best export items, is still scarce. The 1948 olive crop is not expected to equal that of last year.

France is lagging behind the leaders but is still making headway. The industrial index prepared by the European edition of the New York Herald Tribune shows production in May, 1948, was 114 per cent of the 1938 monthly average.

These gains have been made despite bad weather, Communist-led strikes and inflation.

Agriculture in western Germany is "the most promising since the end of the war," American military government experts report.

The food ration for the Germans in Bizonia also is improving in qualtiy and quantity, a development certain to be reflected in increased industrial output, which stood at the end of April at 50 per cent of the 1936 base period level.

Italian industry moved rapidly toward its prewar production level in 1947. Greatest improvement took place in the first half of the year, then production declined in the face of high costs.

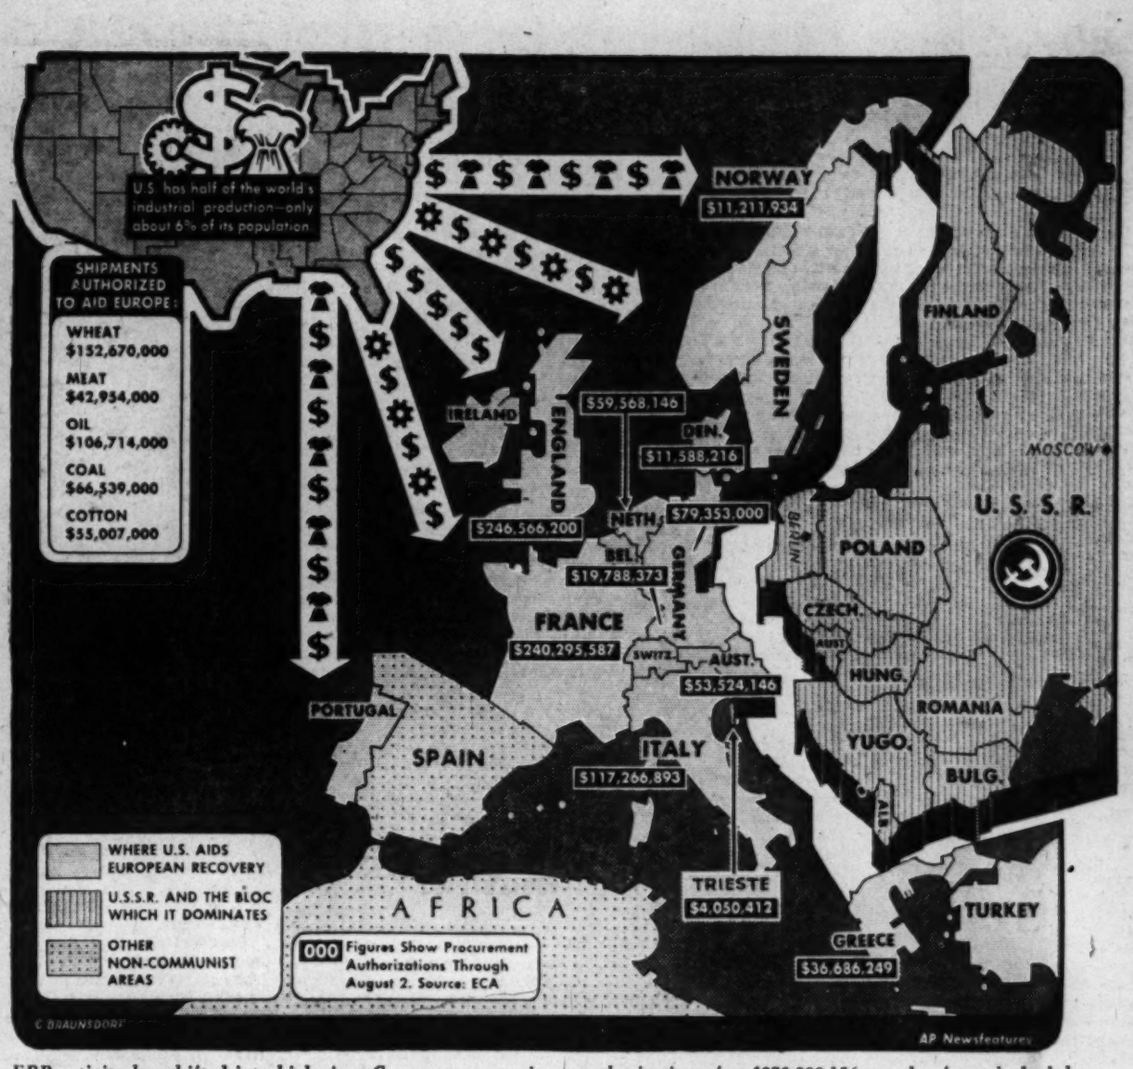
Financial circles regarded the slump as the first real postwar readjustment to price, cost and inventory conditions of a more stable economy.

Scandinavian Boom

PROVISIONAL figures show Sweden's current industrial production more than 40 per cent above the 1937 level. The fall harvest is expected to be normal and there is general calm on the labor front.

Danish industry is breaking all production records but agriculture, the chief asset, still is hampered by shortages of livestock feed, machinery and fertilizer.

Biggest obstacle to Dutch recovery is the loss of her markets in Germany. Nevertheless, Holland's monthly exports in 1948 are averaging 200 million guilders against 155 million last year and 86 million in 1938.



ERP activity has shifted into high since Congress appropriated $5,300,000,000 for the first year and the bilateral trade treaties were signed in July. By August 2, procurement authorizations for $879,899,156 worth of goods had been signed by the Economic Cooperation Administration, distributed as shown by the map detailed knowledge of the country.

"I was there only in transit from the United States," he said. "But the major reason for being sent there is to compile all possible information on Canada—our authentic data is very sparse."

He then turned to a safe and extracted several Canadian and American newspapers.

"You will find the press in North America of considerable assistance in your work. In their pursuit of news, the papers not only publish the secrets of others but their own as well. Frequently, you will glean information that would cost a small fortune to obtain through an agent.

"Look at this . . ." He opened an American magazine and pointed to a complicated diagram. "You see here reproduced the staff structure of the United States Navy. It is most detailed. To obtain such a diagram on our own, we would have to plant an agent inside the Navy Department itself, but if the press wishes to do the work for us, that's much simpler."

We all laughed at the obvious naivete of the American press.

Sifting the Truth

"IN reading these newspapers," Dashevsky continued, "you may not be able to distinguish between irresponsible rumor and truth at first, but after a year you will become quite expert.

"Remember that Moscow is keenly interested in the whole pattern of the capitalistic scheme. Do not miss a single item in the papers.

"Do not send fragmentary data. Also avoid taking on too much. It is suggested that each man take a definite theme in reading newspapers and become a specialist on that theme. It is obviously important that you constantly strive to improve your knowledge of the foreign language to better understand what you read.

"Continue to be politically alert. Only weaklings succumb to the misleading bourgeois ideas and so-called Western democracy. . . ."

The morning of my departure by plane from Moscow, I was introduced to the most intriguing man I have ever met. He was Col. Nicolai Zabotin, with whose life my own was to become dramatically interwoven.

"This is comrade Colonel Zabotin," said Major Romanov, who was the third in our party destined for Ottawa. "He will be our Military Attache."

Forgetting that I was now in civilian clothes, my hand started upward in a salute before I checked myself in extreme embarrassment. I had been strictly warned against revealing my Red Army background, because my passport stated: "Translator and Secretary."

Zabotin frowned for a second then burst into a loud, hearty laugh.

"You'd better get away from that habit, Gouzenko!" he said, clasping my hand in a strong grip. "And, above all, don't look so damned respectful. Haven't you noticed that real, bona-fide civilians never act awed by a mere colonel? It takes a general at least, to impress the ingrates."

Inevitable Victim

I WAS greatly relieved. Such thoughtfulness and easy manner with underlings was so unfamiliar that a surge of gratitude swept over me. That moment has always remained a warm one and the report of his unofficial "execution" caused me genuine regret. Moscow later denied that Zabotin had "disappeared overboard" during his forced return to the Soviet after my disclosure of the Spy Ring, but I don't believe anything emanating from Moscow, and it is certain that Zabotin would be held responsible for my "betrayal."

Zabotin was the organizer and leader of the vast spy ring that today would have eaten into your atomic secrets, your defense planning, your very governmental innards—if I hadn't spoken. Zabotin had to be the main victim. It was inevitable.

The plane lifted easily and I knew again the thrilling feeling of impending adventure.

During our four-day plane trip, Colonel Zabotin was grand company. He liked to talk of his service with the Red Army where he had won distinction as an artillery officer. During his reminiscenses, he frequently mentioned names of commanders and often would pause to comment:

"Later, during the purge, he was shot."

Looking through my diary notes, I find excited references deal with what was, in reality, a routine flight; but it was my first and only one. We had stop-overs at two Soviet bases before landing at Fairbanks, Alaska. The amazing stock of fruit and chocolate bars at the American canteen took my breath away. I hesitatingly made a notation: "First contact with Americans interesting," which was putting it mildly.

Gouzenko's first glimpse of a North American metropolis, with so many neat little homes surrounded by yards, puzzled him. He had just left a country where mere workers lived in crude, wooden, barracks-like buildings—if they were lucky

There are pages of enthusiastic comment on our flight along the aerial Northwest Staging Route above the storied Alaska Highway down to Canada.

Revealing Question

OUR first glimpse of a major Canadian city was from a height of 5000 feet, while we were still some 20 miles away. It was a beautifully clear day. The wheat fields below were flat as a tabletop and seemed to extend to the horizons north, south and east of us. But on our right there towered into the clouds the magnificent outlines of the Canadian Rockies. At times we could see them quite clearly.

Edmonton, from a mile up, was very intriguing. I was impressed by the order and cleanliness of it: the wide streets, the homes with space around them. Major Romanov asked:

"I wonder where the workers live?"

Looking back, I appreciate now how devastating for the totalitarian system that innocent question was. It seemed utterly unthinkable that ordinary workers could be living in such a setting. And Edmonton is by no means a luxurious city.

Now, as our transport plane came in for the landing and I fastened my safety belt, the houses of Edmonton, seen through a starboard window, caused little shivers of uncertainty. I had been lectured to and drilled in the procedure to follow, yet this seemed different. When the aircraft bumped slightly, then finally rolled to an easy stop by a hangar, I unbuckled my belt slowly, actually loath to leave this last contact with my familiar Russia and step onto this strange, threatening, foreign soil.

As I emerged into the bright sunlight a group of young men on a truck whisked over to the plane, apparently to unload baggage and mail sacks. They were in uniform, which I did not recognize at the time as that of the Royal Canadian Air Force. I must have been staring at them because one laughed outright and yelled:

"Hiya, chum—how's Joe these days?"

I glanced uncertainly at Romanov, who shook his head almost imperceptibly. The English words were understandable but I didn't know what was meant by "Joe."

Both Romanov and I would have been flabbergasted if we had realized the query referred to Joseph Stalin. As it was, we merely followed our instructions: "When in doubt simply act as if you do not understand, and keep silent."

Unofficial Motorists

OUR ideas about Canada were soon hopelessly confused. We were not prepared for the wealth of food in the Edmonton hotel where we stayed, nor the abundance of clothing, candies and luxuries of all kinds in such windows as those of the huge Hudson's Bay store on the main street. The hundreds of automobiles, carrying people who certainly didn't seem to have an official bearing, left us gaping in astonishment.

We continued our journey to Ottawa aboard a Canadian National Railways transcontinental train. The swaying fields of wheat extending endless miles from the tracks, the rich soil, the forests, the lakes, the gardens beside homes in towns and villages, reflected a prosperous and colorful country.

But the manners of the people we met on the train were most astounding of all.

The conductor came to take our tickets while we were in the dining car and, for some reason, Zabotin mentioned that we had just flown from Russia. The waiter overheard the conversation and so did some men in Canadian military uniform at the table across the aisle. Before we knew it, the whole train seemed aware of our having just landed from the Soviet.

It was most disconcerting since we had been schooled to keep everything a secret and to lie whenever necessary to keep people from knowing our business. But as Zabotin and Romanov were in uniform, it was almost impossible to remain incognito.

The trouble was that we did not know how to meet these people, who seemed friendly and pleasant. Practically everyone who spoke to us during the three nights and two days of that train trip started off by saying:

"How are things in Russia these days?"

Naturally we were most cautious. We told of the magnificent, wonderful country we had just left, watching the effect of our words very carefully. But, to our continued bewilderment, everybody seemed to agree with us. They would nod approval and say something like:

"You fellows sure did a swell job during the war!"

Others would say: "Stalin must have a lot on the ball, yes sir!" Or: "This communism stuff must have something in it to produce such fighters as you people!"

Astounding Criticism

ON the afternoon of the day after we left Edmonton, Romanov pulled me aside in the vestibule between the club car and the first sleeper. Zabotin was back in a compartment talking and drinking with some military travelers.

"I can't make these people out," said Romanov in Russian. "They all seem to be pro-Soviet. Yet they are capitalists."

The same thought had struck me also.

"Not only that," I added, "but they don't seem the least bit afraid of secret agents. Did you hear that soldier in the club car just now criticizing the government for the way it is handling the enlistment of troops?"

Romanov made a gesture of bewilderment.

"I cannot understand it. There seems to be no restraint. I took the opportunity of asking that soldier some details about recruiting and he told me things I hesitate to put into my notebook. He even disclosed that there is serious discord between the Province of Quebec and the Province of Ontario. The Prime Minister has much critical opposition and he says communism has a damn good chance of being installed after the war if the government doesn't act smart now."

Romanov shrugged, then continued: "I was in the rear end of the club car at the time and there were four other men beside the soldier listening. Two of them laughed while the others seemed to approve of the soldier's views. One of the men who laughed asked me if we have freedom of speech in Russia?"

"What did you say?"

"I said we do."

Babes in Wonderland

BOTH of us fell silent. The clicking of the wheels below our feet beat out a curiously exhilarating rhythm. It must have been minutes later when Romanov spoke again, this time in low tones.

"Did they seem to believe everything you told them about Soviet Russia?"

"Yes," I said.

"That is an interesting indication of public opinion here," he ventured, with a note of hesitancy that puzzled me.

Even as he spoke, the thought rushed to my mind: Why should Canada turn to communism? It appears to have infinitely more than the Soviet in every way. Romanov must have had the same thought. He peered at me sharply then looked back over a shoulder as if suspecting some NKVD agent was lurking in the vestibule reading our thoughts.

"It is time for lunch," he said abruptly. Then, as if this had prompted another thought, he asked: "Did you notice that store window with all the wrist watches in Edmonton?"

I nodded enthusiastically. "I sure did! And everybody on the train seems to be wearing a wrist watch. I wonder if we shall be able to buy one in Ottawa?"

Looking back, we must have appeared ludicrous, Red babes in the democratic woods. But almost every little trinket you accept casually, your easy manner of conversation, your amazingly frank newspapers, the food you eat without ever thinking about it—all these things represented the wonders of a fantastic wonderland to us fledgling agents from the vast, fettered and starved Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Weather-Makers Are Leaving Hurricanes Alone This Year

By Robert E. Geiger
Associated Press Staff Writer

HOW does nature pull the trigger in a cloud to release rain?

Although Government and private scientists working on the secret have found three ways to make rain, they haven't wrested the whole story from nature.

Some of these are the same scientists who were working on hurricane-busting projects. They have given up that job temporarily for more intensive laboratory studies of man-made weather-in-miniature and for investigations of clouds.

Dr. Irving Langmuir, a leading rain-making scientist, has said that if some present experiments are successful it may be possible to decrease winter cloudiness in northern parts of the United States and to increase average winter temperatures.

Handcuffing Thor

AMONG other possibilities that scientists have discussed are these:

1. Thunderstorms may be broken up before lightning occurs. This might save some of the timber now destroyed by lightning-caused forest fires.

2. Some of the damaging ice storms that occur in many parts of the country might be prevented.

3. Moisture-carrying clouds might be "floated" to drought or desert regions and then triggered open.

4. Airports could be kept free of clouds or fog.

5. As for distant possibilities, can electricity that causes lightning be harnessed for power? Experiments indicate there may be millions of volts in clouds.

6. Military applications of weather control have been widely discussed. Besides clearing skies for bombing operations, such things as scattering disease germs in clouds and then causing them to fall in rain have been talked about.

If these things sound fantastic, remember they are being discussed by scientists of top rank.

The Trigger Methods

THUS far scientists know this:

1. A tiny bit of dry ice dropped into a "super-cooled" cloud will always cause ice crystals to form. These fall as rain if the air below is not too dry. A "super-cooled" cloud is below the freezing point but is filled with tiny particles of moisture that haven't yet frozen. These are fairly common in northern latitudes, especially in winter.

2. If small crystals that closely resemble snow crystals are dropped in a super-cooled cloud, they too will cause moisture to fall under certain conditions.

3. If water or ice is dropped into certain clouds above the freezing point, it sometimes causes rain. Such clouds are common over the United States in summer.

These are the triggers that man uses to start rain. Nature seems to have others. Scientists are trying dust and many other things.

One of the major rain research studies is called "Project Cirrus," sponsored by the Army Signal Corps, the Navy and the General Electric Co. It is spending close to one million dollars a year.

There also is a thunderstorm-studying project at Wilmington, Ohio, sponsored by the Navy, the Air Force, the Weather Bureau and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. It now is analyzing its information.

The Weather Bureau and the Air Force have a project called Cloud Physics. They are attempting to determine definite possibilities, for farmers and businessmen, of man-controlled weather.

Still another project, by the Navy, is attempting to find a way to forecast hurricanes and typhoons by using earthquake-recording apparatus.

Savannah 'Incident'

PROJECT Cirrus dropped dry ice in a hurricane off the coast of Florida last October and a few hours later a hurricane lashed Savannah, Ga.

The Cirrus scientists said they never were able to draw any worthwhile conclusions from this experiment, but they denied it played a major part in turning the storm on Savannah.

Earl Droessler, former Navy aerologist and member of the Cirrus steering committee, says the Cirrus scientists will leave hurricanes strictly alone this summer. He says:

"We need to have more fundamental information on nature's method of triggering moisture out of clouds. Actually, all we know now is that the moisture exists in a cloud in a very fine mist."

One reason scientists are cautious is this: A hurricane is estimated to pack a punch equal to 20 atomic bombs fired each second.

Another angle is that, although everybody talks about the weather, not everybody wants to do something about it. Examples are ladies who want to give a garden party, or a farmer about to harvest a crop that would be spoiled by rain.

There already have been threats of law suits against would-be weather makers by people who said nature's weather was good enough for them and please to let it alone.

Money Reform Rips Mask Off Reich Hoarder

By Don Doane
Associated Press Staff Writer

FRANKFURT, AUG. 14.—Eggs are a rare luxury in Germany, but when one farm woman entered a Frankfurt market with a basket of eggs to sell, city folks angrily broke every one over her head:

"Where were your eggs when we used to try to buy them before the money reform?" shouted one of her assailants.

Since the new money was issued June 20, things have been offered for sale which buyers could never find before. Glad as they are to buy them now, Germans are still bitter about the hoarding exposed by the sudden change.

It was useless to offer German money for eggs in the days before the change. Farmers demanded family treasures in barter—or American cigarettes.

Likewise with the alarm clocks, kitchen utensils, dress goods and other everyday necessities now filling the store windows. Before reform, those windows were nearly empty. If you tried to buy one of the items now on display, the storekeeper would insist that he didn't have it.

There were too many marks in those days. The currency reform outlawed the inflated marks. New ones were issued. But to get 1 new mark, a person had to turn in 10 old ones. Everybody became poor overnight. Big savings accounts were blocked, at least temporarily.

That gave money a new value. Now people have to take in new marks to live. So they are selling for cash the goods they used to hoard or sold only on the black market.

That is just what the Allied military governments hoped would happen. It wanted to force these hoarded goods out of hiding and get Germany back on a money basis.

Currency reform has pumped new life into Germany's stagnant economy. It has forced many loafers and black marketeers to go to work.

Germans generally are pleased by the change, but they are still sore at the pre-reform hoarders. One man displayed a careful record he had kept of the merchants who used to tell him they were "out" of the things they now try to sell.

"They won't get any of my good money now," he said bitterly.

It's No Mother-In-Law Joke To Marry Her in Some States

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP).—There are 12 States in this country where you can't marry your mother-in-law. There are nine States where you can't even marry your wife's grandmother.

Crushing, isn't it? But these are only two of the many odd laws governing marriage and divorce. The varied statutes come to mind in view of a recent Supreme Court decision which says, in effect, that every State must recognize bona fide divorces granted in every other State.

That could be a complicated business.

The States recognize a total of 28 different grounds for divorce. The range is wide. Nobody can get divorced for any reason in South Carolina. New York recognizes only adultery as a reason for divorce. Kentucky accepts the biggest number of grounds—17.

A roundup of State laws compiled by Richard V. Makay, a New York lawyer, in a little booklet called, "Law of Marriage and Divorce Simplified," gives this information and says the most common ground for divorce is adultery. Forty-seven States accept it. Next come desertion, in 45 States; extreme cruelty, in 42; conviction for a felony, in 41; and habitual drunkenness, in 39.

Kentucky has all of these and more. Other grounds in the Blue Grass State include wife's pregnancy at time of marriage (provided husband had nothing to do with it); an attempt by one mate to murder the other, and "wife's unchastity." This last ground is generally understood to mean a commercial type of immorality before marriage.

If a husband or wife publicly defames the party of the second part, that's a ground for divorce in Louisiana. "Violent temper or behavior" is a charge that will get a sympathetic ear in nine States. A "husband's vagrancy" is grounds in Missouri and Wyoming.

There's even greater variety in marriage laws. Twenty-two States recognize common-law marriage. In West Virginia, says Mackay, common-law marriages are not recognized, but the children of such unions are regarded as legitimate; thus, they are more legal than their parents.

Marriage to a close blood relative is prohibited in all States, but many go further. Besides the ban on wedlock with a mother-in-law or grandmother-in-law, marriage with a stepmother is specifically prohibited in 21 States; with a stepdaughter, in 20; with "grandfather's wife," in 9; with "grandson's wife," in 11; with "wife's granddaughter," in 16, and with a daughter-in-law, in 18.

Delaware, Indiana, Maine and Pennsylvania won't issue a marriage license to paupers. Thirty States prohibit marriage between a white person and a Negro; 16 between a white person and an "Oriental or Mongolian," and five won't issue a license to a white person and an Indian.

The Anschluss Period

Light Finds Chinks In Austrian History

By Reginald Parker

AUSTRIA FROM HABSBURG TO HITLER. By Charles A. Gulick. University of California Press, 1948. 1906 pp. $20

THIS IS truly the most accurate history of Austria from 1918 to 1938. It makes fascinating reading to one who, like this reviewer, witnessed the events that form the background of this astounding work of scholarship. And it ought to be a "must" for anyone who wants to delve into central European problems, old or new. The book is by no means pleasant reading, though.

Between the many pages, however, dealing with the machinations of rising fascism and royalistic reaction, political murders, corruption at times approaching unbelievable dimensions, an arch-reactionary judiciary and a still worse bureaucracy, there shine the chapters "Democracy Culminant," where the author describes the tremendous achievements in the field of social legislation, foremost in all of Europe. Here the author gives due credit to the Austrian Social-Democrats and their work toward a better future for every small fellow. There are the slum clearance projects of Vienna and the welfare work of its municipal government. It is a day-by-day account of both the smaller, but brilliant, good side and the larger bad one of Austria in those years.

Western Bogey

FASCISM had an easy time in those years. The Western powers smiled benignly when "home guards" paraded the streets and secret, or open, armament went on in central Europe, or was it not done to suppress the wicked Reds?

On one point, however, I should to take issue with the author. The average American reader may gather from the book that Austrian fascism was predominantly Austro fascism, i. e., the machine of the Dollfuss-Schuschnigg gang, whereas nazism was only superimposed on the Austrian people from abroad. Nazism is at least as much a product of Austria—and the formerly Austrian Sudetenland—as of Germany.

Anti-Semitism, hatred of Slavic nations, particularly the Czechs, and above all the Anschluss idea, were deeply rooted in Austrian political thought long before they were made palatable by Hitler (disciple of the anti-Semitic mayor of Vienna, Karl Lueger) to the Germans.

As a matter of fact, the swastika was a political symbol in Austria quite some time before the National Socialist German Workers Party came into being in 1919.

The Austro-Fascists, or Dollfuss - Starhemberg - Schuschnigg supporters, represented a small minority of the people. In the days immediately preceding the Anschluss, about 40 per cent of the potential workers were Social Democrats and a probably larger number were Nazis. The few others were government supporters.

In other words, I daresay that in those days the proportion of Hitlerites was larger in Austria than in Germany, where many of the people had enough after four years of guns instead of butter. That many Austrians soon changed their minds, as they always do, is another story.

A Vital Difference

THE author is right when he emphasizes that there was no essential difference between Austria's clerico-fascism and Hitlerism, but merely a gradual one, though that gradual difference meant the difference between death and a mere prison sentence to many a Socialist.

Be this as it may, however, we must not fail to give the devil his due. Dollfuss and Starhemberg, and perhaps Schuschnigg (and probably Monsignor Seipel, the crafty hater of democracy) liked the Fascist form of government. Yet they did fight nazism.

Had there been a democratic government in Austria in 1933, Hitler would have taken Austria right there and then. Because Austria was Fascist, she could live on borrowed time in the shadow of Mussolini.

It is true that the Austro-Fascists were quite happy at thus having a good excuse for destroying democracy, but the fact that this saved Austria from nazism for five years cannot be overlooked.

In the years after the Anschluss, the author reports, there were 17,000 executions of those who fought Hitler. Those underground fighters were by no means only "workers," i. e., Socialists. Among those who died on the gallows or in the torture chambers of the Gestapo was a substantial minority of clericals, conservatives and even Austro-Fascists.

History in those days did not—does not yet—follow the exclusive "Fascist-or-Red" pattern. There were many varieties between the two. But in the long run, I agree, it will come to just that, at least in Europe.

In this connection I want to express a pessimistic disagreement with the last sentence of the book expressing the author's hope "that justified fears of Russia's plans will not enable clerical fascism to subvert democracy again." The fact that, as was recently reported in United States-ruled Bavaria 60 per cent of the judges and 75 per cent of the district attorneys are former Nazi Party members, seems to show that any fear of Russia's plans are amply outweighed by Anglo-American-French, shall we say, tolerance.

Naked Power

Hornblower Goes Native, So to Speak

C. S. FORESTER
. . . Hardly a Conrad

THE SKY AND THE FOREST. By C. S. Forester. Little, Brown. 313 pp. $2.75.

C. S. FORESTER, the extrovert's Boswell, is to my way of thinking the most overrated author alive today.

I was bored stiff by his "Captain Horatio Hornblower," his "Commodore Hornblower" and his "Lord Hornblower" And I do not expect to be impressed if Hornblower shows up some day as "Emperor Hornblower." With the exception of "The General," he has never written a novel I could read with pleasure.

Forester is obviously entranced with naked power. His swashbuckling, sadistic, empty-headed heroes are as childish as Superman and as crude as waterfront bullies. I can understand his wide popularity in a savage world. But what I cannot understand is the all-kneeling attitude of several usually discerning critics who should know real characters from the papier-mache variety, but who continue to admire Forester's cardboard automatons.

For instance, on the jacket of this depressing book we find the following panegyric comparing the author to everybody except Homer and Shakespeare:

"C. S. Forester has been hailed by critics on both sides of the Atlantic as the peer of Marryat, Cooper and Nordhoff and Hall in story-telling. He has been accredited with the capacity of Conrad, the ability of Masefield and the adventurous spirit of Lever. His novels appeal equally to both young and old. In the words of Ernest Hemingway, 'I recommend Forester to everyone literate I know.'"

Hemingway, who usually chooses his words with care, must have a curious definition for the word "literate." And to mention Forester in the same breath with the author of "Youth," "Heart of Darkness" and "The Nigger of the Narcissus" is a major desecration of the memory of Joseph Conrad.

"The Sky and the Forest" is a tour de force of the Congo which follows the fortunes of Loa, chieftain god of a native village. This stupid aborigine, who is neither a "gentle savage" nor a "noble savage," is dirty, cannibalistic, cruel, pompous, sadistic, polygamous, superstitious, vain and, like all Forester "heroes," incapable of abstract thought.

From Arab slave raiders who take him captive he learns additional cruelties, such as impaling people alive and other forms of torture. Had he not been killed at the end of this book by King Leopold's mercenary assassins, he might have learned further refinements in sadism from the "civilized" whites who raped the Belgian Congo.

If you get a thrill out of whipping, infanticide, brutal tyranny, war with poison arrows and dumdum bullets, this book is obviously, your raw meat. Possibly hidden somewhere in all the gore is an allegorical message concerning universal folklore; a profound weighing of "savage" and "civilized" moral values. If so, the theme is too feeble to become clearly apparent.

Recommended for all Neanderthalic males from 8 to 80—STERLING NORTH.

Pacific Northwest's Photogenic Country

NORTHWEST CORNER: OREGON AND WASHINGTON: THE LAST FRONTIER; photographs by Henry Sheldon; introduction and commentary by Stewart Holbrook (Doubleday; 3.95).

MORE than 100 full-page photographs of cities, lakes, harbors, fields, forests, mountains, farming and industrial (mostly logging) operations have been gathered here for those who have been West, or plan to go, or who have to do their sightseeing via picture books.

The two States, cut one way by the Columbia River and the other way by the long, high Cascade Range, cover about 200,000 square miles. Most of the wealth comes from timber spread up and down the picturesque, snow-capped mountains. It's the site of vast lava beds, the Grand Coulee, the fertile Willamette Valley, the Tillamook burn which in 1933 destroyed 300,000 acres of "the finest timber ever seen."

Holbrook's text nicely supplements the fine photos.

Folklore of Nuclear Fission

A Crisp Report From Atomic Front

By Sterling North

EARLY TALES OF THE ATOMIC AGE. By Daniel Lang. Introduction by Carl Van Doren. Doubleday. 223 pp. $2.75.

AUGUST marks the third anniversary of the Hiroshima atomic bomb; the third anniversary of the decision to drop the missile on a Japanese city rather than on uninhabited countryside. We cannot avoid the responsibility for that inauguration of the atomic age.

The result: We are now employing speleologists (cave experts) to explore "wild caves" which can house crucial war industries in case of atomic war. Western civilization's probable life expectancy is between five and 15 years.

Daniel Lang has written 12 ironic, passionless, almost gossipy tales of the folklore and facts of nuclear fission. He writes as though the whole matter were of very little consequence.

The articles are crisp and to the point—the "New Yorker" approach to life and atomic death. They tell of the vast difficulties of keeping the Manhattan project under cover when one million Americans knew part of the secret and several hundred scientists knew most of the secret.

They report at second-hand what happened at Hiroshima and Nagasaki. What life is like at Oak Ridge. Why the scientists and the artists do not mingle very much socially at Los Alamos. Why we must disperse industry and bury it. What we can expect from nuclear fission during the next few years.

All very entertaining and informative. But the fact of the matter is that no Daniel Lang and for that matter no John Hersey can even hint at what is in store for us.

As Carl Van Doren points out in the preface, the atomic scientists live on one side of the iron curtain, and we on the other. As one of the harried scientists in this book says:

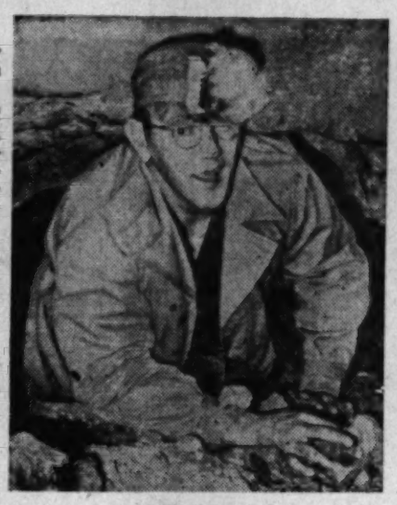
"Oh, if we could just tell a Congressman or anyone else, 'You realize, old man, that the change in the binding energy between initial and final configuration amounts to .1 per cent of the mass of each atom which, according to Einstein's MC^2, gives 10^{-3} times 235, the uranium mass number, times 1.6 times 10^{-24} gramps per mass units times 10^{21}.' The Congressman would figure a moment and then he'd say, 'Hmmm, let's see—that equals four times 10^{-4} ergs, or two hundred million electron volts, per atom. My God! That's 10^8 orders of magnitude greater than chemical energy!'"

In other words, no direct communication is possible concerning a method for releasing energy about one billion times as effective as the most potent previous explosive.

"Oedipus Rex" and "Hamlet" are feeble tragedies compared to what seems predestined for human kind; and Lang is obviously no Aeschylus nor Shakespeare! Meanwhile here are some readable bulletins from the atomic front. Scuttlebutt on Judgment Day.

ACTIVE AND OTHER POEMS. By Archibald MacLeish. Random House. 63 pp. $2.50.

THE POLITICAL storms which threw their thunderbolts at Archibald MacLeish have largely subsided. His enemies, most of whom were incapable of understanding his poetry, have found new liberals to abuse and badger. But MacLeish fights on.



DANIEL LANG
. . . Latter-day caveman

One might have thought that in this, his seventeenth volume of poetry, the athlete, soldier, lawyer, erstwhile Librarian of Congress, social crusader and poet would start showing some dimunition in the lyric impulse which usually vanishes by the time a poet has reached his midtwenties.

It would have been understandable, also, to discover the "shrewd, austere, exacting but humorous" Scotch-American humanitarian mellowing into middle-aged conservatism.

But by now it should be evident that MacLeish weathers and seasons but does not mellow. He stays lean, hard and compassionate.

His verse, like his logic, shows no fibrous tissue of senility, no fatty tissue of blurred objectives or padded lines. He says his mind "grows leaner as I age," which is the fate of man "baited by love and rage."

MacLeish, who probably professes no religion whatsoever save the brotherhood of man, the democracy of Thomas Jefferson and the immortality of great lyric poetry, has, nevertheless, a strong streak of Scotch Calvinism in his bones.

Certainly his dark and dour title poem foreseeing the end of man on this planet has the inevitability of "predestination."

Even his current love lyrics bespeak "limited atonement."

And his most bitter sermons in verse castigate the enemies of democracy in terms of "total depravity."

If one could speak of a Hedonistic Calvinist, tempered by the logic of Blackstone and John Stuart Mill and made furious by injustice, one would be getting at a single facet of this protesting poet's personality.

But it is necessary to point out that he is first and foremost a poet, a neo-Elizabethan influenced by Marvell, Eliot, Pound, Rimbaud and Valery.

Personally, I prefer MacLeish as simple lyricist to MacLeish the propagandist. Even his talent is not great enough to make his sermons in verse great poetry, as several pieces in this volume amply prove. But not since he wrote his greatest short poem, "L'An Trentiesme de Mon Eage," has he achieved a lyric so effective as "Poem in Prose," the best in the present sheaf.

Who cares about the politics of Andrew Marvell? True, he was an effective pamphleteer, but he is remembered as a poet. If man can outlive the atomic bomb, MacLeish will be similarly remembered.

ROLL BACK THE SEA. By A. Den Doolaard. Translated by Barrows Mussey. Simon & Schuster. 438 pp. $2.95

WILLIAM JAMES' futile search for what he naively called "The Moral Equivalent of War" has been achieved by the Dutch who for centuries have fought back the sea. (Perhaps that is why in recent years they have been such a peaceful nation).

DOOLAARD

A. Den Doolaard, who, like Pierre Van Paassen, loves all humanity in an almost Tolstoyan fashion, writes of that endless struggle in this warm and powerful novel.

Here is a precise perfectionist of the honored Waterstaat, the engineer Andre Sebastiaan van Hummel, who, despite his diminutive size, is a hero against the rushing ebb and flow of the tide through broken dikes—

Berend Benkelaar, a joyous rogue and rascal of a contractor who would skin his grandmother for a few thousand guilders, but who is likewise heroic in his fight against the sea—

Anton Hynssen—obsessed with aquatic claustrophobia as the sea surroonds him, penning him up with his wife and sister-in-law—

Klaas Otterkop, who knows more about brushwood, mattresses to hold the sand and other aspects of dike repair than any Dutchman who ever inherited three generations of instinctive knowledge—

These and others meet the final test when the dikes of the Island Walcheren are leveled to wash away the Germans who bar the way to Antwerp. And in the recovery of that island the history of Holland is written in miniature.

This is a suspenseful and moving narrative which has the strong tug of the tides themselves in its prose. It leaves the reader admiring the Dutch in general and A. Den Doolaard in particular.

The Magazine Rack

FOR THE BENEFIT of future historians, Frank Sullivan reveals his relations with F.D.R. in the New Yorker. Anyone who has read even one installment of Jim Farley's story will appreciate Sullivan's.

Despite the fact that in 1932 Sullivan wore a Roosevelt-Garner button, put F.D.R.'s picture in his parlor window and on election day walked a quarter mile to the polling place to vote for him and did so again repeatedly thereafter, the President never made the slightest acknowledgement of his services, he claims.

Worse still—one evening as he was walking up Fifth Avenue, the President swept by in a motorcade on his way to Pennsylvania Station. "I doffed my hat and shouted 'Hurrah!'", reports Sullivan. Roosevelt replied to my overture by doffing his hat—to the crowds on the other side of the avenue! This deliberate snub to a man who had given him the loyalty I had was hard to bear, yet I tried not to be bitter."

The second and last part of Rebecca West's report on the Fascist meetings in London which she covered at the request of an English newspaper, also appears. Although there are things of interest in it, the pieces are far longer than they have any reason to be and to this West fan it was an effort to get through them.

THE LADIES HOME JOURNAL has a story by Elizabeth Tate summarizing the results of a recent Nation-wide high school essay contest in which the contestants answered the question, "If you could suddenly acquire superiority in one characteristic or ability, which one would you choose?"

The majority expressed the desire to make friends, to be popular, to succeed in human relationships. Next on the list was desire for musical ability, but that in turn was supposed to lead to personal recognition and popularity!

Apparently unconnected with the startling results of this contest, is an article by Francis T. Spaulding, New York Commissioner of Elucation, "What Kind of High School Do You Want?" "A high school can do for its pupils practically any educational job the community really wants it to do, within the reasonable limits of the pupils' own ability to learn," Spaulding points out. We must therefore consider whether the schools are doing the job we want them to do.

There are important items which many of our schools have not yet touched, Spaulding things. They have not instilled in young people a sense of their responsibilities as citizens. They have not succeeded in showing them how and where to improve their own communities. The majority leave school without acquiring any usable vocational skills and many graduates are not as healthy as they ought to be.

Spaulding concludes by outlining four major changes in public attitudes that must be brought about before the schools can be improved.

LELAND STOWE, veteran foreign correspondent, has apparently been spending his time brooding about things other than international boundaries. He delivers a verbal spanking to what he concedes is the very decorative boundary of the American woman, in Esquire.

"Professional experts and amateur globe trotters agree our Eve is neither all she thinks she is nor much that American men assume she is," Stowe charges. She is spoiled, self-centered, aggressive, unhappy and dissatisfied, he finds. She is less feminine, less interested in men and in her family than those abroad; she is restless, bored, less spiritual and less individual than those of the lands where the author has been spending his time. He gets down to brass tacks and gives examples of what he means. There's nothing left for the native female to reply, but, "Who, me, Mr. Stowe?"

"WE are finding out what it costs to grow too big too fast," California's Governor and the vice presidential nominee, Earl Warren, told Frank J. Taylor for the Saturday Evening Post in a precenvention interview. The stampede toward California that has taken place since 1940 has terribly overtaxed housing, school, hospital, transportation and every other civic facility, but the final limit to the State's growing power is going to be water, says Warren. With all its headaches, Warren welcomes what he calls "the greatest population bargain of all times."

Mignonette's A Poisonous Little Posy

By W. G. Rogers

MIGNONETTE, by Joseph Shearing. Harpers. $2.50.

THIS sweet and pretty title, the name of a flower and girl, may deceive you into thinking this a sweet and pretty story, unless you know your Joseph Shearing, who is an Englishwoman.

Mignonette, who proves to be as poisonous as henbane, steps innocently into the story in the first line, when Barbara Lawne's solicitor advises her: "Leave well alone," but appears a bit less innocent in the second when Barbara replies: "But perhaps we are leaving evil alone."

Barbara's father has just died, and his will reveals that, pillar of the church and apparently dutiful husband, he had left behind an illegitimate daughter in the wicked city of Paris. Barbara is 27, properly brought up and no end shocked, and when she learns that some money is to go to Mignonette to insure her a reputable French husband, she determines to invite her half-sister to England to meet her and help her.

Mignonette's marriage of convenience seems all the more unfortunate to Barbara since she herself momentarily expects a proposal from Francis Shermandine, nephew and heir of Sir Timothy Boys. The contrast between her freedom to choose and the imposition of a husband on the hapless Mignonette disturbs her profoundly, but not for long. The charming little French miss, since she was sufficiently hardhearted to enter into the marriage someone else had arranged, is sufficiently hard-hearted to back out of it when a better prospect shows up.

Very gradually you appreciate that Barbara's casual remark about leaving evil alone is a fantastic understatement of the real nature of the girl, her supposed mother, Mme. Falconet, and the servants and friends with whom she cunningly surrounds herself in her new and luxurious English home. Before the novel closes, the bell tolls thrice, and only once for a person who very richly deserves it.

Barbara's guileleness would not be credible in our day, but the story is placed in the last century. A veil of gentility is laid over it, and it lifts bit by bit, ominously, frighteningly, it uncovers a horribly contrasting baggage of the perverse, licentious, corrupt and murderous.

Man on the Bus

A MAN OF MEANS, by Jacques Nels, translated by Elaine P. Halperin (Ziff-Davis, $2.50).

Here's a bus ride, from the Paris Bourse across the town to the Champs Elysees and the Place Victor Hugo. But for Villiers-Bernard, with whom we take the trip, it's a momentous occasion, the climactic day of his life, beginning with a market crash that wipes out his fortune and ending in his empty apartment. Instead of reviewing his losses, he reviews his life. The familiar fictional device is put sagely and freshly to a new use.—(P).

No Whodunits at Hyde Park

Roosevelt Library Spikes a Canard

OFF on a three-day busman's holiday to see the libraries at Hyde Park and Ticonderoga.

Quiet throngs view the stamps and ship models at Hyde Park, sometimes weep at the grave of Roosevelt, file silently through the house where FDR was born, grew to manhood, went forth to the Governorship of New York and the Presidency.

Fifty-two million items are filed in the spacious library—most of them the private papers of FDR. The late President's vast collection of books, showing intense interest in ships, forestry, international relations and other serious subjects, belies the libel that all he read was detective stories.

Few are admitted to the well-kept stacks. Some of the papers are sealed from the eyes of even the most serious students of history. What Roosevelt thought about Russia in the last year of his life would make news if it could be revealed.

In contrast to the well-thumbed books at Hyde Park are the gorgeous but purely decorative volumes, most of them uncut, at the ornate Frederick W. Vanderbilt mansion a few miles up the Hudson. Compared to this three-million-dollar mausoleum of the gilded age, with its fabulous rugs and tapestries and appallingly bad oil paintings, Hyde Park is the modest home of a well-to-do country squire.

Honorable Limb

ON to Saratoga, a spa and vacation place since the days when wealthy Gothamites used to drive their coaches all the way from New York City to Saratoga in search of pleasure.

Although not at the height of the racing season, the hotels were filled to overflowing. On the battlefield at Saratoga where Benedict Arnold was shot in battle for the second time in the same leg, is a monument bearing no name—a boot carved from marble.

The boot has a romantic history. When Washington was asked what he would do if Benedict Arnold were ever caught, he is said to have replied that he would cut off Arnold's heroic and twice-wounded leg and give it a full military burial, and would hang what was left of his brilliant officer.

This boot, damaged at least once by a misguided patriotic vandal, is the only monument to Benedict Arnold in the world.

Up along the shores of incomparable Lake George to Ticonderoga, where the fort, museum and library of books and original documents constitute, to my way of thinking, the most interesting historic shrine in the United States. No wonder Kenneth Roberts' best research and writing came out of this star-shaped fort.

Here the Black Watch still makes its heroic charge; the shades of Ethan Allen and his "Green Mounting" boys move through the dusk. At the Pell mansion at the foot of the hill is a formal garden laid out in 1756 by the French. Here roses still bloom and Lake Champlain laps a shore known to Abercromby, Amherst, Montgomery, Knox, Burgoyne; French, English, Scotch and mercenary Brunswickian soldiers.

And deep in the waters of Champlain and George at spots known to a few experts lie whole ships sunk during the Revolution, with the guns, skeletons and harness of war weirdly intact.

Readable Warrior

THOSE who have seen parts of the Eisenhower memoirs, "Crusade in Europe," to be published by Doubleday, say they will be brilliantly readable. Eisenhower's memory has amazed the editors and researchers with whom he has been working.

Those who tried to wade through the late Gen. John J. Pershing's "My Experiences in the World War" know how dusty and dull such a recital can be if not well written. Pershing, incidentally, refused professional help in shaping his book. A brilliant soldier is not necessarily a brilliant writer—Churchill being a noteworthy exception to the rule.

Thurber fans will be delighted to learn that "The Beast in Me and Other Animals" is scheduled for publication in late September. Best drawing in the book is said to be "A Gloat Near a Patch of I-Told-You-So." It would be fun to watch the faces of archeologists digging up books by Thurber one million years hence.

MacLeish Broadside

ENRAGED by the country-wide attempts to censor The Nation and ban it from libraries and schools, Archibald MacLeish, poet, member of UNESCO and former Librarian of Congress, has accepted the chairmanship of a committee to fight the suppression. He says in part: "The ban on The Nation is not only the most arrogant and contemptuous of the recent challenges of the American principle of freedom of mind and freedom of expression; it is also the most dangerous."

But in another realm of publishing a slightly less reprehensible form of social pressure is having good results. A minority of the frightened tycoons in the comic magazine racket have voted to establish a six-point code of "minimum editorial standards" which is wholly inadequate, but still a step in the right direction. Unfortunately, less than one third of the total weekly circulation is represented.

18th Century Village of Falls Church Becomes a City Tonight...

In the foreground is Tyler Gardens, new 480-unit apartment development comprising 79 buildings. The thoroughfare is West Broad st., with the Falls Church business section in center background, to the right of the water tank

Blossoming Town Got Its Name by Surveyors' Error

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

WHILE residents of Falls Church, Va. sleep tonight, their town will shed nearly 250 years of history to become a city.

At 12:01 a. m., the village that once dozed where Leesburg Pike and Lee Highway cross will formally become a second class Virginia city—with a few fringes of lavender and old lace.

The transition, decreed August 4 by the Fairfax Circuit Court, is a paper-and-ink affair.

Falls Church will still be bounded by the same lines it had as a town. Lots of other things won't change.

Names like Lincoln ave., Madison le., Washington and Jefferson sts. will continue to mark Falls Church signposts. And so will streets like Poplar, Oak, Berry and Timber le.

Down Broad st. by the traffic light, the same T-shirted boys will be standing by the corner drugstore, swapping notes on the new cars and on passing girls.

If you want, you can still drop in at Brown's Store on the oposite corner, where Horace E. Brown and his father before him have sold everything from galvanized buckets to yard goods since 1883.

Or stroll up North Washington st., past the fine homes set back in deep shade on cool lawns, to the practical area of squat, homely garages and drive-in eateries.

Or drive past mile on mile of gleaming new homes, paint-fresh, small, each looking a bit like the one next to it.

But in the long run, Falls Church leaders think city status will change the growing community—give it power it lacked as a town to improve its schools, police, water supply, roads and zoning.

County's the Loser

WHAT will this city status mean tomorrow, or Wednesday, or next month?

Town Manager Roy Dunn leaned his easy, six-foot frame back in an office chair and gave some of the answers:

1. Taxes: They'll be lower. Falls Church residents now pay a total of $4.69 for each $100 of their real and personal property. Of that total, Falls Church gets $1.50 and Fairfax County takes $3.19—$2.65 for schools (it operates those in town) and 54 cents for county operation.

If Falls Church officials decide they can keep in the black with their current $1.50 assessment, residents of the new city will have to pay only $4.15 taxes—the town assessment, plus the continuing $2.65 to Fairfax for schools.

Falls Church teen-agers are forming civic groups faster than their elders.

First, with the help of local businessmen, they promoted a $15,000 "Teen Canteen," made from a converted war building on Hillwood ave., at Douglas st.

Not satisfied with town civic progress, another group of teen-agers organized the Junior Civic League to prod more political consciousness into their parents. Now forming is "The Leftover Club," organized along the same lines and made up of 19- to-26-year-olds who feel left out of "teen" activity.

Even if the new Falls Church City Council decides local taxes must be raised, it cannot boost them beyond the $2 limit set on Virginia's second class cities. Thus, the total new tax cannot be higher than $4.65, 4 cents below the present rate. And it may be much lower than that.

2. Schools. They will continue under Fairfax operation unless a special act of the Virginia Legislature gives them to Falls Church.

3. Roads: They should improve. This phase is a pet of Dunn's, an engineer by training, whose tiny office bulges with blueprints, contracts and specifications. As a city, Dunn points out that Falls Church will receive 4000 State dollars yearly for each mile of primary highway in its limits, $300 for each mile of secondary road.

As a town, Falls Church had its primary roads kept up by the State, got no lump allocation.

The changeover will give a maximum of about $20,000 annually to the new city if all of its primary mileage is counted in—and much of that money can be used to improve secondary roads, Dunn feels.

4. Utilities: No change. Water rates will continue at $4.50 quarterly for the first 10,000 gallons, 30 cents a gallon thereafter. Sewers and garbage disposal charges will be unchanged.

5. Courts: Falls Church will have its own commissioner of revenue, appointed by the Fairfax Circuit Court until the next election. It also will have its own judge to operate a Police Court.

6. Police: Dunn feels that the 12-man force will continue to improve. City status will make Police Capt. Elliot H. Howe official chief. The mayor was chief under the town charter. According to Captain Howe, arrests have more than doubled since he took over this year.

7. Legislative power: The new city can operate independently of the Fairfax Board of Supervisors for the first time. It can vote daylight saving time for itself if it wants. Its irate citizens can level their gripes directly at their own city council.

8. Legal status: Falls Church, beginning tonight, cannot be annexed. As a town, it was open to annexation by any neighboring city. But Falls Church, itself, has the power to annex.

Woman on Council

GUIDING Falls Church through its new period of growing pains will be the city council—six elected members who begin serving September 1, and three to be appointed by the Circuit Court.

The new council will include a career businesswoman and mother, Mrs. Merrill Lee Chanel; a plumbing contractor, J. H. McCarthy; a department store employe, Sherman Wells; a Government engineer, Archie Munson; a testing engineer, John McRae, and a building contractor, Boyd Case.

It will be headed by the new city mayor, Albert Orme, a 61-year-old Commerce Department worker. He was elected without opposition after Mayor Fenner Hazelgrove retired to take care of his contracting business.

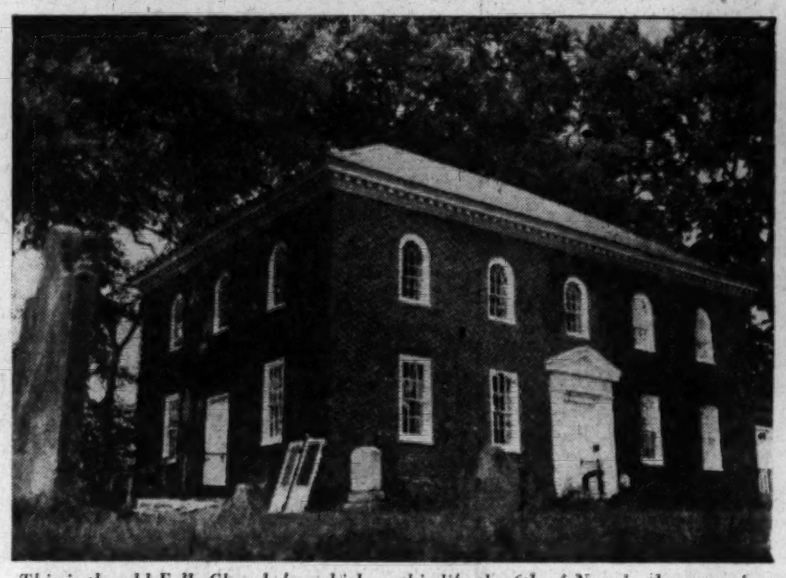
If the city council follows well-worn paths, it will be an argumentative, informal group just as vitally concerned about a burned-out street light as it is about the tax situation.

At the last town council meeting, for example, the six members took up such matters as a pack of 30 howling, barking dogs in a home on Great Falls st. Council members, who argued they had no authority to suppress the dogs, were invited by one complaining citizen to "spend the night at my house and hear them yourself."

And retiring Councilman Walter B. Follin complained that piercing, drawn-out whistles on Washington & Old Dominion Railroad trains near his home disturbed his rest. Mayor Hazelgrove pointed out that train whistles were governed by Federal regulations.

Meetings in the gingerbread, one-story town hall are informal. Often so many people are speaking that the vote cannot be heard. But out of the democratic melee comes legislation on taxes, utilities and local government far beyond the dreams of the men who founded Falls Church in 1699.

Falls Church will dust off its history September 23-25 when the park committee puts on the "Virginia Village Festival." The affair will include a tour of historic homes and will feature booths made up to resemble taverns, stores and homes in old Falls Church. Proceeds will help finance purchase of a city park.



This is the old Falls Church for which the town was named. The inscription on the tombstone at left reads: "In memory of Ruben Dye, who departed this life the 6th of Nov. in the year of our Lord 1815 in the 35th year of his age leaving a wife and five small children to deplore their loss"

4 Miles Vs. 3000

AS FAR as its name goes, Falls Church should have been called something else.

The town gets its name from the eighteenth century Episcopal Church set back under quiet oaks off Washington st. And the church got its name because a couple of king's contractors were lazy.

About 1700, the English Crown is supposed to have ordered the contractors to set up a church by the "Potomac Falls"—probably Little Falls. The contractors, their bearings mixed, wound up at the present town site some 4 miles away.

According to the story, the men had begun preliminary surveys for the church before they discovered their error. They figured the English King, some 3000 miles away, wouldn't know the difference.

As a result, the first Falls Episcopal Church was built on the site about 1709, got its name and later named the town.

Ten years before, hardy English, Irish and Scottish families with names like Thompson, Trammel, English, Broadwater, Lynch and Lightfoot already had taken a toehold in the new community.

One of the Lightfoot descendants, 16-year-old Melvin Lee Steadman, jr., is an ardent Falls Church historian today.

Pioneers built the first home, the "Big Chimney House" with 22-foot-wide chimneys, in what is now a field off West Broad st., opposite the Odd Fellows Hall. Later, they built some of the handsome colonial frame homes you can see today.

Lynch House, built in 1797, stands today at 170 E. Broad st. as a doctor's office.

The Munson Hill House was erected about 1803 on Leesburg Pike near the present Seven Corners. Set back off the road with fine gardens and a magnificient view, it is now owned by Donald L. Wilkins.

The Clover House, built in 1797, is at 226 W. Broad st.; Mount Pleasant, built in 1770, today is the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen E. Rice on Idlywood rd.

The Bars Were Lower

EVEN back in the eighteenth century, the settlers who built these homes knew about price control. In 1755, Fairfax Courthouse records show, maximum rates applied to all area taverns, including the then-popular Falls Church bistro, the Mills Tavern.

The court ruled that a gill of rum should cost no more than 8 shillings, about the equivalent of $1.60; New England rum, $1.50; a quart of Madeira wine, the same; English strong beer per dozen (pints?), 26 cents.

You could get a gallon of corn or oats for your horse for 8 cents. And the maximum charge for a night's lodgings at the Mills Tavern "with clean sheets," was 12 cents. "Otherwise, nothing," regulations said, presumably referring to the clean sheets.

The present Falls Episcopal Church was built in 1768 after the old church's vestrymen, including George Washington, wrote off the old structure as "rotten."

The village and town has heard the tramp of marching men in eight wars: the French and Indian Wars of 1760, the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, Mexican War, Civil War, Spanish-American War and World Wars I and II.

During the Revolution, the Falls Church was abandoned for worship and used as a recruiting headquarters. In 1812, Dolly Madison, the President's wife, fled through the village on her way to Langley, Va., after the British burned Washington.

In 1847, Capt. Henry Fairfax left his quiet village to command the Fairfax Volunteers in the Mexican War, was killed in action, and today lies buried in the Falls Church yard.

A Memory of Lincoln

BUT it took the Civil War to bring actual violence to the town. One memento is the Lawton Manor, which now stands at 203 Lawton rd. as the home of Ernest Shepard. It was Confederate General Longstreet's headquarters before Union armies occupied the town in 1861.

Between that year and 1864, both armies alternately took and lost Falls Church. Both sides captured old Fort Buffalo, on the bank above the present Seven Corners.

And in 1864, the minister of a Baptist Church on East Broad st. was captured by General Mosby's Confederate forces in a town raid, and was shot as a Union spy.

One living resident of the town, Mrs. Flora Crossman Birch of 312 East Broad st., remembers President Lincoln reviewing the Union troops at Baileys Crossroads. Mrs. Birch, now nearly 90, recalls: "The music was grand."

The war behind, Falls Church went back to its sleepy pace, jarred only by such incidents as the 1866 "Crusades," when women, irate at public drinking in a town tavern, picketed it until it closed. Falls Church proper has been dry ever since.

An adding machine might well be used to understand more recent Falls Church history.

As a sort of bedroom annex to Washington, Falls Church shared in the recent wartime influx of Government workers. Between 1940 and 1948, it produced Falls Church figures like these:

A population jump from 2576 to 5338.

An elementary school enrollment increase from 272 to 1194.

A jump in deposits in the Falls Church Bank from $935,000 to $4,500,000.

A rise in estimated value of new construction from $1,199,889 in 1946-47 to more than $4,752,730 for the fiscal year ending this month.

New Success Stories

STATISTICS like that make Falls Church a booming young city. A surprising number of the businessmen who helped make it that way are young, too.

Thirty-seven-year-old Manly T. Rust is one of them. He went into business in 1940 with a $50 investment, has since parlayed it into a large shopping center in West Falls Church, a valuable parking lot in the center of town, and is planning to build a $400,000 apartment development near the shopping center.

Rust, who still waits on customers in his drug store, is a hard man to talk to. When you think you have his ear, he's off to help a lady find the right shade of nail polish.

Like Rust in age and business success are Bill Robertson, 36, who owns two grocery stores in Falls Church, stock in the Tyler Gardens apartments and several stores out of town. He began selling produce house-to-house in a truck.

And there's John Koons, who at 29 is co-owner of the large Falls Church Garage. His partner, Joseph V. Birch, is in his 30's. Koons began as salesman for a local motor company.

Or home builder Frank Malice, 36; contractor C. B. Runyon, also in his middle 30s; and 37-year-old Joel Harris, owner of valuable Falls Church real estate.

Looking Beyond the Line

THE community growth these young men have helped to nurture is boosting aspirin consumption among Falls Church officials. One of their biggest problems, with the town bulging its legal limits, is annexation.

Falls Church is eyeing five communities in nearby Fairfax County which it feels are integral parts of the new city. They are East Greenway Downs, Jefferson Village, Lee Boulevard Heights and the Birch subdivision, plus the remainder of Hillwood.

If Falls Church fails to "round out" its lines to include these communities, one expert warned, it will result in spotty development of the entire area.

The e[illegible]as H. Reed, not only recom[illegible]ed annexation of those subdivisions but also of a substantial margin of undeveloped land where future development may occur.

Falls Church officials are preparing to hire a planning engineer to work out facts, figures and benefits of the proposed merger. These they would use to "sell the idea" to the five communities, to convince them that the change would bring better services.

Spokesmen for the Greenway Downs and Jefferson Village Citizens Associations say their members are increasingly interested in annexation, but "need to be given the facts."

Convenience and Taxes

MAN-IN-THE-STREET reaction to the proposed annexation ranges from enthusiastic to downright sour.

Mrs. Dorothy Bradford, a hairdresser in a Jefferson Village beauty shop, thinks Falls Chuch "isn't growing fast enough," Annexation, she says, would accelerate the process.

"When you want a pair of shoes now," she says, "you have to go to Clarendon (in Arlington) to get the right kind."

But Thomas E. Myers, sunning himself in front of his new Jefferson Village home at 804 Washington ave., wants "no part" of annexation. Says he: "Falls Church would up our taxes but we wouldn't get a thing in return that we don't already get from Fairfax."

Fairfax residents west of the town—out of the annexation line-of-fire—are apparently more tolerant of the new city's growth.

Omar Nigh, owner of the 40-acre Falls Church Orchards on Leesburg Pike, said annexation is "all right with me. When the town moves out here, I'll just move on where there's room to breathe." He recalled the days before Falls Church expanded "when you had to pay 25 cents to get to the town along the toll road."

City 'Stringing Out'

CITY officials also have a zoning problem to worry about.

Falls Church, like Topsy, "just growed." Its business section originally was in its center. Its housing fanned out along the two intersecting streets, and the business followed.

According to Planning Commission Chairman Ed Knouse, Falls Church business is expanding three ways: It is moving out West Broad st. and down South Washington st., and is building up at the Seven Corners intersection.

Like many planners, Knouse fears the business houses will become "strung out" and inaccessible. He is studying several plans to provide more shopping and parking space in the center of town.

One zoning battle came up about a year ago, when owners of property smack beside the Falls Episcopal Church said they would build a filling station there. Churchgoers raised a petition. Town officials said they could do nothing—the property was zoned commercial. In the end, the property owner gave up the filling station project.

Tussle Over Schools

FALLS CHURCH schools—the Madison and Jefferson Elementary and the Falls Church High School—have been the center of numerous battles recently. Parents complain they are badly overcrowded and that facilities, particularly toilets, in the elementary schools are bad.

The Fairfax school board, which operates the schools, erected four quonset huts behind the Madison School to take up some of the overflow. It is installing new sanitary facilities in the school. And a new Oak Street Elementary School is nearly finished.

To take over the schools, Falls Church would need an act of the State Legislature. School Board Member Sam Dennis says that definitely will be considered. He points out that it is "normal for Virginia cities to operate their own school systems."

But whatever the problems ahead—zoning, annexation, schools—the new City of Falls Church feels it has the background to tackle them.

The street turning right is the present S. Washington st. The Falls Church Bank is on the site of the Star Tavern in right foreground. In right background is a Baptist church whose pastor was executed by General Mosby's Confederate troops for spying

The original settlers of Falls Church apparently were supermen.

According to local Historian Milton Lee Steadman, jr., the Susquehannock Indians, who once roamed the area, occasionally towered 7½ and 8 feet.

Maryland's Gambino Faces Eligibility Ban

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

BERT BELL, National Football League commissioner who has reserved decision on the Harry Gilmer case for 10 days, will ultimately rule that Gilmer can play in the Redskins' exhibition games . . . and risk a suit for damages against the league by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., plus termination of the contract that calls for NFL champions to play in the game through 1951 . . . Joe Louis, when in Washington last week, declared he would soon campaign actively for one of the presidential candidates and encouraged speculation about his choice by adding, "I don't think my man has much chance to win." . . . Radio Broadcaster Arch McDonald, booked for a 10-minute audience with President Truman at the White House the other day, talked with Mr. Truman for 33 minutes at the latter's invitation . . . television cameramen have no fear now that their expensive cameras, exposed to damage by foul balls, will suffer. Only once has a ball hit a camera and it was inoperative at the time. But the impact started it functioning . . . Enos Slaughter, Cardinal outfielder, was notified the other day that St. Louis fans would honor him later this month with an "Enos Slaughter Night." The same day he thanked 'em in advance by tripling with the bases loaded and knocking in all six runs of a 6-2 victory over the Reds . . . during the first year of his illness, Babe Ruth assumed that he was suffering merely from a headache.

POVICH

SID LUCKMAN and Bulldog Turner of the Chicago Bears have both authored football books that will be released by Publishers Ziff-Davis on Tuesday . . . Turner, all-league center, has written the instructive tome, "Playing the Line." Luckman's offering is "Passing for Touchdowns" in which he names the top artists but modestly omits his own name . . . Joe Kuhel's umpire-baiting tactics of late recall the fact that he was once offered an umpiring job by the American League. "No, thanks," said Kuhel, "I have the greatest respect for umpires but I just couldn't bear being one." . . . any day now Promoter Goldie Ahearn will announce he has signed Joe Louis, to box an exhibition bout on the September 20 Griffith Stadium card that features Heavyweight Elmer Ray against an opponent not yet named. Louis may box Arturo Godoy . . . out at Maryland they can hardly wait for football practice to begin. The first drill is scheduled at 6:30 a. m., September 1 . . . the Nats have bought Rube Wilson, a 21-year-old southpaw from Rock Hill, N. C., of the Tri-State League and he has already reported to their Charlotte farm . . . Ramon Garcia, the Nats' little Cuban pitcher at Chattanooga, has won three in a row, the latest being a three-hit shutout, and he will be recalled . . . Quincy Howe, CBS's science authority, quotes the report of Dr. J. G. Lester of Emory University, who says that to run the mile in four minutes, a man has to develop seven horsepower.

WHEN THE CLEVELAND STADIUM announcer introduced the Indians' starting pitcher as Leroy Paige last week, he was immediately rebuked by President Bill Veeck who phoned from the press box: "Paige's name is Satchel, not Leroy. Remember that!" . . . Col. C. Leo De Orsey, George Marshall's partner in the Redskins but no yes-man, observed in a radio broadcast the other day: "Indeed, I am told that the Redskins' material is so good this year that Marshall is ready to coach the team himself, with or without telephones." . . . on the same day that Babe Zaharias asked to be included in the men's national open golf tournament, she failed to top the scoring in the women's national open . . . the Gillette Co.'s offer for the radio rights of the Charles-Bivins fight here next month was rejected by the Variety Club despite the fact it was a record price for a Washington fight . . . before big league scouts could get to him, the Dallas club bought Pitcher Roy Saner from Houma, Iowa, of the Evangeline League, who owns the phenomenal record of 19 wins and 1 defeat . . . Jack Flynn of the Northwest Airlines writes that the Indians figure to win the A. L. pennant because they have the best of the schedule from here in. He points out that the Indians have 25 games left with the weak Chicago, St. Louis and Washington clubs while the A's have only 17, the Yankees only 20 and the Red Sox 22.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN will make White House history on Tuesday night when he goes to Griffith Stadium to add his tribute to the ceremonies for Clark Griffith. He will be the first President ever to see a night ball game . . . Under a new All-America Conference ruling, play will be speeded up in that league. Clubs are now limited to 25 seconds between plays in contrast to the 30 seconds in past years . . . when Maxie Rosenbloom was comanaged by the New York tough guys, Owney Madden and Bill Duffy, they accepted a fight with Bob Godwin in West Palm Beach, Fla. The gate was small and Godwin's manager, the late Lou Diamond, grabbed the first $100 worth of receipts and wired it to his wife, Bertha, in Philadelphia. Also infuriating Rosenbloom's handlers was the decision that went against their man. They waved their fists at Diamond and screamed, "you'll have to answer to Madden and Duffy for this!" Said Diamond, "Okay, okay, but I'd rather answer to a hundred Maddens and Duffys than one Bertha" . . . after the Alpine Boy case in which Jockey Leggett was carried to his death by the near-blind horse and Maryland racing commissioners took no action, Sports Editor Roger Pippen of Baltimore sent each commissioner a new brush, "the better to whitewash the next case." . . . the wrestling matches, jeered at and scorned by fans of other sports, are providing television's best show in town.

Pageantry Marks End Of Olympics

By Gayle Talbot

Olympic Stadium, Wembley, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Olympic games ended late today in golden sunshine and splendor, 16 days and 1,500,000 spectators after they were opened by Britain's King.

The Olympic torch, which has blazed symbolically through the days and nights of a great sports spectacle, was extinguished. The flags of competing nations were paraded as a vast throng of 80,000 stood with bared heads and sang to the tune of the "Londonderry Air."

"Let us be glad—but not because of winning,
"Let us go home one family today.
"God make our games a glorious beginning,
"And, hand in hand, together guide us on our way."

The music perhaps is better known as that of "Danny Boy."

The music, plus the words, were tremendously moving in today's setting. The words were written especially for the occasion.

The British still are the masters of such pageantry. There was a haunting beauty to the closing of the games. A lump was in many a throat when there died upon the sunlit air the final strains of "God Save The King." For a minute the crowd stood still, seemingly not realizing it was over.

Proudest of all, standing there, seemed to be the Americans. For them it had been a glorious two weeks. They were carting away the most gold medals—38—and the unofficial team championship with 662 points compared with 353 for second place Sweden.

The Olympic Games were such a wondrous success it is difficult to realize tonight that there was great fear less than three weeks ago that they would flop.

The 80,000 and more who climbed the long hill leading to the Olympic Stadium to say goodbye to the games might have been there for 16 days. They looked the same as the sunbaked throng

Yanks Crush A's Again, 14-3

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Scoring eight runs in one inning for the second consecutive game, the New York Yankees rolled to a 14-3 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics today.

The Yanks, who scored eight times in the eighth inning to beat the A's 8-5 last night, exploded for eight runs in the second inning today to enable Athletic-killer Vic Raschi to coast to his fifteenth victory of the season.

Joe DiMaggio, who belted his twenty-fifth homer and drove in four runs, walked to start the Yankees' big second inning rally. DiMaggio also climaxed the uprising against Dick Fowler, who absorbed all the punishment, with a two-run single to become the first player in either circuit to drive in 100 runs this season.

Vico Leads Tigers To 10-3 Triumph

St. Louis, Aug. 14 (AP).—George Vico drove in seven runs with a homerun, triple and a double to pace the Detroit Tigers to a 10-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Browns tonight. Virg Trucks turned in a sparkling one-hit relief chore after Starting Pitcher Walt Pierce was batted out in the third inning.

Bosox Chase Haefner, Nip Nats, 4-3, to Gain Second

By Morris Siegel

Post Reporter

Just off the disabled list himself, Mickey Haefner made the Red Sox look extremely feeble for seven innings yesterday, but they recuperated sufficiently in the eighth to score all of their runs and whip him and the Nats, 4-3.

Haefner had a three-hit shutout going for him until the fatal eighth, but the Sox drove him from the mound with a four-hit attack. It was Mickey's tenth loss of the season.

Four of their seven hits, a walk and an error added up to the eyelash Boston victory which pushed the Sockers into second place by a percentage point over the Athletics.

All of the Nat scoring was done at the expense of Joe Dobson, who was trying for his fourteenth success. He was removed for a pinch-hitter in the seventh with Mickey Harris and Earl Johnson finishing, the first of the two lefthanders getting credit for the decision, his fourth.

Dobson Nats' Target

The Nats got all of their eight hits, five being doubles, off Dobson.

Starting for the first time since he came down with a sore arm three weeks ago, little Haefner was breezing along in fine fettle until the Sox exploded on him. He had allowed only one of them to reach third base and had even struck out Ted Williams.

Johnny Pesky started the landslide with a single. In quick succession, Ted Williams and Junior Stephens also singled. Haefner's shutout was gone and he himself was on his way out.

Doerr's fly to Sherry Robertson scored Williams. Spence walked and Billy Goodman rammed a single to right, scoring Stephens. Robertson allowed the ball to get through him, Spence continuing to third and Goodman taking second.

Haefner was excused at this point and Relief Pitcher Tom Ferrick walked Matt Batts to load the bases.

Up trudged old man Wally Moses to bat for Harris. He delivered a fly to center which enabled Spence to check in with the fourth run of the inning.

Earl Wooten got two of the Nats' doubles and scored each time. Jake Early singled him home with the first run in the second and Haefner's squeeze bunt got him across in the fourth.

Successive doubles by Robertson and Ed Stewart accounted for the other Nat marker in the third.

The Nats got only one hit after the fourth, a lead-off double by Mark Christman in the sixth. He stayed right there.

IN SHORT—The Griffith Stadium flag was at half-mast in respect to George Richardson, treasurer of the Nats, who died yesterday in Philadelphia . . . Gil Coan suffered a cracked bone in his right ankle when he was hit during batting practice Friday night and will be out for a week . . . Stephens' eighth-inning single, which drove in Pesky, was the 100th run the Bosox shortstop had batted in this year . . . Williams has been held to two singles in nine official tries by Nat pitchers Friday and yesterday . . . Ray Scarborough (10-6) opposes Jack Kramer (13-3) in the first game of today's twin bill. Walter Masterson (7-9) faces Ellis Kinder (5-7) in the nightcap.

Tribe's Spree In First Beats Chicago, 4-2

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians moved a game and a half in front of the American League field by beating the Chicago White Sox, 4-2, before a ladies' day turnout of 11,705 persons here today.

The Indians scored four times in the first inning off Allen Gettel to gain their tenth victory in 12 games against Chicago. Steve Gromek, pounded for five doubles among Chicago's eight hits, gained his seventh victory with help from Russ Christopher.

Dale Mitchell opened the game with a single. Hal Peck survived on Don Kolloway's error and Cleveland went on to score four times before Gettel snared the third out.

Manager Lou Boudreau singled for one run. Joe Gordon doubled for two more. Ken Keltner's single scored Gordon.

After that Gettel and Bob Gillespie, who took over in the seventh, allowed only three singles.

Chicago scored in the first. Gromek walked the bases full and Ralph Hodgin singled to score Tony Lupien. The last Sox marker came in the sixth. Dave Philley doubled and scored on Cass Michaels' single.

Conference Head Says Big Halfback Is 'Through'

By Bus Ham

Post Reporter

Lu Gambino, Maryland University's great halfback, last night was the subject of a red-hot Southern Conference eligibility controversy because he already has played three years of varsity football.

The question of Gambino's status threatened to knock the big, baldish fellow out of Maryland's backfield this autumn and seriously lessen Coach Jim Tatum's chances of a second successful season.

Col. William Couper, of Virginia Military Institute, president of the conference, told The Washington Post that Gambino has been "marked off the list . . . he is through in every respect . . . he can't play more than three years."

Terps Think Differently

But Maryland University officials felt differently. They maintain that Gambino is entitled to four years of varsity competition under rules applying to war veterans.

Tatum, reached at his home last night, said:

"Maryland University's interpretation of the eligibility rules is that a boy shall be allowed to represent his university against other schools four years under normal or peacetime conditions. One of these years would be his freshman year and three varsity years.

"But any boy whose participation was affected by the war is allowed to play all four years as a varsity man."

Tatum pointed out that other athletes at Maryland and at other Southern Conference schools have played four or more years of varsity ball under exceptions set out for war veterans.

Maryland Action Indefinite

Dr. Harry Byrd, president of Maryland University, was out of the city last night and Tatum was not in a position to say whfat action the school might take in event Gambino is officially declared ineligible.

Rival Southern Conference coaches raised the question of Gambino's eligibility.

His record shows that he played one year at Indiana University, 1942, spent the next three years in the Army Air Forces and has had two seasons at Maryland, 1946 and 1947.

Couper said that Gambino's wartime service does not entitle him to a fourth year of varsity play.

"Servicemen were given an extension of time in which to complete their eligibility," Couper explained. "If Gambino had not been given this additional time, he could not have played in 1946 and 1947.

"Can't Play . . . "

"He can't play more than three years (of varsity ball) and he already has played three seasons (one at Indiana and two at Maryland).

"You may as well ask me about Jim Thorpe playing again."

Couper said there was no need of taking Gambino's case before the conference for a ruling.

"Unless there are some facts that we don't know about at this time," he added.

Only Maryland University officials would know about that, he suggested.

In this respect, Tatum said that Gambino did not have a year of freshman competition because Indiana University, where he first matriculated, did not have a freshman schedule.

Gambino, a 205-pound, six-footer, was one of the Nation's leading scorers last year with 96 points. He scored 16 touchdowns in 10 games.

He was a bright star in Maryland's 20-20 tie with the University of Georgia in the Gator Bowl game last New Year's Day, scoring two touchdowns.

Gambino received one of the Touchdown Club awards at its an-

Eligibility of NC State's 'Footsy' Palmer Questioned

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 14 (AP).—Athletic officials at North Carolina State College are investigating the eligibility of Leslie (Footsy) Palmer, star fullback and the Nation's leading punter in 1947, Dr. H. A. Fisher, chairman of the athletic council, announced.

Dr. Fisher said that Col. William Couper, president of the Southern Conference, had queried the school about Palmer's status and said a report had reached his office that Palmer had played football at the University of West Virginia in 1941.

"I have written to West Virginia for the facts about Palmer's play in 1941," Fisher announced, "and when we received an answer we will rule on his eligibility.

"We knew that Palmer played at West Virginia in 1942, but we did not know he attended that institution in 1941. I have talked with Palmer, and he has said that he did not take part in any regularly scheduled football at West Virginia in 1941. He says, however, that he played in an informal game against Staunton Military Academy."

Palmer, from Cedar Grove, W. Va., entered service in December of 1942 and upon his discharge enrolled at State, where he played in 1946 and 1947. Had he played only one year at West Virginia, he would be eligible for the 1948 season at State.

Last season Palmer was an outstanding player for Coach Beattie Feathers' team which won five, lost three, and tied one. He set a new intercollegiate punting record by averaging 42.6 yards for 65 kicks.

Czech Olympic Girl Gymnast Dies in London

London, Aug. 14 (AP).—Eliska Nosakova of Prague, 23-year-old member of Czechoslovakia's gymnastics team, died in a London hospital today after an infantile paralysis attack that kept her out of Olympic competition.

She complained of feeling ill before her arrival in Great Britain and was taken from the Czech camp to a hospital four days ago.

The Czech flag was blackdraped this morning as the team filed past the victory rostrum to receive awards for their country's gymnastics triumph. The Czech gymnasts wore black armbands as they stood on the rostrum.

Miss Misakova was among the three best athletes on the Czech team. Her body will be cremated in London Monday.

Braves' Rally Beats Dodgers

Boston, Aug. 14 (AP).—After almost kicking it away in the early innings the Boston Braves tonight rallied for three runs in the ninth inning and defeated the Dodgers, 4-3, widening their lead over the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn clubs which virtually are tied for second place, to four games.

The victory went to Nelson Potter, who received a tremendous ovation from the 32,457 paid fans as his ninth-inning single kept the rally alive.

Eagle Gives Otto Greiner Surprise Lead at St. Paul

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 14 (AP).—Otto Greiner, Baltimore, a virtual unknown among professional golfers, boosted himself into the lead of the St. Paul Open at the end of today's third round with a total of 204.

Greiner, 29-year-old former Navy flyer, flashed a 5-under-par 67 to take a one-stroke lead over fashion-plate Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif. Demaret started the day with what appeared to be a comfortable three-stroke lead.

But Greiner, shooting excellent golf, particularly with his irons, counted birdies on the fifth and eighth holes, and was 2 under par on the 519-yard twelfth hole when he dropped his chip shot. He was one over par on the fifteenth hole, but came back with birdies on the sixteenth and eighteenth holes.

Greiner has been playing golf virtually all his life, but has been a professional for but 15 months. His eagle on the twelfth came when his chip shot hit the green about 15 feet out, rolled about a foot past the cup and then back in.

Demaret had trouble on the first nine. He took a 1-over-par 37 going out and had to put in some hard work to finish with a 1-under-par 35 coming in.

Greiner has played consistent sub-par golf. He shot a 68 the first day and a 69 yesterday.

Par took a beating from the cutdown field today, 19 of the contestants bettering regulation and 6 others equaling it.

Two strokes behind Demaret at 207 were E. J. "Dutch" Harrison, Albuquerque, N. Mex., and George Fazio, Conshohocken, Pa. Harrison shot a 68 today and Fazio a 69.

Kid Nines in Walter Johnson League Playoffs

On the Line

With Considine

LONDON, Aug. 14 (INS).—Unless the Olympic movies include some slow-motion films of Barney Ewell's disputed baton-pass to Lorenzo Wright, seeing the pictures isn't going to give you too much information about the 400-meter relay snafu.

Our guys go past the cameras so fast that even the most eagle-eyed track fan will have difficulty stating without a trace of doubt that Wright had a firm solo hold on the stick by the time he ran out of his switching box.

Considine

But there's not much doubt that it was bad officiating to create an incident of that nature in what had been an otherwise serene meeting of the nations. My own belief, after examining still pictures made from the flying film, is that Wright had the stick with two yards to spare.

Prior to the final ruling giving us the race, we were reluctant even to admit that we had lodged a formal protest.

As a matter of fact, Avery Brundage right after the disqualification was in a mood to let the matter drop. We had given the other nations of the world a sound shellacking in track and field; the Stars and Stripes had been raised until the flag was frayed; the National Anthem had been played so often that—to quote Dave Walsh—a stone-deaf idiot from Montenegro could sing all the verses.

IT SEEMED NICE and fitting that England should benefit from the decision. The British had been filling Wembley Stadium every day, rain and shine, in the hope of seeing a home product come home in front in a finals. Matter of fact, it was kind of sad not only to hear of the reversal but to detect the shrugging philosophy of a people who are haunted by repeated failures in the sports world they once dominated.

Chief instigator of the protest was Barney Ewell, the 31-year-old Lancaster, Pa., worker who honestly thought he won the hundred meters event and who was further frustrated in the 200 meter by Mel Patton's surging stretch drive.

Barney was itching to be a winner and was so outraged by the disqualification decision that he tried personally to shout the uncomprehending (or appalled) Olympic officials out of their stand.

An Olympic athlete is not permitted to lodge a personal protest over a decision. That must be done through his coach who, in turn, is not permitted to appear on the field while his men are performing. What Ewell did, after a long talk with Brundage, was to go to Dean Cromwell who, perhaps reluctantly, wrote out a short protest. Ewell served as messenger boy and delivered it speedily.

Brundage was still reluctant over the weekend, but was needled into promising to view the films by several American sportswriters.

THE NEXT obstacle to clear was the faintly hostile manner of the J. Arthur Rank organization, which owns the monopoly on all films taken at the games.

The Rank people, faced with one of the severest deadlines in film history (they must have technicolor prints of the games in various world capitals and big cities by September 3), balked at taking time out to show this phase of the film.

But Harold Conrad, the former New York sportswriter who is with Eagle-Lion, which will distribute the Rank film in the United States, sandbagged the boys into staging a special screening for a picked "jury" of IAAF officials and reporters.

The big regret of the American foursome now is that they threw away their baton in disgust after the disqualification announcement. If they had known that the decision would be reversed, they'd have cut it up in four equal parts and, presumably, pressed it in their memory books.

IT'S A STRANGE feeling to find yourself apprehensive about being an American, but some of us got it the other day in the early rounds of the Olympic boxing championships.

A colored boy named Eddie Johnson, a Kansas City GI who is stationed in Tokyo and reached the American Olympic boxing team on his furlough, was given the decision over a Uruguayan named Alves in the second round of the featherweight division.

I've seen a few demonstrations over unpopular decisions before, but never one quite like that one. There were actually weeping and gnashing of teeth in Alves' corner. The American boy was given a boo that would have caused Madison Square Garden to collapse.

After Johnson left the ring, naturally befuddled (he had won an edge, I thought, in a fight which would have been thrown out of St. Nick's) the South American walked around the ring, bowing, while the people went starkly mad.

Hats and cushions were thrown at the officials. Enraged Uruguayans picked up their dusky little hero and paraded him around the arena. They tried to carry him into the judges' enclosure and were pushed out. Then Alves walked around the enclosure, blowing kisses. He was picked up again and planted in the Uruguayan section of the stands, while his countrymen alternated in weeping and shouting the Spanish equivalent of Joe Jacobs' immortal "We wuz robbed."

The cops came on the scene but the little group refused to leave the arena, and there was nothing the cops seemed able to do about it.

All during the tempestuous scene, in which American sportswriters in the press box were yelled at as accomplices in this gross fraud, two kids from France and South Africa were simply beating each other's brains out in another second round match.

The Frenchman and the South African probably had dreamed for a good 10 years of this fabulous hour when they would represent their nations in an Olympic ring. They had trained religiously, had prayed for a quick passage of the hours that were placed between them and their goal.

Now here they were putting on the best fight of the tournament, with blood flowing and knockdowns here and there, and not a living soul in the crowded place (with the possible exception of the judges and their immediate families, if any) were looking at them.

SPEAKING OF BOXING and emotions, I like the story of Pascual Perez, the Argentine flyweight. He had a bit of difficulty making the weight, which, my Olympic program tells me, is "up to 51 kg., or 112 pounds, 6 ounces, 15 drams."

When he stepped on the scales the other day he was a few drams or drachmas over the limit. A couple of his horrified handlers, told that their man could not step off the scales without being disqualified, wept. Others busied themselves with the staggering task of making him lose weight while still tipping the beam.

They cut off his hair. They rubbed him raw with coarse towels. They dusted off the foot-rest of the scales, to free it of extra weight. But he still was just over the weight, and when they told him he tore out the rest of his hair in his woe.

Then a delegation made an official protest and asked that the scales be examined. It was discovered that the scales were not true, that Pascual really was under the weight limit. And there he stood, as shorn and distraught as must have been Samson.

P. S.—He lost.

Finals Open On Thursday At Ellipse

Kid teams moved into the baseball spotlight this week with the playing of championship series in the Walter Johnson memorial leagues.

The second annual playoffs will begin Thursday on the Ellipse and move into the big-league setting at Griffith Stadium Friday.

The title series in each division will be played on a two-out-of-three basis. If a third game is required in any division, it will be played Saturday at either the Ellipse or the ball park.

The title series will wind up a baseball program which began in May with coaching schools headed by Manager Joe Kuhel and his American League Nats.

Total attendance at the coaching schools on 22 diamonds was approximately 10,000. In the league games involving 98 teams, about 2500 boys participated.

The schools and leagues were conducted under the auspices of the Junior Board of Commerce, the District Recreation Department and The Washington Post.

Only one team that figured in the championships the first year has qualified for the title series this season. That team is Kelly Miller Northeast, runnerup in the 12-and-under division in 1947 and competing in the 13-14-year-old class this year.

Some leagues already have qualified their finalists while others will complete eliminations Tuesday and Wednesday. These eliminations include:

Tuesday (all games at 10 a. m.)

12 and under—Taft vs. Ancostia at Taft; Palisades vs. Takoma at Palisades.

13-14 class—Turkey Thicket vs. Rosedale at Rosedale.

Wednesday (all games at 10 a. m.)

12 and under—Wright Blue Devils vs. Manor Park at Takoma; Rosedale vs. winner of Tuesday's Taft-Anacostia game, at Rosedale.

13-14 class—Virginia Avenue vs. Anacostia at Virginia Avenue; One other game, opponents of which will be determined by Tuesday's results.

The following champions have already qualifeid for the championship series:

12 and under—American Association, won by Thomas-Parkside; International league, won by Cook Playground.

13-14 class—American League, won by Bundy Tigers; National League, won by Kelly Miller Northeast.

Games in the championship series will be limited to two hours each and played on the following time schedule each day: 9 a. m.; 12 and under; 11 a. m.: 12 and under; 2 p. m.: 13-14 class; 4 p. m.: 13-14 class.

Pageant Ends 14th Olympiad

which saw the opening. England has taken a terrific pride in showing the world that, despite its troubles, it still is a going concern.

Just before the red Olympic flame died out, J. Siegfrid Edstrom, fine old Swede who walks assisted by a cane, climbed to a white rostrum and invited the youth of the world to attend the next games at Helsinki, Finland, in 1952. Edstrom is the International Olympic Committee president.

"I call upon the youth of every country to assemble in four years at Helsinki, there to celebrate with us the games of the fifteenth Olympiad," he said in broken English. "May they display cheerfulness and concord so that the Olympic torch may be carried for the good of humanity throughout the ages."

Prior to the closing ceremony, the crowd for nearly four hours had watched the finest jumping horses in the world and their riders, almost equally skilled, fight it out in the final Olympics event—the Prix Des Nations.

Mexico's superb horses and horsemen swept the event—for their first championship in the Olympics. H. Mariles-Cortes, the last rider of the several score who had tried, won the individual title on a slick animal named "Arete." Moments later his teammate, Ruben Uriza, won second place in a jump-off against U. S. Army Col. Franklin F. Wing of San Diego, Calif., and Chevalier J. F. M. D'Orgeix of France.

The Frenchman, wearing a scarlet coat and white britches, got third honors; Colonel Wing on "Democrat" was fourth. The Mexicans were granted team honors without an argument. Spain was second and Great Britain third.

Seven members of the Scots Guards, in red tunics, took their places about the Olympic flagpole at the edge of the infield whence the five-ringed flag has flown for more than two weeks. The boys bearing the flag formed a semicircle around the Olympic rostrum.

One flag, that of Czechoslovakia, bore two black mourning pennants at the top. They were for a Czech girl gymnast who died today of infantile paralysis.

Mostly the crowd stood as, in order, a grenadier band played the Greek National Anthem, for the originators of the Olympic games, then the anthem of Finland, the next host nation. There were the speeches of Edstrom and the Lord Mayor of London.

Ten trumpeters, in brocaded yellow, blew on their long silver pipes, near-distant guns boomed a salute, the Olympic flag came fluttering slowly down into the arms of the waiting guardsmen. One looked toward the Olympic flame, and it expired. The greatest of Olympic Games had ended.

Zaharias Sets Course Record; Leads by Eight

Northfield, N. J., Aug. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Mildred (Babe) Zaharias of Ferndale, N. Y., had the women's National Open golf tournament in the palm of her hand today after the first 54 holes of play at the Atlantic City Country Club.

She set a course record for women with a 72 in a morning round, scoring the tournament's only birdie with a three on the 18th hole. Wind slowed down her long ball in the afternoon round, but she finished with a 75 for a 54-hole total of 222.

That gave her an 8-stroke bulge over her nearest rival, National Intercollegiate Champion Grace Lenczyk of Newington, Conn. Miss Lenczyk and Professional Betty Hicks of Detroit provided added excitement for galleryites in their afternoon rounds.

Lenczyk Has 32

Miss Lenczyk turned in a 32 on her last nine, a score veteran observers said was the best ever made by a woman in tournament play. The 3-under men's par score brought Miss Lenczyk a 230 for 54 holes, sending her ahead of the early amateur leaders, Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, and Mary Wall of Menominee, Mich.

Miss Hicks turned in a sparkling 72 to tie the course record set earlier by Mrs. Zaharias. That gave Miss Hicks a 231 for third place in the tournament, which closes tomorrow with a final 18 holes.

It became apparent after 36 holes that the tournament's top prize of $1200 would go to Mrs. Zaharias. The hard-hitting, former all-around girl athlete also appeared to be the only player with a good chance to carry off a special $1000 prize for breaking 300 for 72 holes.

Patty Berg Falters

Patty Berg of Minneapolis, stubby, red-haired veteran who pressed Mrs. Zaharias throughout last week's Tam O'Shanter tournament at Chicago, was off her game. A blister on her right foot slowed her down and she wound up the 54 holes with a 239.

Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., last year's open winner, came home with a 234, two strokes ahead of Katherine Hemphill of Greensboro, N. C., and Sally Sessions of North Muskegon, Mich.

Tee-off time for the final 18 holes was set at 11 a. m. (EDT). During the two days of competition 10 women dropped out, reducing the field to 41 players.

McCray Is Right Man for Those Slicker Plays

Williamsburg, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—Around here, they figure the right man was asked.

H. N. (Rube) McCray, head coach of the William and Mary Indians, 1947 Southern Conference champions, reached into the mail box and came up with the following piece of correspondence:

"Dear Sir: I would appreciate it very much if you would diagram a few old-fashioned trick plays for me. It doesn't matter what formation they are run from. Just as long as they will shake a man loose for a touchdown."

McCray, whose 1947 Indians scored 301 points during regular season play and another 19 on New Year's Day in Birmingham's Dixie Bowl Game against Arkansas, admits to having a few such plays filed away somewhere.

Returning Olympic Runner Criticizes Wembley Track

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Five United States track and field stars flew home from the Olympic games today with praise for both British spectators and the class of competition they encountered in London but somewhat critical of the brick-red oval on which they ran at Wembley.

Included in the quintet which arrived this morning and caught an afternoon plane for Los Angeles were:

Mel Patton, Beverly Hills, Calif., who won the 200 meter dash anchored the victorious United States quartet in the disputed 400 meter relay and finished a disappointing fifth in the 100 meter dash.

Roy Cochran, Long Beach, Calif., who won the 400 meter hurdles in the new Olympic record time of 51.1 seconds and ran on the victorious 1600 meter relay team.

Cliff Bourland, Los Angeles, who was fifth in the 200-meter final and also ran on the 1600-meter relay team.

Martin Biles, Oakland, Calif., sixth in the javelin throw.

Robert Likens, San Jose, Calif., eighth in the javelin throw.

Bourland not only described the Wembley track, freshly constructed of pulverized tile, as "very poor," but regretted the fact that "the richest country in the world had not provided starting blocks" for the 200-meter dash.

"I started the 200-meter race without blocks, and I didn't do so well for the first 30 yards," he recalled. "It was a big mistake not to have the starting blocks."

Asked whether the Americans had an advantage because of diet, Bourland replied:

"No athletes there looked underfed to me. The Argentinians had enough steaks to choke a horse. We had steaks about three times a week, but I understand the girl athletes didn't do so well and had cold cuts."

Bourland reiterated that his Olympic appearance was his last, saying he was "too old" at 27 to continue running. He suggested that Sweden again would furnish the principal track and field competition at the next Olympics.

The 23-year-old Patton said he would continue working toward a degree at the University of Southern California. Asked about his future on the track, Patton gave no hint of retiring in the immediate future.

Likens said he expected to enter professional baseball, but did not volunteer any details.

Lady Jack, ridden by Gardner Hallman, took the blues in the warm-up and knockdown-and-out to best last year's Maryland State champion, Charles Gartrell's Reno Kurd, to accumulate 13 points for the top tri-color. Reno Kurd had 11 points to his credit.

Xmas, owned by A. F. Auth of Silver Spring, Md., accounted for the hunter honors by winning the Ladies and Open Hunter events over Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman's versatile Gray Lark from the North End Stables in Silver Spring, Md. Xmas was ridden throughout the show by young Cecilia Yeatman, a newcomer to show ring circles.

Gray Lark, one of the most consistent mares showing in each division, won the working hunters, was second in the open, and third in the ladies' hunter classes to earn the runner-up position.

Boston Printers Win Tourney

Detroit, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Boston printers team whipped previously unbeaten Detroit twice today to win the thirty-fourth annual Printers National Baseball Tournament.

Detroit entered today's play with a record of five straight wins and needed only one victory to clinch the national title.

Boston slugged out a 12-to-8 win in the opener, pounding out 15 hits off three Detroit pitchers. The Boston club came right back with 15 more hits in the nightcap as they won, 11 to 4. Six runs came over in a big seventh inning.

Jany Makes 'Comeback' in French Tank

Paris, Aug. 14 (AP).—Alex Jany of France, Olympic games swimming "flop," redeemed himself before the home folks tonight.

He humbled America's Olympic champions by winning the 100-meter free-style and swam anchor on a victorious French 800-meter relay team as a feature of the first half of a two-day United States-France tank meet.

However, Uncle Sam's boys and girls took all the other events on the day's program.

Jany delighted 5000 of his countrymen when he defeated America's Keith Carter, Olympic champion Wally Ris and Alan Ford in that order, in the 100-meter free style Grand Prix de Paris. Jany won the race in the Tourelles open air pool in the comparatively slow time of 58 seconds flat. Carter, Purdue University star, was only six tenths of a second behind him.

The University of Iowa's Ris set a new Olympic record of 57.3 seconds in London.

In the 800 meter relay, Jany, anchor man of the French, came from five yards behind Bill Smith, who holds the world record for 200 meters, to finish 2.1 seconds ahead of him. Jany's time for the 200 was only two seconds behind Smith's world record.

The French took the girls' 300-meter Medley Relay event also, defeating Susan Zimmerman, C. J. Pence and Ann Curtis. Miss Pence lost the race for the Americans in the breaststroke event when she yielded five yards to Odette Casteur.

Miss Curtis, winner of the Olympic 400 meters free style, mopped up three yards of the lead but was unable to catch France's Josette Delmas. The Americans were clocked at 3:57.8—one and seven-tenths seconds behind the French.

Miss Zimmerman, an Oregon girl, started the afternoon by winning the 100-meter backstroke from Muriel Mellon of San Diego, Calif. Monique Verlieux, France, was third with Barbara Jensen of California fourth.

Miss Curtis had no trouble winning the 400-meter free style from Mrs. Nancy Merki Lees of Asheville, N. C., but Brenda Helser of Los Angeles was a poor fourth behind France's Colette Thomas.

Joe Verdeur of Philadelphia, Olympic breast stroke champion, set a French record of 2:42.3 for 200 meters, ahead of America's Robert Sohl and Carter.

United States Olympic divers Sam Lee, Bruce Harlan, Zoe Ann Olsen and Patricia Elsener, gave an exhibition of springboard and high platform diving.

An admission fee of $1.50 will admit fans to all matches.

Lind Captures Junior Golf

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 14 (AP).—Lanky Dean Lind, 17-year-old high school graduate from Rockford, Ill., opened up on the second nine here today to defeat Ken Venturi, San Francisco, Calif., prep champion, 4 and 2, and win the first national junior amateur golf title.

Lind, State high school medalist and winner of the Chicago junior district tournament this summer, toured the hilly, 6660-yard University of Michigan par 72 course with a four over score, five strokes better than his West Coast opponent.

Venturi went to pieces on the back nine, after making the turn even up, and lost the first four holes. He rallied briefly, halving the fourteenth and winning the fifteenth, but was turned back on the next hole when Lind went down with birdie three.

It was Lind who was most often in trouble on the first half but Venturi failed to take advantage of his chances missing several short putts.

Oakland, Md., Aug. 14. (AP)—Bernard Welsh, of Rockville, Md., won the men's single tennis crown in the Western Maryland championship today by defeating defending titlist John Curtis of Washington, 6-0, 6-1, 6-2.

It was Welsh's first participation in the annual tourney in 16 years. His win gave him the first inscription on a new challenge bowl.

In the men's doubles, Welsh and Curtis paired to down two Baltimoreans, Alex Keiles and Frank Roberts, 6-1, 6-3, 6-0.

Brecheen's Arm Ends Pirate Jinx as Cards Win, 6-3

They Meet Sept 2

Turk Likes Gilmer Over Glenn Davis

Los Angeles, Aug. 14.—Glenn Davis was a black knight in shining football armor when he and Doc Blanchard gave West Point the most potent one-two punch in collegiate football, but Coach Turk Edwards of the Washington Redskins says he'll still take Harry Gilmer over Davis.

Gilmer is a Redskin, of course, so loyalty and sentiment undoubtedly influence the Turk's choice. Yet he is sincere when he says that the Alabama All-America can do his team more good than Glenn Davis could.

Gilmer and Davis are scheduled to meet on the gridiron for the first time on September 2 when the Redskins tangle with the Los Angeles Rams in the Los Angeles Coliseum. The Rams obtained Lieutenant Davis' services from the Army for this charity classic.

In the meantime Edwards has some very sound arguments to back up his preference for Gilmer.

"I'd be the last man in the world to sell Davis short," said Edwards. "Sure, he's the fastest thing around in a football suit and he'll go for 6 every time if you're not careful, but I'll still ride with Gilmer.

"Not only is Harry a great passer, but he is a very dangerous runner. In his four years at Alabama he never missed a season when he didn't run back at least one punt or kickoff to a touchdown. Gilmer is a fine defensive man and a capable punter. He only weighs 158 or 160, but he can take a lot of punishment.

"Gilmer has a keen football sense; he's quick on the uptake. When he came to camp the T formation was all Greek to him but the kid's sopping up the deep stuff like a sponge.

"For our purposes, Gilmer is a better bet than Davis," Edwards continued. "We need a young quarterback to take over Sammy Baugh's job one of these days, and we'd rather have a potentially great T quarterback like Gilmer than the fastest left halfback who ever lived."

30,000 See 14th Victory For The Cat

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14 (AP).—Harry (the cat) Brecheen, Cardinal southpaw ace, today ended the Pittsburgh Pirate jinx which had extended to seven games, as St. Louis defeated the Buccos, 6 to 3.

It was Brecheen's 14th win of the year against 4 losses and snapped a five-game Pirate win streak. The Cards had lost seven of their last eight games with the Pirates.

Fritz Ostermueller, aged Pittsburgh lefthander, started but was driven from the mound in the fourth by a five-hit barrage topped by Catcher Del Rice's grand slam home run.

The Pirates took an early one-run lead in the first inning when Frankie Gustine walked and Ralph Kiner doubled him home.

Stan Musial opened the fourth with a ground rule double. He had reached third, but was ordered back to second when a spectator leaned over the wall and touched the ball. Terry Moore singled and Enos Slaughter followed suit, to score Musial. Whitey Kurowski sacrificed and Nippy Jones was intentionally passed, loading the sacks. Rice then punched out his base-cleaning homer.

The largest Saturday crowd since 1934, saw the game. There were 22,283 paid and 7469 children. Prior to the contest, the crowd stood for 30 seconds in respect to the critically ill Babe Ruth.

Jones Pitches Giants to 3-1 Win Over Phils

Philadelphia, Aug. 14 (AP).—Sheldon Jones turned in his eleventh victory of the season today as he hurled the New York Giants to a 3-1 conquest of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Jones yielded only seven hits in out-pitching the Phils' $25,000-bonus pitcher, Robin Roberts. Eddie Miller accounted for the Phils' lone run when he socked his twelfth homer with two out in the second inning.

Rookie Outfielder Don Mueller, playing in place of Bobby Thomson who was benched for light hitting, singled home both markers.

Walker Cooper accounted for the final Giant run when he hammered his twelfth four-bagger in the sixth inning with two out.

Schroeder, Parker Gain Net Finals

South Orange, N. J., Aug. 14 (AP).—Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., the United States' top Davis Cup hope, reached deep into his bag of tricks today and came up with enough to defeat Vic Seixas, young Philadelphian, 6—2, 11—9, 8—6, after Frank Parker had whipped Gardnar Mulloy, 3—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2, in the semifinal round of the Eastern Grass Courts tennis championships.

Schroeder had a rough time turning back Seixas, who played brilliant tennis at times. He battled all the way for every point, and was not afraid to charge the net and volley with Schroeder.

Seixas, who jumps around the court like a gazelle, kept on the offensive all the time and his tactics threw Schroeder's game off at several points in the match.

Of the two matches, the Schroeder-Seixas test was the far more colorful.

Parker and Mulloy played a more orthodox brand of tennis, each hanging back at the base line until strategic moments.

Schroeder whipped through the first set with no trouble. The result portented a relatively easy triumph for him. Schroeder was ahead at 5—3, in the second set, after which Seixas held his own service, then broke Ted's. That brought the count to 5—all, and the set went according to service until Schroeder finally broke through in the nineteenth game.

That would have finished a player with less fortitude, but Seixas was still to treat the large gallery of 2500 to some thrills.

Schroeder broke Seixas' delivery in the ninth game of the third set and the Davis Cupper was ahead 5—4. He was at match point in the tenth game but doublefaulted. Schroeder broke again in the thirteenth game at love, then held his own offering in the fourteenth, but only after four deuces.

The Parker-Mulloy match was bitterly waged for two sets. Mulloy had the edge in the first, and was hitting accurately from the back court. He also kept Parker jumping at the base line. In the second set, shots which Parker had been hitting the net with began to clear, and he broke Mulloy's service on the eighth game after two deuces.

The entire set was long and in the fourth game there were three deuces before Mulloy won it on service.

CLARK GRIFFITH WILL BE HONORED WITH A "GRIFFITH NIGHT" HERE TUESDAY

George M. Richardson Dies, Nats' Treasurer Since 1944

George M. Richardson, 70, treasurer of the Washington Baseball Club and 40 per cent stockholder, died at his Pitman, N. J. home Friday night following a heart attack.

Mr. Richardson was making plans to attend "Clark Griffith Night" at Griffith Stadium on Tuesday despite his illness, when he was stricken fatally.

He suceeded his brother, William Richardson, Griffith's original partner in the purchase of the Washington team, as vice president of the club in 1941. William Richardson died in that year.

In 1944, George Richardson accepted the post as treasurer of the team, and Calvin Griffith, son of the Nats' president, was elected to the vice presidency.

Clark Griffith, expressing deep shock at the death of Mr. Richardson, said "all who knew him are saddened. Like his brother, George Richardson was an extreme gentleman and pleasant partner in our business."

George Richardson played little part in the administration o the Washington Club but completely indorsed all of Griffith's moves. "There had never been a disagreement between myself and the Richardsons in the 28 years of our association," said Mr. Griffith.

His successor as treasurer of the Nats will probably be his son, William Richardson, 2d, it was said by Griffith. "No move to fill the post will be taken, however, until our annual stockholders' meeting in January," he said.

George Richardson is survived also by his wife, Ethel; his mother, Dr. Emma E. M. Richardson of Camden, a brother, Edward, of Philadelphia, and two daughters, also of Pitman, N. J.

At the time of his death, Mr. Richardson was vice president of two Philadelphia warehouse companies, treasurer of the National Portland Cement Co., and president of the Philadelphia Export Co.

Stan Musial, Williams Way Ahead of Field

New York, Aug. 14. (U.P.)—Only the most stubborn skeptics believed today that the American and National League batting championships would be won by anybody else than Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox and Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Including games played August 12, Williams had a 50-point edge over his nearest American League rival and Musial showed a comfortable 45-point margin over his closest pursuer in the National League. The Boston beanpole sported a .389 batting mark while the slender Redbird slugger had a .383 average.

Boudreau Hitting .349

Lou Boudreau of Cleveland was second in the American League with .349; Dale Mitchell of Cleveland was third with .334; Al (Zeke) Zarilla of the Browns was fourth with .323 and George Kell of Detroit fifth with .316.

Musial's closest "challengers" in the National Were Al Dark of the Braves, .338; Andy Pafko, Cubs, .327; Enos Slaughter of the Cards, .324, and Richie Ashburn of the Phillies, .319.

The runs-batted-in race was closer than a photo finish. Vern Stephens of the Red Sox showing a hair-line edge over Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees, 98 to 97. Williams and Musial each drove in 89 runs and Johnny Mize of the Giants chased 88 runners across.

Kiner Home Run Leader

Ralph Kiner of the Pirates was the Number One man in the home run derby with 29 and Musial moved into second spot with 28. Joe DiMaggio and Ken Keltner of Cleveland shared the American League lead with 24 circuit clouts each.

The race for most hits and most runs scored was a one-man-show. Musial had the most hits in the majors—157, and tallied the most times—93.

In the pitching department, the top hurlers in the majors were Jack Kramer of the Red Sox (13-3) and Harry Brecheen of the Cards (13-4).

Maybe Mr. Rice Is Looked Upon As Jinx to Cards

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14 (AP).—Eddie Dyer, the St. Louis Cardinal manager, and the Pirates' Traveling Secretary Bob Rice have been friends for years—that is until today.

Wednesday night Rice went into the Cardinal clubhouse for a fanning bee with his old pal, Dyer.

Yesterday, Bob again visited Eddie in the visitors' quarters.

Friday night, just as Wednesday night, the Pirates came from behind to defeat the Redbirds.

Bob went down to the clubhouse to see Eddie again today. A watchman guarded the entrance. On the door was a placard:

"Keep Rice out!"

Bob didn't get in.

Phil Collins Dies, Pitched for Three Big League Clubs

Chicago, Aug. 14. (AP)—Phillip (Fidgety Phil) Collins, 48, one-time major league baseball pitcher, died today in the County Hospital after a long illness.

He played with the Philadelphia Phillies for five years and the St. Louis Cardinals for three years before joining the Chicago Cubs for one season.

After leaving baseball Collins operated a tavern. He left his last job, as a guard at the House of Correction, last April because of ill health.

Fishing Fair Opens—Fish Don't Attend

Tilghman Island, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—The fish just weren't cooperating today as the thirteenth annual Chesapeake Bay fishing fair contest got under way with hundreds of anglers casting lines.

Predictions yesterday were that the bitin' would be good. But the striped bass, sea trout and bluefish apparently hadn't heard the predictions. Or they were just plain hard to get.

But the anglers—battling for some 50 prizes—still have until noon tomorrow to outwit the fish.

And even if the bay's marine life continues to be coy, fishermen can collect "dry land" awards—for being the fattest, oldest or youngest angler to wet a line.

One of the top awards is the Governor's trophy which will be presented by Governor Lane to the fisherman coming the longest distance to the fair.

Hutchison Wins Junior Title, 5-4

Hutchison Furniture edged Auto Row, 5-4, to win the Boys Club of Washington Junior baseball championship yesterday on East Ellipse.

Mickey Meinke, who lost a 1-0 decision Friday when Auto Row tied the series, came back to take the clincher. It was Marvin Rosenblatt's single that tallied the winning run.

Hutchison now will meet Police Boys Club No. 11 for the city's junior crown. First game starts 2 p. m. Tuesday on South Ellipse.

Lombardo's Racer Breaks Down

La Ha La, New Gold Cup Boat, Easy Winner at Cambridge

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—Harry Lynn of St. Louis, Mo., unveiled a new Gold Cup speedboat contender today, but absence of competition prevented a real test of its worth in winning a preliminary trial.

Lynn's La Ha La drew opposition from only two boats, Guy Lombardo's Tempo VI and H. A. Weidenroth's Pearl for the Cambridge Yacht Club's first Gold Cup series.

The orchestra leader's boat broke down in the first heat, blowing an exhaust pipe, and had to be retired for the day. The Pearl, outclassed in size and power, previously had pulled into the pits after being 2½ miles behind on the first 5-mile lap.

The La Ha La finished out the 30 miles at an average of slightly less than 60 miles an hour.

Before Tempo VI was disabled, the several thousand spectators on about 50 boats and along the shore had the promise of a humdinger of a race. Lombardo got his boat off in front at the start of the 30-mile run, but La Ha La with Norman Lauterback at the wheel passed him on the backstretch of the initial lap.

At the end of the first go-round, La Ha La had a lead of 300 yards. Lombardo made a bid as they ended the second lap and almost caught the sleek mahogany La Ha La before misfortune struck his engine on the backstretch.

Both the La Ha La and Tempo VI are powered by airplane engines and their screaming whine drowned out the smaller Pearl only about one eighth as big as the other two boats.

The Choptank River was rough, forcing delay in start of the Gold Cup series and discouraging a couple of other expected starters. The Pearl, driven by Henry Seick of Long Island, N. Y., stuck it out in the second of the three heats. The La Ha La toyed with the 225-cubic-inch hydroplane at reduced speed until the last lap, when Lauterback pressed down on the accelerator and whizzed in first with ease.

That proved enough for The Pearl. Its operators didn't bring it out for the third heat. And the La Ha La, built at a reported cost of $65,000, went through the formality of covering the 30 miles to take the big Gold Cup.

The La Ha La was finished just in time for the Cambridge race at a Ventnor, N. J., yard prior to the 90 miles raced here. The engine had been run for only an hour.

The Tempo VI will get one more chance at Red Bank, N. J., next week to test the La Ha La before the classic Gold Cup races in Detroit, August 28.

The program here tomorrow includes two heats for eight classes of speedboats, one for cruisers and mile speed trials.

New Plant in '49:

Meet Opens Wednesday At Marlboro

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Work on Marlboro's new racing plant won't begin until after the 10-day meeting scheduled to open on Wednesday. According to the Maryland Racing Commission, this "positively" will be the last session under the present conditions, something that was said about this time last year.

However, plans have been drawn up, steel ordered and it looks as if the track will have a newer look before the 1949 season rolls around.

With a 2 p. m. post time, the horses are booked to go 'round and 'round and fans are expected, as usual, to swarm all over the half-mile track in their efforts to better the breed and up the bankroll.

Some new faces among the steeds can be expected, however, for the most part competition will involve the platers who kept the buck rolling at Hagerstown and Cumberland.

The only game in town, Marlboro can be counted on to have much action in the battle of the mutuels, where it has been unusually successful in recent years.

General Manager L. Ed. O'Hara has done up the old plant as well as possible. It will still have a 1914 motif but it will be home to followers of half-mile racing who can remember nothing more at the tobacco country oval.

Officials have been named with Joseph Flanagan, well-known breeder, in the role of chief steward. He will be sided by Herman Conkling and J. Gilbert Haus.

Placing Judges are J. Walton Bolgiano, Jack O'Keefe and Edward F. Farrell, jr., with August E. Abadie, George Cook and Roy C. Gordon the patrol judges.

John P. Turner, jr., is the capable racing secretary as he was at the recent Monmouth Park (N. J.) meeting. Henry Erickson, former jockey of note, is clerk of scales, with William Schamerhorn doing the starting.

Foul Claims Survived by Chilean Ace

Boston, Aug. 14 (AP). — Chilean-bred Beauchef, described as "another South American flop" after disappointing early performances in the United States, today scored its third consecutive major stake victory, coming from behind to win the $50,000 added Massachusetts Handicap before a 32,685 crowd at Suffolk Downs.

The 5-year-old campaigner, winner in recent handicaps at Monmouth Park and Saratoga, set a new track record of 2:02 3-5 for the mile-and-a-quarter race in defeating Arnold Hanger's Harmonica, the lone filly in the 12-horse field, by a length and a quarter.

The old record was 2:04 4-5, set in 1937.

James V. Tigani's Double Day, champion 2-year-old of 1946, finished third, three quarters of a length behind Harmonica. Joe Tucci'e Incline was fourth and Earl Sande's Stage Kid was fifth.

Ridden by Donoso

Beauchef, carrying 115 pounds and again piloted by Chilean Ruperto Donoso, was held far back in the field at the start and began to move at the 6-furlong post.

Responding to pressure Beauchef moved up to seventh place at the three-quarter mark and was fourth at the head of the stretch.

Then Donoso took his mount to the outside, caught the badly tiring Natchez, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Jefford, then Stage Kid and finally pulled away from Harmonica with only a sixteenth mile to go.

Jockeys Jimmy Stout, aboard Double Jay, and Lee Haskell, piloting Incline, lodged foul claims against Beauchef, but the judges disallowed their protests. Both riders claimed they were fouled when Donoso took Beauchef to the outside in his stretch drive.

Earns $47,250

Beauchef earned $47,250 for his Andes Stable owners to boost his American earnings to $65,525, and paid $6, $5 and $3.80.

Harmonica, who was up front all the way, earned $10,000 for placing second and paid $7.60 and $5.60.

Double Jay was awarded $5000 for third and returned $5.20.

The fourth horse, Incline, was awarded $2500, while Stage Kid received $1250.

The mutuel handled today was $1,399,618, which made the total for the 30-day meeting $25,440,382, a daily average of $848,012.

Hagerstown Choices Win Split Feature

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 14.—Shangrila Stable's Guinea Club and P. A. Rothfuss' Royal Foot shared the spotlight here this afternoon on the closing day program as each accounted for a division of the featured Harold F. Bester Memorial Purse, honoring the memory of the late general manager of the Hagertown Fair Association.

The largest crowd in the 19-year history of the half-mile plant, an enthusiastic 12,000 sport-minded fans, turned out for the concluding card of this very successful 10-day meeting.

Guinea Club, a $4.40 favorite, and Royal Foot, installed a $4.80 choice of the majority, were ridden, respectively, by W. Billington and Fred Kratz. The former accomplished what amounted to practically a front-running triumph of his stint, listed sixth and contested over 1⅛ miles, as was the tilt Royal Foot engaged in.

Guinea Club raced to a 7-length score while completing the trip in 1:57 3/5 over a fast track. Runner-up honors went to Rosedan, eight lengths before Relief Flag.

Kratz put up another of his well-executed performances on Royal Foot. The Rothfuss 4-year-old gradually overhauled Junior Girl, and once that was done had to withstand repeated challenges from Horn Tooter. At the end there was a length and three parts between the two. Minor laurels were taken by New Start, and time for the run was 1:58 4/5.

The daily double combination of Prop Girl and Investigate, respectively, successful in the first and second races, was worth $28.80.:

READY FOR MARLBORO OPENING—Miss Prime, a fleet filly, is pictured with her trainer, Mrs. George Saportas, jr. This combination is expected to be prominent at the 10-day meeting of the Prince Georges County track starting Wednesday. Miss Prime has won eight races this year, six at Charles Town, and is the current "Queen of the Minor Tracks." Mrs. Saportas led the trainers at Charles Town and has seven horses in her charge in addition to her "Queen," a 4-year-old owned by J. N. Barnes.

Fox Completes Training Here

Light Heavyweight Billy Fox comes to town Thursday to complete his training for a 10-round engagement with Johnny Colan at Griffith Stadium August 23.

In the 10-round semiwindup, Sonny Boy West and Herbie Jones, popular local lightweight rivals, renew their ring feud. In Baltimore last winter, West won a decision in a fiercely fought bout. It took a last-round knockdown by West to earn the nod.

Fox, Philadelphia knockout artist, who wound up being knocked out twice by Gus Lesnevich after compiling a long string, must be considered a dangerous puncher. It's doubtful, though, if he's as good as that record knockout of 41 would lead you to believe.

In his last start, Fox kayoed Bob Jacobs, but had an upsetting experience previously. Lightly regarded Willie (Red) Applegate scored a decision over the favored Fox.

Colan, under the direction of Sammy Goldman, who formerly managed Tony Canzoneri, has a neat little knockout record of his own. He cooled at least nine of his opponents.

Indications are that the August 23 feature won't go the limit.

13-1 Shot Wins At Wash. Park

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—Model Cadet, 13-to-1 shot, galloped to a surprise victory in the $75,650 Washington Park Futurity before a crowd of 27,490 today.

Ocean Drive was second and Admiral Lea, Model Cadet's running mate, was third:. The 3-to-2 favorite, Mr. Busher, seeking his fourth consecutive victory, finished eleventh and last.

The winner, owned by Mrs. Ada L. Rice, wife of a Chicago grain broker, returned $29.80, $9.80 and $10.40. Ocean Drive paid $3.30 and $3, with Admiral Lea returning $10.40 to show.

Model Cadet, hitting the wire three lengths of Ocean Drive, sprinted the 6 furlongs in 1:12 1-5 over a slow track.

Conerly Outsparkles Lujack

23,450 See All-Stars in Exhibition

Evanston, Ill., Aug. 14 (AP).—The green clad "T" Formation today nipped the red-bedecked Single Wing, 33-28, but the College All-Star dress rehearsal for the Chicago Cardinals next Friday was more of a showdown between Notre Dame's Johnny Lujack and Mississippi's Chuck Conerly.

Lujack's passing produced two "T" Formation touchdowns, but Conerly staged a triple threat demonstration which won most of the plaudits of a crowd of 23,450 at Dyche Stadium.

The game, pitting football's two foremost offensive systems, was watched neutrally by All-Star Coach Frank Leahy, who plans to use the double-barrelled attack against the Cardinals before an estimated 100,000 at Soldier Field Friday night.

Leahy's aides ran today's regulation game which was a rip-snortin' contest with no holds barred. The lead changed hands seven times before Ollie Cline of Ohio State plunged 4 yards for the "T" Formation's deciding touchdown with 3 minutes left.

Two opposing fullbacks, Notre Dame's Floyd Simmons of the "T" Formation team and Pennsylvania's Bill Luongo of the Single Wing, led the scoring with two touchdowns apiece.

Lujack's Long Ones

But it was the Lujack vs. Conerly display which stole the show. Lujack had the scoring edge in passing with his 52-yard payoff pass to Tom Fears of UCLA and 32-yard touchdown toss to Columbia's Bill Swiacki, both in the third period.

However, Conerly completed 8 of 10 passes, compared to Lujack's 9 in 16 and was by far the game's best all-around performer with his slippery running and sharp defensive work, in addition to his passing.

Conerly scored the first Single-Wing touchdown on a 4-yard smash and was instrumental in two more, both tallied by Luongo. The fourth Single-Wing touchdown was scored by Conerly's tailback understudy, Herman Wedemeyer of St. Mary's, who squirmed over from the 4-yard line in the final period.

Simmons rambled 53 yards on the first play of the game to give the "T" a 6-0 lead. Then came Conerly's scoring plunge capping a 70-yard drive and Single Wing moved ahead, 7-6.

In the second period, Single Wing made it, 14-6, when Luongo drove across from the one after Conerly, Bump Elliot and Bob Mann of Michigan worked a 57-yard lateral forward. However, the "T" team marched 71 yards with Simmons crashing over from the three to cut the lead.

In the third, Lujack flipped his long pass to Fears, who grabbed the ball on the 20, dodged one tackler and completed the 58-yard scoring play to make it "T" 19, Single 14. The latter retaliated with Luongo's second touchdown from the one after Conerly flipped 41 yards to Mann, but the third period ended with the "T" ahead, 26-21, as Lujack connected on his 32-yard scoring shot to Swiacki.

Wedemeyer took up where Conerly left off for Single in the fourth period, sparking a 71-yard scoring march with his 4-yard touchdown jig that put Single Wing ahead 28-26, but the "T" stormed back with a 70-yard drive to score on Cline's 4-yard crack. Georgia Tech's George Mathews romped 37 yards and Lujack flipped 17 to Swiacki in the march.

The Single Wing had the edge in first downs, 19 to 13.

Michigan's Bump Elliott limped from the field with a twisted knee in the third period. Another Single Wing performer, Guard John Nolan of Penn State suffered a concussion and was carried off the field on a stretcher in the rough and ready game. Bucky O'Connor, Notre Dame guard on the "T" squad, received a broken rib.

Chisox Really Took a Beating From Indians

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—It wasn't only the Chicago White Sox who took a beating last night in their game with the Cleveland Indians.

But Comiskey Park, not big enough to hold the surging thousands who sought to see the game, was battered, and so were at least 18 would-be fans.

After 51,013 fans had crowded into the park to see the contest which the Indians won 5 to 0, additional thousands on the outside milled excitedly and a turnstile was broken. Several hundred additional spectators jammed in free.

Police squads were called to restore order, and 18 persons were treated for minor cuts and bruises.

Olympic Movies Will Be Televised

First movies of the Olympics—including the controversial 400-meter relay race—will be shown over Television Station WNBW 10 o'clock tomorrow night.

It was in the sprint relay event that officials first disqualified the quartet of Barney Ewell, Lorenzo Wright, Harrison Dillard and Mel Patton. Movies later showed that Ewel and Wright had completed their baton passing in the legal zone and the ruling was reversed.

Skaters Disqualified

Junior Skaters, who were leading the western division of the Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Association's junior league, yesterday were disqualified for using an ineligible player.

George Rue, the Skaters' shortstop, was a regular on Armstrong High's varsity and the junior league doesn't permit high school or college players to perform.

Nine Former Champs Will Play in National Amateur

By Will Grimsley

New York, Aug. 15 (AP). — Nine men who have held the United States and British crowns will seek the National Amateur Golf Championship at the Memphis Country Club August 30 through September 4.

The United States Golf Association announced today these titlists would get a free ride into the tournament while a record total of 1221 must fight it out in sectional trials for the other 201 spots in the field.

The 36-hole qualifying tests will be staged at 33 strategic locations throughout the country—all except one of them next Wednesday. Denver will hold its eliminations Tuesday. The scheduled trials at Albuquerque, N. Mex., were canceled because there were no entries.

Riegel Returns

The previous high entry in the amateur was 1118 in 1936.

Robert H. (Skee) Riegel of Upper Darby, Pa., who won the championship last year at Del Monte, Calif., and Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, attempting to forge the last link in a "little slam" of amateur conquests, head the star-studded cast.

Stranahan already has won the British and Canadian titles—the first ever to achieve that feat. To add the U. S. crown, one that has persistently avoided him, would give the Toledo strong boy a collection just short of Bobby Jones' famous four-tournament sweep in 1930.

The tournament has drawn such veteran campaigners as Charles (Chick) Evans, jr., of Chicago, who won it in 1916 and 1920; John W. Fischer, who scored in 1936, and Robert Sweeny, jr., winner of the British amateur in 1937.

Big Stars Exempt

Also exempt are Dick Chapman of Pinehurst, N. C., 1940 victor; Marvin Ward of Spokane, Wash., who won in 1939-1941; Stanley E. (Ted) Bishop of Dedham, Mass., the 1946 champion, and Willie Turnesa of White Plains, N. Y., who captured the national amateur in 1938 and the British amateur in 1947.

Three of the semifinalists in the recent national public links tournament at Atlanta will seek to qualify in the sectional tryouts.

They are Mike Ferentz of Long Beach, Calif., the publinx champion; Charles W. Barnes of Atlanta and Oliver Kay of Toledo.

Normally ineligible because of no club affiliation, they were given special invitations by the U.S.G.A. the publinx runnerup, Ben Hughes of Portland, Oreg., didn't accept.

Favorites Win Parks Tennis

Los Angeles, Aug. 14 (AP).—Two Southern California girls will fight it out tomorrow in the women's singles finals of the National Public Parks tennis tournament.

Top-seeded Mary Arnold Prentiss of San Bernardino today defeated Barbara Green, North Hollywood, 6—0, 6—0, and second-seeded Mrs. Betty Struthers, San Diego, downed Mrs. Estelle Proctor, North Hollywood, by the same score.

Mrs. Prentiss is the defending champion, having won last year at Indianapolis.

Hugh Stewart, Pasadena Junior College student, won his way into the finals of the men's singles by defeating Myron McNamara, North Hollywood radio technician, 6—2, 7—5, 6—4.

Stewart eliminated top-seeded Seymour Greenberg, Los Angeles, yesterday.

Third-seeded Willis Anderson of Los Angeles, tournament winner 10 years ago, entered the finals in men's singles by defeating second-seeded Dr. Julius Heldman, Long Beach, in a semifinals match, 5—7, 6—4, 6—2, 6—2.

Entries now total 61. The Berlin blockade might interfere with the German occupation Army team participation. An 18-man team from the China theater has sent last minute regrets.

Hanover Is Home of Trot Champs

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Lawrence B. Sheppard, general manager of the Hanover Shoe Farms, watched with justifiable pride last Wednesday as the field for the 1948 Hambletonian Stakes parade to the post.

Six of the 11 horses, including the eventual winner, Demon Hanover, were bred at his farm.

This was no accident or even a rarity, for Hanover is one of the largest and most successful light-harness horse breeding establishments in the world. There "improvement of the breed" is more than a fancy catch phrase.

No matter where harness horses are raced—in the United States, throughout France, Italy, Sweden and other European countries, in Australia and New Zealand—seldom does a field go to the post without at least one horse of Hanover blood.

"Home of Champions"

And usually its representative is right up there at the finish for the farms—2000 acres of beautiful rolling pasture land in Pennsylvania—is commonly known as "the home of champions."

The success of Hanover unquestionably is due to the able horsemanship and sound business judgment of its general manager, and a genuine desire to produce the best horses possible.

Personal profit is secondary in the operation of Hanover and its owners will go to great extents to improve the quality of their blood stock.

Hoot Mon, winner of the 1947 Hambletonian, was the latest stallion acquired. He was recently purchased for $50,000 and will join such famous sires as Dean Hanover, His Excellency, Ensign Hanover, Titat Hanover and Peter Song.

All seven were in the two minutes or better class during their racing days, and never before in the world has so fast a group of harness horses ever bunked together.

Broodmares Are Best

The broodmares—foundation of any breeding farms—are the best in the land. The choice foundation mares included Miss Bertha Dillon, the first matron to produce three two-minute trotters: Miss Pierette, Justissima, Rose Scott, Guess Work and Palestrina.

Their daughters continue to carry on and the royal blood in these former greats flows in the veins of the majority of mares now in service on the farm. But new blood—blood which has proved itself on the race track—continually is being added as Hanover strives to improve its horses.

Hanover is a busy place. During the summer months, after the new foals have arrived and before the yearlings are sold, the horse population reaches 500. The farm owns about 150 broodmares and 25 stallion and utility horses, but between 150 and 200 outside mares are sent to the farms each spring to be bred.

Few Fillies Retained

Hanover sells all its yearlings. About 80 are sent from the farm each year to the sales at Harrisburg and they represent the full crop except for a few fillies reserved for breeding purposes.

Hanove doesn't race many horses these days, but the fillies usually are tested in races before they join the broodmares. Sheppard hoped to start Dianaway in in the Hambletonian this year, but she failed to ship from Saratoga in in time to make the race.

Blackwell Weds California Girl

Covington, Ky., Aug. 14 (AP). Miss Dorothy Davenport of Glendale, Calif., became the bride of Ewell Blackwell, ace pitcher of the Cincinnati Reds, in a simple ceremony tonight at the home of mutual friends here.

3 Mine Foremen Killed in Blast Near Lonaconing

Lonaconing, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—Three mine foremen who got up early on a morning off to make a drift mine safer for their men were victims of a blast today.

The men died in the tunnel of Waynesburg Mine No. 5 of the George's Creek Coal Co. at nearby Knapp Meadow. It was the worst mine disaster in Western Maryland in more than 15 years.

The bodies of Bernard Smith of Allegany and Robert Dodds and George Loar of Lonaconing were found about 300 yards from the dust clogged opening.

State Mine Inspector Frank T. Powers of Frostburg said they had entered the mine to "rock dust." This is a safety measure, to cover dangerous coal dust.

Another miner, Nelson Thrasher of Lonaconing, was in a fan house at the edge of the opening. He was hurled through the air by the blast, but not badly hurt.

Powers said he had not determined the cause of the blast.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Pessimism Seems on Rise Again

Perhaps it's because of Russia; perhaps because the stock market has had another sinking spell. Perhaps it's because of bumper wheat, corn, and cotton crops, or because of a rise in manufacturers' inventories, or because of the decline in United States exports to the lowest level in nearly two years. Perhaps it's because of all those influences. Anyway, pessimism is on the rise.

Livingston

More and more businessmen are saying to themselves and one another, "It can't last. Things are too good." For about 20 months now—since December, 1946—industrial output has remained on a high postwar plateau.

The accompanying stability in retail sales and employment is unbelievable and seems unprecedented. Businessmen who lived through it can't forget the aftermath of the First World War. For 15 months—from July 1919 through September 1920—production stabilized within a range of 10 per cent. Then zowie! The postwar commodity price collapse! Production dropped 26 per cent in six months, bankrupting businessmen and farmers both large and small.

Unpleasant Memories

The years 1936-1937 are also a sober reminder. For nine months production was stable—in a range of 4 per cent. Then in September 1937, the stock market crashed. And in nine months, production declined more than a third—the most breath-taking contraction in United States industrial history. In five months, steel operations, as an instance, went from 85 per cent of capacity to less than 20 per cent.

Today's doubts are understandable. Characteristically, United States business moves in fits and starts. Production rolls, catches up with orders, then hesitates. Yet that's no invariable sequence. Consider 1925-27. For 30 months, from November 1925 through April 1928, industrial production moved steadily, monotonously, in an 8 per cent range. Then production, instead of dropping, moved up to new all-time peaks into 1928 and 1929.

An Old, Old Argument

The pessimists of the moment offer familiar arguments. VJ-Day is now three years old. Recoonversion is a finished story. Factories have been making refrigerators, washing machines, men's suits, women's dresses, sheets, furniture, in increasing quantities. Inventories are at an all-time high. Many pent-up wants carried over from the war have been filled. Consumers are going increasingly into debt to buy. Today sales of department stores on credit are back to where they were in 1941—about 50 per cent (see chart). And slumps have taken place in luxuries and semiluxuries—furs, radios, amusements (such as night clubs, Broadway theater, movies), jewelry, air travel, magazines, comic books, books in general.

Not only that, costs are catching up with some companies. True, profits during the first six months of this year exceeded last year by 28 per cent. But 40 per cent of the companies (in the compilation of the National City Bank of New York) reported decreases. By itself, that would explain the wariness of businessmen. When two out of five find their own profits are squeezed, well, they sow the seeds of their own discontent—at lunch, in clubs, and over cocktails.

Augury of 1920-21?

Then there's the crop news. Is it bearish or bullish? According to Paul S. Willis, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, "the end of higher food prices is in sight." So the wage earner's dollar will stretch farther. That may well avert a fourth round of wage increases and end the wage-price-wage spiral. But it furrows the brow of one economist I know. And his brow doesn't furrow easily.

He asks: If wheat, corn, and cotton prices drop, if food prices come down, won't all prices come down? And won't that produce a slump like as in 1920-21."

He has something there—if only an analogy. The break in farm prices in 1920 ushered in the economic crackup after the last war. And his theory is that history could readily repeat. Already wheat is down 90 cents, corn 70 cents, and cotton 7 cents from their year's highs.

But there's this difference between then and now. Last time, farm prices and industrial prices moved up more or less together. And they came down more or less together with farm prices in the lead. This time, farm prices have gone up much faster and farther than industrial prices. So a sympathetic drop all along the line is not inevitable. Moreover, today farm income is so high that a readjustment in prices would not undermine the financial stability of the agricultural areas. And, most emphatically, it would be a timely restoration of purchasing power—of real income—to the urban worker.

The issue—the trend of business—turns not on prices, but on the continuous demand for durable goods. Will manufacturers who want machinery, will railroads who need equipment, continue buying in the face, say, of a price drop? And will ultimate consumers persist in purchasing television sets and automobiles and new homes? What happens later this fall in passenger cars, when the summer rush to get them is over, will afford a clew.

Meanwhile, the prospect that negotiations with Russia will be protracted and difficult—that we will continue to rearm—is a definite cushion against any nearby contraction in business comparable to 1920-21.

Oil Executive Sees Possible Gas Rationing

Houston, Tex., Aug. 14 (AP).—Gasoline rationing will be an accepted fact throughout the United States by 1951 if Middle East oil field transportation problems are not solved, a veteran oilman has warned housewives and motorists.

B. E. Hull, vice president of the Texas Co., said that without proper solutions to the problem rationing can be expected by 1950 "and certainly by 1951."

Hull is alarmed over trends which he says show the nation this year has become an importer instead of an exporter of oil.

"For 22 years, the United States was the net oil exporting country," he said. "Now it is the net oil importing country and it looks like the condition will continue for years."

What puzzles Hull, who also is president of the Trans-Arabia Pipe Line Co., is why the United States and South America must send oil to Europe when the world's greatest oil reserves are in the Middle East.

10 Billion Reserves

The Middle East Burghan oil field has proved reserves, amounting to 10 billion barrels, he said, and five other fields there probably boost the area's reserves to a total that equals all remaining proved sources throughout the world.

"There is no oil famine in the world today," Hull commented. "It is a matter of how to get the oil to market."

The problem will become more acute, he added, as European nations increase their postwar recovery program and make increasing demands for petroleum and petroleum products.

Hull's solution would afford no United States and South American exports to Europe, except for highly specialized products.

He would depend on the Middle East and its gigantic reserves to supply Europe, and divert South America's current exports to Europe to the United States to aid in meeting the growing demand here.

Hull is certain oil tankers alone cannot adequately move Middle East oil to market but that pipe lines can.

Four companies, including Hull's Trans-Arabian Co., are constructing Middle East pipe lines or have them planned.

"Give these companies the pipe they require and the United States, the world for that matter, need not fear an oil famine in our time or in our children's time," he said.

THE WEEK IN REVIEW—The weekly stock chart shows an almost steady decline in the Associated Press average of 60 stocks from 69.0 to 67.2. Titanium Ore Discovery Rouses Hope in Quebec

Quebec, Aug. 14 (AP).—A great industrial future was forecast for Quebec today following the announced discovery in eastern Quebec of what may prove to be the world's largest deposit of titanium ore.

Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec at a news conference announced the titanium discovery near Lake Allard, 400 miles northwest of Quebec City and disclosed plans for a $25,000,000 project to develop it.

A government mine authority in Ottawa last night confirmed the discovery and said it would have a tremendous influence on Canada's mineral future. The authority ranked the finding of the ore, which is refined into a metal for high-grade alloys and pigments for paints, in the same class "as the discovery of gold."

The deposits, Duplessis said, were controlled by Kennco Exploration Limited, a subsidiary of the American-owned Kennecott Copper Corp. Operating under a license from the Quebec government, the company will build a 27-mile railway from the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence into the mineral area.

When work would start on the development was not announced, but in Ottawa a government authority said "the company expects to break ground next spring."

Romania Dissolves Private Banking, Credit Facilities

Bucharest, Romania, Aug. 14 (AP). All banking and credit facilities in Romania were taken over by the government today under a decree issued by the presidium of the National Assembly.

The decree announced dissolution of all private and state credit and banking institutions except the National Bank of Romania, the national Society for Industrial Credit, the (state) Saving Bank and "all banking and credit institutions created by special convention between the Romanian state and any foreign state and whose capital belonged to both states."

These remaining institutions will be governed by the Ministry of Finance and the National Bank of Romania, the decree said. No new credit or banking institutions will be permitted to organize.

Not more than 50 big banks are affected by the decree. Many big banks have been dissolved previously. A couple of thousand small banks also will be dissolved unless they change into economic cooperatives within 30 days.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—Grains overcame early nervousness and bounded back to close mostly with minor gains today. While most price changes were fractional, the upturn in September corn was large, amounting to nearly 3 cents.

Early selling was based on an overnight statement by Secretary of Commerce Sawyer that wheat exports should be reduced substantially this year. However, the selling came mostly from local traders. When it became apparent outside interest was not following the downtrend, the market rallied on short-covering.

Wheat closed 1/8 lower to 3/8 higher, September, 2.24 1/2@2.24 3/8; corn was 1/8@2 1/8 higher, September, 1.68 1/8@1.68 3/8; oats were 1/8 lower to 1/8 higher, September, 73 1/8@73 3/4; rye was 1 1/2 higher, December 1.77 1/2, and soybeans were 1 cent higher, November, 2.62.

The sharp advance in September corn carried it up 10 cents from the low earlier in the week. While the gain has been attributed to short covering, open interest figures showed an increase rather than a decrease. Open interest at the start today totaled 24,330,000 bushels against 23,219,000 bushels a week ago.

Besides the high premiums being paid for cash grain, buying in September corn was stimulated by unseasonably cool nights in the Midwest. Some traders claimed this would retard corn's growth, diminishing the possibility of much grain being available for delivery on September contracts.

Much trade interest was shown in the statement of Secretary Sawyer, which was the first made in high administrative quarters on the policy of large exports. It differed with the opinion expressed earlier in the week by Dr. Dennis A. Fitzgerald, food chief for the ECA.

Grain analysts questioned about Secretary Sawyer's views approved, in one sluing, "It's about time someone started thinking about the American housewife." They contended prices were almost wholly dependent on Government action, either through the loan or through exports.

Oats did not show any real rallying power. Cash prices dipped 1/2 to 1 cent. Buyers shied away in view of Canada's action yesterday in permitting exports of oats and barley. Rye and soybeans advanced in the late trade in sympathy with the major cereals.

Lard ended unchanged to 7 cents a hundred pounds higher, September, 20.12.

Mill Demand Revives Iron Mining in N. Y.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14 (AP).—Steelmakers' appetite for iron ore is taking them back to an almost forgotten source—the wooded Adirondack Mountains of New York State.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. and Republic Steel Corp., two of the Nation's largest independent producers, are leading the trend.

A J. & L. official declared "rapid exhaustion of iron ore in Minnesota's Mesabi Range has led Jones & Laughlin to develop the world's largest open quarry mine for magnetic iron ore at Star Lake, N. Y."

He said the Benson mines there—leased from the Government in 1941 and purchased in 1946—are now contributing more than one-eighth the total ore used by J. & L. and said expansion will enable the pits "to become an important source of ore within the next 10 years."

Output Increasing

Production last year totaled 650,000 gross tons of high grade ore. Output this year is expected to reach 800,000 tons. Reserves are reported to be large.

Republic Steel is obtaining about one-quarter of its needs from the Adirondack fields. That company also is expanding present facilities and is drilling for new discoveries.

A Republic spokesman said about 12,000 square miles in northern New York State is iron-bearing territory with ore reserves estimated about 600 million tons of highly magnetic ore.

Total production from that source this year is put at about 2,500,000 tons, an increase of 300,000 tons over 1947 output. The estimated 1948 figure is five times as much as was reported 10 years ago.

Operating as long ago as 1800, the New York State mines fell into the discard when the huge Mesabi Range near Lake Superior was opened up in 1890. Its ore, readily accessible, is held in large part by the United States Steel Corp. Reserves will last anywhere from 5 to 20 years according to varying estimates, but the end is in sight—except for vast tonnages of lower grade ore known as taconite.

"Sintering" Required

The J. and L. official said ores at the Benson mines are locked into hard rock instead of being found like rich red "dirt" as in Minnesota. The Adirondack ores must be blasted into pieces small enough to be processed by a 350-ton crusher.

Processed until it resembles sand, the ore is separated from waste material by magnets which draw off the iron. Such fine particles of ore are not practical for blast furnaces since they would be blown right out of the furnace. So the small iron particles are fused into chunks which look like coke in a process called "sintering."

The sintered ore is shipped by rail to J. and L. blast furnaces in Pittsburgh and Aliquippa, Pa., and Cleveland, where it is reduced to iron and converted into steel.

Summertime Is Playtime at Army Navy Country Club

MISS JANE HERVEY tries to float on a life preserver at the country club pool, assisted by Comdr. Jesse Gay, USN, executive officer of the presidential yacht, the Williamsburg

STARLIGHT in their eyes if not over their heads, Miss Sally Chamberlin and her fiance, Lieut. Ross Brown, dance at the Army and Navy Country Club. Wednesday evening's downpour moved the club dancers from the roof to the downstairs ballroom, and Miss Chamberlin and Lieutenant Brown followed, to enjoy the music of the Meyer Davis orchestra. Since Miss Chamberlin, daughter of Maj. Gen. Stephen J. Chamberlin and Mrs. Chamberlin, lives at Fort Myer and Lieutenant Brown is stationed there, it is a hop, skip and a jump to the club for a festive evening. Formal dances are a tradition on Wednesday and Saturday nights

THE Army Navy Country Club, located in Arlington, Va., 3 miles from the White House, is the center of the Capital's service set social life.

In addition to the two regulation swimming pools it has 11 of the "finest tennis courts in the country" which can be lighted for night sets. And no country club would be complete without a golf course—the Army Navy boasts 27 holes in its links.

Built in 1924, the social center for military personnel has expanded from time to time with the increasing membership. It now has 9,000 members.

Every Wednesday and Saturday nights the club schedule calls for a festive dinner dance with dancing on the roof garden under the stars, weather permitting.

The Army-Navy Club course, rolling over the green Virginia hills, is one of the most popular club attractions for the golf-playing members of the Capital's military and naval personnel. Here, with uniforms discarded for sports wear, you'll find gold bar to star ranks competing in off-duty hours

Mrs. Shouse's Mission

Plans Aid for German Youth

By Marie McNair

ONE needle to be shared among half a dozen families. One pair of shoes which must suffice for mother, sister and daughter. Old tin cans to serve as milk containers, garden tools turned from scrap discarded by American soldiers.

This is the picture Mrs. Jouett Shouse brought back with her from a study of conditions in Germany as representative of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Just back after three months abroad, Catherine Shouse has already made her reports and has left for quiet Cotuit on Cape Cod to spend the remainder of the summer at her house there.

But what she saw and couldn't believe unless she had seen it, convinced her that she's to have a busy winter ahead. She's already mapping out a program to get additional aid over to the German youth.

Asked by the Agriculture Department to check on the 4-H Clubs' aid program, Mrs. Shouse was to learn if seeds, tools and clothing which young America is sending to German children were being received, distributed and used to the best advantage.

She and Mr. Shouse took their car with them, landed in England and stayed only long enough to see the running of the Derby and a few of their British friends, including former Ambassador and Lady Halifax whom they found well and fit. From England the next stop was France and then into the American zone in Germany.

If the people look well dressed on the streets, Mrs. Shouse will tell you, it's because one member of the family wears all the clothes while the others stay home. There's dire need of clothing for everyone from babies to the old folk. In fact, there's a desperate need for everything from needles to books.

Much impressed by the youth centers run by the Americanization plan, Mrs. Shouse saw children learning American sports and dances, and under German instructors supervised by the military they are learning all sorts of handcrafts.

In Munich there are 40 youth centers all under Yankee soldiers and, in Mrs. Shouse's opinion, one of the most capably managed is the Henry Caserne center run by Negro Sergt. Moses H. Presley. Here the children are fed hot soup in the winter months; groups are organized for sports, music, sewing and reading. There's a parent-teacher unit and school professors are called together regularly for discussions.

The Shouses lived for three weeks in Markthreit south of Frankfort where they had opportunity to see at first hand what is being done. But everywhere it's the same story—a tremendous lack of the essentials which go to make for the simplest kind of living. The Shouses found excitement in Italy, arriving in Rome the day Communist leader Togliatti was shot. In spite of warning from the American Embassy to stay in their hotel, they braved the signs of revolt and went out on the town.

TOWN TOPICS: The only Englishman who's a member of the United States Eighth Cavalry is in town for a few days on one of his periodic visits to this country.

William Courtenay, lean and wiry member of the British press, received his honorary appointment the day of the reception given by the Inter-American Defense Board for its new chairman, Lieut. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger, who oddly enough commanded the Second Squadron of the Eighth Cavalry back in 1930.

Fahnestocks Announce Engagement

Col. and Mrs. Snowden A. Fahnestock of Newport and Washington have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mary Lee, to John Ward Leggett of New York.

Miss Fahnestock, who is the granddaughter of the late Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock of Newport and Washington, made her debut at a dance given in her honor at Ker Arvor, the Newport home of her parents, in August 1946. She was graduated from St. Timothy's School and recently completed her sophomore year at Vassar.

Mr. Leggett was graduated from Phillips Academy and Andover and from Yale in the class of 1942 where he was a member of the Fence Club, Wolf's Head and Torch Honor Society. He served in the Pacific as a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve on board the USS Elden.

An announcement of the engagement was made at a cocktail party held yesterday afternoon to welcome home Mrs. Fahnestock and Miss Clare Fahnestock, who have just returned from an eight weeks' trip to Europe.

The Service Set

Vacation Plans Made By Fort Myer Trio

By Nicha Soure

SUMMER is not over by a long shot but so far it has been just about perfect for at least three of the younger service set. With Washington fun in the past, the Fort Myer trio still has vacations plans in the future.

One of the girls is Gail Hall, daughter of Lieut. General Charles P. Hall and Mrs. Hall, who claims this vacation period has been her best summer. Not that Gail has done anything big, except for a few house parties and short trips, she has spent the greater part of her time at Fort Myer and she says, "it has been anything but dull."

After Labor Day Gail will go to West Point for a few days and after that she will begin packing for school. September 20 will find her a freshman at Sweetbriar College.

Besides dancing at the Army and Navy Country Club and other popular service set rendezvous Gail enjoys tennis and golf, and also a hand of bridge when a foursome is available around the Army post.

Petite Frances Eberle, daughter of Brig. Gen. George L. Eberle and Mrs. Eberle, is going to get a job this fall but has no idea what it is going to be. A graduate of Randolph Macon Women's College, she majored in English which reveals no clue to her future career.

In the meantime Frances is not worried. Planning "something interesting" in Washington for fall, she is busy cramming a lot of fun in her relaxation and recreation months. She, too, has been swimming, playing tennis and dancing.

Future plans include a trip to Arkansas for her college roommate's wedding the first part of September.

Of the three girls, Sally Chamberlin is the "career girl" since she works for the War Department. Some time next week Sally gets a "real vacation period" when she visits some friends of Hollins College from which she was graduated in 1947.

Sally's parents, Maj. Gen. Stephen J. Chamberlin and Mrs. Chamberlin, have announced her engagement to Lieut. Ross C. Brown. Lieutenant Brown will be leaving Tuesday for Korea.

ALTHOUGH a good many of the JANGOS are still away, the portion in Washington will meet for their monthly luncheon meeting at the Army and Navy Country Club on August 24.

After the luncheon, the JANGOS will go swimming or relax in their favorite manner.

The Jango Exchange, the club's shop of donated clothes and articles which are sold with profits going to local charities, has been closed for the month of August. The shop will reopen on September 3 but donations are now being taken by Mrs. Claude B. Mickelwait.

MAJ. GEN. C. H. H. VULLIAMY, director of signals of the British War Office, was the guest of honor at a reception given by Maj. Gen. Spencer B. Akin, chief signal officer at the Officers' Club at Fort McNair Wednesday, 6-8 p. m.

General Vulliamy has completed a five-weeks inspection of Army installations and commercial communications facilities and left yesterday for England. On his recent tour he met many officers with whom he was associated in the North African and European campaigns.

Two future brides, Miss Margaret Sarah Craig and Miss Violet Jarushia Pennington, both members of Maryland Upsilon Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, were honored at a miscellaneous shower given Thursday night at the home of Miss Jane Sears, Weems Creek, by their sorority sisters.

Miss Craig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Craig of West Annapolis, will become the bride of Donald Hopkins Chaney, son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Gardiner Chaney of Annapolis, at 5 o'clock on August 21 in St. Anne's Episcopal Church, this city.

Of much interest to her many Annapolis friends is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Marilyn Eaton, daughter of Capt. Melville Edwin Eaton, USN, and Mrs. Eaton of New Orleans, La., to Lieut. Ingram Wesley Ogden (D. C.), USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Riley Ogden of Henrietta, Okla.

Comdr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Wright have returned to their quarters at North Severn from a vacation spent in Birmingham, Ala., where they were the guests of Mrs. Wright's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Holcomb. Much of their time was spent at the Holcombs' summer cabin on a lake near Birmingham.

Summer Colonists to Vote

Election Vies With Ball On Rehoboth Calendar

By Virginia Cullen

Rehoboth Beach, Del., Aug. 14.—Today we are faced with another one of Rehoboth's stormy municipal elections. Unlike most summer resorts, the whole vacationing contingent is alerted every August because three of the town's commissioners must be chosen from the summertime element to balance the three who are year-round dwellers. This was a recent decree of the city fathers.

The candidates sprung a surprise on the populace last week when they signed up for election. Mayor Carleton B. Shaffer, who has steered the ship of affairs for one year, is opposed by Charles Mills, a popular agriculturist of this area, who was commissioner two years ago. Mrs. Adela Chiswell of Washington, decided at the last hour to run again. She is opposed by Samuel H. Caufman, a cabinet maker of Wilmington who owns summer property here. A retired newspaperman of Elkton, Md., Murray Ewing, and a resort innkeeper, Branch C. Morris, are new on the slate for commissioner posts. Other candidates are: W. L. Rickards and James Travis who have served on the board.

The town is crowded this weekend with summer property owners, particularly the Washington group who compose a large slice of the out-of-towners, who wouldn't eschew their chance to vote.

But social affairs go on apace. The tenth annual Artist Ball will be held Friday night at the Rehoboth Beach Country Club.

To Give Costume Ball

Miss Irene D. Rickards, Rehoboth, and Mrs. Gregory Aires of Washington are serving as co-chairmen of the Rehoboth Art League's social climax of the season and have announced that the theme of this year's ball will be "A Night in the U. S. A." Among the favorite costume subjects being considered are ones to go with such American dances as jitterbug of the current era, the old-time Charleston with dress from the 1920s, or the bunny-hug, the turkey-trot and the erstwhile "Boston dip," a sweeping waltz before the Castles had their heyday. Exponents of the various States of the Union may come as a Georgia peach, a North Carolina tarheel and the like.

Many Washingtonians are on the list of patrons and patronesses for the artist ball. They include Col. and Mrs. Henry A. Berliner, Mrs. W. W. Bride, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Bingham, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Chiswell, Mrs. W. J. Finley, Judge and Mrs. Edgar J. Goodrich, Dr. and Mrs. Carl Henning, Mr. and Mrs. Milton King, Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Leasure, Mrs. Donald Mallan, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver W. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. John Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. G. Prew Savoy, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Trew and Miss Lucie Mortimer.

Miss Kitsy Winslow, daughter of the Francis Winslows of Washington, is working on the posters for the ball, as well as Miss Molly Goodrich of the art league staff. Night club artists will provide entertainment at intermissions, and prizes will be offered for the most original, most beautiful and funniest costumes. The music committee has obtained the well-known Delaware band, the George Madden Orchestra, for the ball.

The largest dance so far this season was the Lifeguard Ball Tuesday night at the country club, when several hundred vacationists and resort residents paid homage to the 1948 beach patrol. Sponsors of this affair from the Capital Colony were United States Senator and Mrs. John J. Williams, Mrs. William J. Primm, jr., Mrs. J. C. Ristine, the Marquis and Marquise Raoul de St. Cyr, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Koones, the Goodriches and Col. and Mrs. Arthur G. Dezendorf.

Party for Young People

Slated for next Wednesday afternoon is the summer costume party for the young people of the Art League in the studio in Henlopen Acres. Mrs. A. G. Dezendorf will be chairman. Mrs. John J. Williams of Rehobqth will be her assistant and Mrs. Jane Donaldson of Washington will tell stories. Students of the 1948 classes are currently holding their annual exhibit of their work, which will have its first public showing Sunday at a tea in the studio, with Miss Adele Chambers of Lewes, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. George E. Chambers as hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Bresee of Orange, Va., will arrive today for a two-week vacation.

James A. Campbell 3d of Roanoke, Va., son of Commander Campbell, USN, (retired), of Rehoboth Beach, arrives today with his family to occupy a cottage on Columbia ave.

The Rehoboth summer home of Col. and Mrs. F. Granville Munson of Washington has been leased by Mr. and Mrs. William J. Price 3d of Baltimore, and the Munsons returned to Washington this week.

Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, retired chief of the United States Air Forces, has returned to Rehoboth Beach for another visit with the Berliners on Park ave.

Dr. and Mrs. Niel MacDonald of Washington are at their cottage Henlopen Half-Acre, and Col. and Mrs. G. Victor Simpson are occupying their place on Pennsylvania ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lewis of New Brunswick, N. J., are also arriving this weekend for a brief stay at The Homestead. Mr. Lewis lived at Rehoboth Beach many years while preparing his book "The Delaware Scene," a collection of his best-known paintings. He has done another on scenes at Annapolis, and is working now on a group of his pictures done while he served with the Army in the Pacific.

Players Entertained

John Carradine, popular Shakespearean actor, and his wife, Sonia Sorel, opened at the Henlopen Playhouse in Moliere's comedy, "The Imaginary Invalid," this week, playing to the largest audience to date in the new summer theater. Taking a bow with the stars at the final curtain was Hans Rothe, director of the playhouse, who had prepared an entirely new version of the French comedy. After the premiere the actor and all members of the cast were given a party by Mrs. Ella Stokes at the Starboard Inn at Dewey Beach.

Movies' Pretty Bedrooms Can Be Copied at Home

By Dorothy Draper

WHENEVER they show a really attractive bedroom set in the movies the eider-down luxury of it all looks too good to be true. But it isn't! This extravagant looking set is made up of a lot of small ideas that anybody can copy and feel like a millionaire for not too much money!

For instance, I know a pretty secretary who received an unexpectedly large bonus and decided to spend it all, as she said, "Making my Sunday mornings in bed fit for a queen."

First, she painted her second-hand four-poster bed a spanking white and bought the most comfortable mattress and spring she could buy. The top of her tester bed she hung with a big ruffle of white background chintz with pink roses and green leaves and lined the ruffle and all the hangings back of the bed with cherry red taffeta.

She found a comforter made of the same rose-patterned chintz and had it lined with the red taffeta which made her bed look like a bower of roses. With downy-pink blankets and fine white percale sheets and pillow cases scalloped and monogrammed in pink she felt that she was really making a dream come true.

ALTHOUGH her bonus was being depleted at a rapid rate, she still had enough to buy a breakfast tray with the daintiest china; a gooseneck bed lamp which she painted white and fastened to the bedpost; a sturdy nest of tables to take the place of her too-skimpy night table, which gave ample space for her radio, new magazines, and even a spot for her victrola and favorite records.

But perhaps her biggest thrill came when she made her two bedjackets. One, for summer, with huge puffed Edwardian sleeves, made from the left-over flower-sprigged chintz, and one for winter made from an old white rabbit evening jacket. When lined with scarlet velvet she said, "That does it. Now I do feel like a queen!"

Decorating Hints: Money is well spent on colorful blankets, pretty comforters, the best mattress and springs, and attractive accessories.

Laundered Curtains

When putting freshly laundered curtains away in a drawer, fold them so that the tops and bottoms are together. Then when they are hung the creases will work out. If they are folded lengthwise the creases will stay in, as there is no weight to grind them out.

How About Your Arches?

If you suddenly develop corns on your feet and are wearing shoes that heretofore have been comfortable, you had better check up to see if you are walking properly.

How to Keep Flowers Fresh

When changing the water on cut flowers, remove a bit of the stalk with a sharp knife and wipe the stems free from the slight trace of slime found on them. It will help avoid the disagreeable odor the water is wont to get if the flowers last a long time.

General Clean-Up

At the end of the day's cleaning, run the vacuum cleaner over the dry dust mop and remove extra dirt that would not shake out. Then it is all ready for the next day's job.

Why Not Try New Dressing?

TO GO WITH a bowl of crisp, green salad, why not try this unusual Roquefort dressing accented by the addition of a teaspoonful of Angostura bitters? It can be made as follows:

½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon Angostura aromatic bitters
2 tablespoons Roquefort cheese, crumbled
½ teaspoon paprika
½ cup salad oil
2 tablespoons mild vinegar
1 teaspoon onion juice

Combine dry ingredients with oil and stir until well blended. Add vinegar, onion juice, and bitters. Beat or shake until mixture thickens slightly. Add cheese. Mix thoroughly before serving.

I have purchased some lovely silk parachute cloth. Can you tell me how to get the printed figures and letters removed so I can use the silk for lingerie?
R. T. B.

It is very difficult to say positively whether the printed figures and letters can be removed since permanent ink was probably used. Try using oxalic acid (ask a druggist for a 5 per cent solution). Soak the stains in the solution for 15 minutes. (Remember that oxalic acid is poison.) Rinse three times. To the last rinse, add a few drops of household ammonia. If this treatment doesn't remove the letters, take the parachute to a reliable cleaner for professional handling.

How can I remove rust marks from a white cotton blouse?
K. L. H.

There is a rust removing soap on the market which is sold by local drug stores. The directions are carried on the tube. Another way to remove rust is to sprinkle stains with salt, moisten with lemon juice, and expose to direct sunlight.

Can you tell me where I can get latex pillows cleaned in Washington? W. J. Q.

Latex foam pillows can be safely washed at home. Put the pillows in the washing machine, without removing the covers, and wash in warm water and mild soap flakes. Hang in an airy place to dry.

What can I do to a waffle iron when the waffles start to stick? Also how can the waffle iron be cleaned after it gets dark-colored and stained? P. K. B.

Burn stains can be removed from waffle irons with slightly dampened steel wool. However, all such irons darken and there's really no point in trying to keep the inside shining unless the stains interfere with the performance of the iron.

Usually, when waffles stick, it's because the waffle iron has not been seasoned properly. To season, apply a thin film of melted, unsalted fat to the grids with a pastry brush. Close the baker and turn on the current, setting the thermostat at low on an automatic model. Heat about 8 minutes. Wipe off any excess fat with paper toweling. Unless the waffle-baker is left unused for a long period or a steel-wool scrubbing is necessary, one seasoning should be enough for the life of the baker.

Can you tell me if Multi-Purpose Food, as discussed in the current Ladies Home Journal, can be purchased locally? I know it can be ordered from the makers in Los Angeles.
M. B. L.

Multi-Purpose Food can be purchased in your community from a store at 1545 Seminary rd.

Rusty Curtain Pins

If the curtain pins have become rusted, let them lie for a few minutes in a bowl of water to which ammonia has been added. Then take them out and rub with a dry cloth to remove the loosened rust.

Double Blankets Can Be Made Single Size

Double blankets are much easier to handle, both in laundering and bedmaking if cut apart and bound separately. They are nice, too, on a warmer night when one may be removed if they prove too warm.

Ladders Make Excellent Play Equipment

By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

Ladders make excellent play equipment for the backyard.

A short one with broad steps and cleats on the bottom, so that it doesn't slip easily, will delight the younger boy and girl. It can be placed against the side of the house, or used to climb into the low branches of a tree or atop a big packing box. It will serve for all sorts of imaginative play. In fact, it is one of the most useful and inexpensive pieces of equipment for the young child.

Older youngsters will find ladders make excellent gym equipment. Two short lengths—8 to 10 feet—can be planted upright in the ground, 12 to 15 feet apart. Another round-runged section of ladder then can be fixed firmly across the top of the two upright pieces. There are no end of tricks that can be done on this apparatus. Swinging from one rung to another is a fine body-building exercise recommended by many doctors. Hanging by one's feet is possible, too.

Steel Supply Assured, Lustron Readies Vast Production Line

The Lustron home is radically new, made of porcelain-enameled steel panels, forming a two-bedroom, five-room bungalow, radiant heated from the ceiling, selling for $8000 on the purchaser's lot. Over 50,000 people have visited the local display home at New Hampshire ave. and Rock Creek pky. nw. The nonconventional home has produced so much interest that Conrad P. Harness, Washington Post real estate editor, this week flew out to the giant plant at Columbus, Ohio, to report on production progress.

By Conrad P. Harness

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 14.

Over 250,000 people, including 1939 from the District, have written the Lustron Corporation and asked: "When can I buy a Lustron home?" The answer is: "It won't be long now."

With a steel supply for nearly 6000 homes assured, the vast production line is expected to start spewing out finished homes at the rate of 180 per day by November. Lustron hopes to erect a few homes in Washington by the latter part of September.

A trip through the mammoth factory reveals a new industry going through its birth pangs. But this housing baby hasn't time to crawl before it walks. Breaking precedents all along the line, it will begin at a running pace. The goal is over 50,000 homes per year, with new models each year.

Lustron is now "tooling up." Nothing like it has ever been attempted in the housing field. Picture three enormous plants, each three stories high, with a combined floor area of one million square feet or around 20 acres! Four months ago the buildings were empty caverns. Now, with the major portions of the special equipment in place, it is humming with activity. And everyone seems to know what they're doing.

No Patterns to Follow

THE machinery which will manufacture different parts of the all-steel, porcelain enameled Lustron house is the factor which takes Lustron out of the ranks of conventional prefabbers and puts it in the number one spot of industrialized housing.

Lustron engineers drew up designs for the special machinery needed, showed them to Midwest foundries which took up the challenge. The huge machinery is still arriving and Lustron mechanics are bolting it in place in the assembly line.

Some vital production equipment, such as huge baking ovens to dry the porcelain enameled panels, have been built at the plant. Enormous presses to stamp out the steel panels are to Lustron what a 250 pound line is to a football team. The "small" presses average around 100 tons, the larger ones weigh up to 1800 tons. All are anchored in concrete pits.

Even the mills for grinding enamel are behemoths of two and four tons each. Ovens to dry the enamel after it has been put on the steel panels are the biggest ceramic ovens in the world. Around $12,500,000 has already been spent for machinery and equipment.

The manpower to run this industrial fairyland has come from aircraft and automotive factories. Around 800 permanent employes are now working at the plant, but between 4000 and 5000 will be needed when capacity production of 180 homes per day is reached.

Already Short of Space

TWO 8-hour shifts will start 100 homes per day rolling in September, according to present plans of Lustron president, Carl G. Strandlund. Although it already dwarfs every other industrialized housing plant, Lustron is short of space. Long-range plans call for establishing regional manufacturing plants in strategic locations over the United States.

A separate "pilot model" production line will produce 20 homes this month for erection as model homes by dealers in key cities. Ten model homes have already been opened in such cities as New York, Washington, Milwaukee, Des Moines, Chicago and Detroit.

Richard Jones, vice president in charge of sales and a former regional editor for Architectural Forum, said the model homes have produced a sales pattern: every dealer sells out his first year's allotment in the first week.

Charles E. V. Prins, head of Carlton Construction Co., dealer-erectors for the Washington area, said this week that his firm had already received applications from 1250 prospective customers. The Washington allotment for the first year has been set at 300 homes.

Lustron's planning engineers, flushed with the success of their original home, are looking to the future. Drawings are already underway for 1950 models. Strandlund foresees a new model each year, similar to the auto industry.

Push Button Windows

ARCHITECTURAL drawings of the 1950 homes show several three-bedroom floor plans, one shaped like an "H." Some have attached garages and breezeways. Strandlund hopes to sell the three-bedroom homes for around $8500.

Strandlund, who made a name for himself as a production genius in World War II, predicts savings can be made in production once the "bugs" are ironed out. Savings will be passed along to the consumer in more house and equipment for the money.

He feels that the present $8000 sales figure will fit the pocketbooks of low and moderate incomes. Thus, if he finds the home can be manufactured to sell for, say, $7800, he would keep the present $8000 price tag and throw in push-button electric windows, more built-in features, etc.

The amazing story of Lustron is the story of its president. Strandlund, with a lifetime of experience in engineerng and production, gained much of his know-how with enameled steel as vice president and general manager of the Chicago Vitreous Enamel Products Co.

During the war he branched out into other fields. He convinced the Government that a production speed-up in critically needed tank armor plate was possible. Backed by the Government to the tune of $700,000, he came up with a process, which improved the steel armor and cut production time from 14 hours to 8 seconds. The Chicago Ordnance District termed it the outstanding wartime contribution in Chicago's vast war production area.

Needed a Press Agent

SWITCHING his genius to the housing field, he bundled his plans for a home built of porcelain enameled steel panels and came to Washington, prepared to argue his case before Government housing experts. For eight long months he stayed at Washington's May-

Exhibit Home to Include Built-in Television

The Washington Post

Kraft Builders, Inc., are rushing this two-story brick home to an early completion for the "Homes of '48" exhibition of new furnished homes sponsored by 10 furniture dealers, 10 builders and The Washington Post. The dwelling will add a novel innovation to the home building industry: a built-in television set in each home! It's located off University lane in nearby Prince Georges County, Md.

By Lucia Brown

IRONING boards, dishwashers, can openers—and now television!

It's the latest thing to come "built-in" in the American home, and one of the first houses to have it will be included in Washington's "Homes of '48" exhibit this fall.

The house, built by Kraft Builders, Inc., and furnished by Malcolm Scates, is located in Pinewood, Md. All wiring and accessory equipment for television will be installed during construction.

The "Homes of '48" show, which will open September 12, is jointly sponsored by The Washington Post, 10 local builders, and 10 local furniture stores. In it will be 10 beautifully furnished new homes. The public will be admitted free during the four-week period ending October 10. The houses will be located in various parts of the Washington area and a map showing their location will be provided by The Washington Post.

Besides video, the Pinewood house will be distinguished by an unusual and interesting decor planned by the staff of Malcolm Scates, Inc. The treatment of walls, draperies and carpeting will be modern, but period furniture will be used in the two-story Colonial house.

Since the rooms are small, the same wallpaper and carpeting will be used throughout the lower floor (except in the kitchen) to give an atmosphere of spaciousness. The paper will be in a gunmetal shade (a mixture of gray and brown) and the deep-piled, wall-to-wall carpets will be chartreuse.

Lower-floor draperies will have a gunmetal background and a Bird of Paradise design in green, rose, and chartreuse. Woodwork will be gunmetal and so will the mirror which will extend for 24 inches around the fireplace. A large picture window completes the room.

This restful, deep-toned background will be accented by a love-seat upholstered in chartreuse-and-rose stripes, a chair in solid rose, and two wing chairs done in a floral pattern with a chartreuse background. Objets d'art, pictures and other furnishings will also highlight the effect, and the semi-inclosed stairway will be papered in a Bird of Paradise print.

On the first floor also will be an entrance hall, powder room, kitchen and dining room. This latter will be furnished in Colonial design mahogany pieces. Upstairs, there will be three bedrooms—one with mahogany Victorian furniture and a deep red rug, another with maple furniture and green carpeting, and still another with childrens' white-enameled furniture.

The house will boast a basement recreation room and side porch with white outdoor furniture. A neat white picket fence will inclose the back yard, which includes a juvenile play yard.

The six-room house is located at 1002 Merrimac st. in a heavily wooded area not far from New Hampshire ave. and just beyond Takoma Park. Priced at $16,900, the house will have air-conditioned heating, colored-tile bathrooms, and a very modern kitchen. Another house in Pinewood also will be opened, but unfurnished, during the exhibit—an expandible rambler with radiant heat and a built-in television set. The homes are sponsored by Philip Lustine and Melvyn L. Kraft.

Too Much Waxing Is Bad for Floors

If hardwood floors are cleaned too infrequently and wax applied too freely, they soon become so gummy, dingy and shabby that complete refinishing is required. Dirt and wax works down into the cracks, and if not removed will penetrate the wood. When waxing wood floors, only a light coat of water emulsion wax should be used and the surface should be wiped with a damp cloth weekly to prevent black streaks.

Springy boards should be renailed as soon as discovered to prevent squeaks, splinters and accidents. Asphalt tile floors absorb little dirt and the only care needed is daily sweeping and occasional washing and light waxing.

Drafty Conditions Cause Bulk of Colds

A large percentage of the 400 million colds suffered by Americans each winter are caused by drafty conditions in the home. To reduce such illness, windows and doors should be weatherstripped because the tiny crack around a single unprotected window lets in as much cold air as if a brick were removed from the wall.

Another cause of drafts is cold walls and ceilings. Heat moves rapidly to surfaces colder than air of the room and sets up drafts. This can be prevented by insulation.

Eight More Homes

Eight more 2-story brick homes in the Indian Spring Village area of Silver Spring, Md., will be erected under provisions of a building permit application submitted by Indian Spring Village, Inc.

Germ-Killing Elevators

Many hospital elevators today have lamps that kill airborne germs and the cars are designed to accommodate stretchers, iron lungs, food trucks and even hospital beds.

It's Lurch; Not Speed

That sinking feeling one sometimes experiences while riding in an elevator is not due to excessive speed, but to a too rapid change of speed, usually occurring in old elevators which start with a lurch.

flower Hotel, telling everyone who would listen to his plans for a new type house.

His theme was: "There's too much waste motion in home building and the building operation of one house at a time is too costly. If we can use mass production on an assembly line basis so successfully for automobiles and airplanes, why not houses?"

He ran into a stone wall of Government skepticism until Wilson Wyatt, as Housing Expediter, looked over a pilot model Lustron home in 1946, and decided it was just the thing to jack up his sagging prefab program.

Plans for the Lustron home were viewed and reviewed by all Federal housing agencies, examined and reexamined by Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials. One of the Nation's top engineering firms, Stone & Webster, called in by RFC for advice, gave an unqualified indorsement both to engineering and business angles. After that, Strandlund was practically in.

Lustron was given a $15,500,000 RFC loan, use of the Curtiss-Wright aircraft plant on the outskirts of Columbus, and Strandlund managed to buy 200 tons of scarce steel for production of his first model homes.

After that, Lustron faced only one major obstacle: steel. No company would sell steel. With each home using 10 tons, plus another 5 tons in kitchen and bath equipment, Lustron needed steel by the thousands of tons.

No Steel, No Homes

STEEL companies, with more customers than steel, shied away from Lustron's steel appetite. However, the steel industry, through the steel products advisory committee, finally allotted industrialized housing manufacturers 59,000 tons of steel. Lustron will get nearly all of it.

Lustron has been viewed as a brash young upstart by the steel industry. Strandlund figures that if his plant operates at capacity for one month, say November, the production output (over 3000 homes) will take Lustron out of the beginners stage and make the steel industry sit up and take notice.

Then, he hopes, his steel problems will be over for good. It is possible that a steel company will buy into Lustron, assuring a supply of raw material.

Conventional home builders, aware of Lustron's housing possibilities, fought Strandlund's efforts to secure steel. Loudest of the complaints said that special influence had been brought to bear to obtain steel for Lustron.

Other objections were that too much high-grade steel would be diverted to steel houses, and that with the limited supply of steel available, it would be more practical to stretch stocks over residential buildings generally by reserving more for the products that go into every house, such as plumbing and heating equipment.

Strandlund pooh-poohs this idea, saying that the 59,000 tons alloted to the steel housing industry is a drop in the bucket compared to the amount of steel which so-called nonessential industries such as toy manufacturers and beer-can manufacturers receive.

Building Here Up 18.9 Pct. Over 1947

HOME-HUNGRY readers who wonder if the housing shortage will ever end were given one bright ray of hope the past week: Washington area home construction in the first six months of this year topped the first half of 1947 by 18.9 per cent. A total of 10,607 units were built in '48 as compared to 8917 for the same period of '47.

Statistics just released by FHA's Housing Market Analyst office make interesting reading: permits for 48,330 homes and apartment units have been issued in the metropolitan area since the war's end. It is safe to assume that the great majority of permits were used, since builders pay a fee for each permit issued.

Of this 48,330, one family homes accounted for 26,780, two-family for 861, and apartments, 18,518. Public housing amounted to 2171 units.

The metropolitan area in this case includes the District, Alexandria, Va.; all of Arlington County, Va., and Prince Georges County, Md.; and major residential portions of Fairfax County, Va., and Montgomery County, Md.

Comparisons of the first half of 1948 with the same period of 1947 show a gain of 22.8 per cent in total construction. A gain of 149.5 per cent was reported in duplex construction and 50.1 per cent in apartments.

Breaking down construction by areas, the report said 9701 new homes and apartments were authorized for the major residential portions of Montgomery County, Md. since the war's end; 11,715 in Prince Georges County, Md., 1098 in Alexandria, Va.; 5686 in Arlington County and 5729 in Fairfax County, Va.

The FHA and BLS statistics showed that construction in all Virginia segments of the greater metropolitan area suffered a slight nosedive in proposed construction, with Alexandria registering a loss of 21 per cent for the first six months of '48 compared with the same period of '47; a loss of 0.9 per cent in Arlington County and a minus 12.7 per cent in Fairfax County.

On the other hand, Montgomery County scored a 22.1 gain in the same period but the prize-winner was Prince Georges County with a whopping 113.6 per cent gain in '48 over '47.

In a further breakdown of housing figures, the report showed that the District issued 18.8 per cent of all building permits authorizing home and apartment construction since the war's end; Maryland issued 58.1 per cent and Virginia 23.1 per cent.

Gay Color, Bright Light Best for Rumpus Room

When turning the basement into a family recreation center, make full use of gay color and bright light. Bright yellow walls put sunlight into a dark basement. Ivory or white cabinets and shelves with interiors painted in salmon tints add light and contrast.

Bright draperies in bold, contrasting colors, plus brilli... chairs and comfortable f... contribute importantly to the overall effect.

Within Sight of Target

Britain Rehouses 728,777 Families

LONDON, Aug. 14 (AP).—Britain is within sight of her target of 750,000 homes, with 21,223 units to go. Officials expect to exceed this in September.

The total of complete houses, permanent and temporary, since April 1, 1945, is 463,701.

(Britain's population is roughly one third that of the United States. The United States Housing and Home Finance Agency said that during the same period in the United States, 2,153,000 new houses and apartment units were built, of which 2,137,000 were financed privately. The estimate excluded public temporary houses, trailers and remodeling jobs).

Homes provided altogether by new building, repair of uninhabitable houses, conversion and requisitioning bring the total number of families rehoused under the postwar program to 728,777.

Softwood timber is the key to the British building program. A shortage of such timber already has slowed down the planned rate of building, as the Baltic countries which supplied it are now under Russian control.

Most of the vital timber has come from hard currency areas and the government, stepping up its export drive, has said: "More exports mean more timber, more timber means more houses."

Enough material has been used in repairs to bombed and uninhabitable houses to have built 100,000 permanent houses.

During the war 200,000 houses were totally destroyed, 250,000 were made unlivable. Of four million slightly damaged, most had been repaired before the end of the war. More than 133,000 of the unlivable houses have been repaired.

The British treasury subsidies and contributions for new housing by local authorities will remain unchanged for at least another year, payable on new houses completed before June 30, 1949.

The private builder must go to a building society or some other source for loans for housing. He has no access to government subsidies.

Tenants may not buy houses from local authorities. The government contends the greatest need now is rental housing because the average person is not in a position economically to buy a home.

The few who are able to buy property are given the opportunity to do so from private builders.

Local authorities have an allocation in the number of houses that can be built in their areas. For every four houses the local authority builds, one may be allocated to a private builder, but this is regulated according to need, the government explains, to prevent private builders from speculating and to assure that houses go to the families who most need them.

Translucent Glass Walls On the Way

FIVE hundred thousand modern houses in 10 years will be made possible through new building materials and techniques, predicts the August issue of Science Illustrated magazine.

The modern house will have large area windows or window walls of heat-absorbing or insulating glass. The big window cuts down glare by eliminating the sharp contrast between dark walls and bright small windows, according to the article. Privacy is assured through the use of translucent glass, inside venetian blinds, fences and hedges.

Fresh air without drafts, noise, glare, or rain on the floor is another development. Through the use of louvers, ventilating fans, or both, the entire house can be ventilated. To determine volume of air to be moved per minute for proper house cooling, the magazine advises one complete air change every 3 minutes in the section of the country south of a line from Dallas, Texas, through Washington, D. C.

Of the new heating devices, the most spectacular is the heat pump which extracts heat from the ground beneath the house. Another method, solar heat, is a matter of house design. The eaves and position of the house are so planned that during the winter the sun will send its heat through the windows. During the summer the eaves effectively block off the rays of the sun which is then higher in the sky. Radiant heat and liquid heat are two other house heating methods thoroughly explained through text and drawings.

Thick Doors Help Retard Fire Spread

As no fire insurance policy fully covers the loss of heirlooms and other irreplaceable property, home fire-safety must always be of paramount consideration. Premises should be kept spotlessly clean and rubbish never allowed to accumulate. Many a home can be saved if the flames are confined at the point where fire breaks out.

Flush-type doors, instead of doors with thin panels, are recommended because a solid door will hold back fire for long periods. Serious danger spot is the hollow space in walls and ceilings, but experience shows that fire is stopped on reaching incombustible insulation in these spaces.

Army Tests Airborne Hut for Winter Use

The U. S. Army is testing a new type of troop shelter that promises bug-in-the-rug comfort even in 70-below-zero storms.

Details of the 20x48-foot prefabricated shelter, light enough to be transported in gliders with troops, were announced yesterday by the Corps of Engineers. Tests have been going on for several months in the Arctic.

Tests were to determine whether thermostatically controlled heat in the shelter would remain a snug 70 degrees inside while outside temperatures hit 70 below zero and wind reached a velocity of 125 miles an hour.

Carrying the atmospheric control further, the Army had engineers of Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co. provide automatic devices to maintain relative humidity at 35 per cent in the shelter.

Designed like a full-size erector set, the shelter can be erected by unskilled men wearing Arctic clothing and heavy gloves. Panels, made up of a sandwich aluminum skin, filled with an insulation material, are fastened together on the frame to form the floor, walls and roof. Sections are interchangeable. Floors have a linoleum cover.

Years 1946, 1947 See Record Set for One-Family Houses

MORE one-family homes have been built in 1946 and 1947 than in any previous comparable period, records show. The boom was attributed to easy home mortgage provisions of the GI bill, record incomes and savings of the people as a whole and the relative ease with which single family homes can be built as compared with other dwelling projects.

Long-term records compiled by the National Bureau of Economic Research and the Bureau of Labor Statistics show that seven out of every eight nonfarm dwelling units built from 1945 through 1947 were one-family homes. Such a proportion is seldom found in the years going back to 1920, and then only in periods when home building in the aggregate was subnormal. Numerically, more single family homes were built in 1947 than 1946 than in any other year for which records are available.

Home Building Data

The following table gives the annual number of new nonfarm single family and multifamily dwelling units (000 omitted) started since 1920 and their proportion of the total number of nonfarm dwelling units started in each year:

Year	One-Family	% of Total	Multi-Family	% of Total
1920	202	82	21	8
1921	316	70	63	14
1922	437	61	133	19
1923	313	59	183	21
1924	534	60	186	21
1925	572	61	208	22
1926	491	58	241	28
1927	454	56	237	32
1928	436	58	239	32
1929	316	62	142	28
1930	227	69	74	22
1931	187	74	45	17
1932	118	88	9	7
1933	76	82	12	13

1945	184	89	15	7
1946	590	89	48	7
1947	749	88	72	8

Note: Annual figures do not add to 100%, the difference representing two-family dwelling units started in each year.

Sources: National Bureau of Economic Research; Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In contrast, the number of multi-family dwelling units constructed since 1945 represents less than one out of every ten nonfarm dwelling units built in the postwar period. This is an abnormally low proportion.

A glance at the records of the early twenties, when the Nation also had a war-created housing shortage, indicates how the situation then was met. The figures show that construction of multi-family dwellings became active in 1921 when they represented 14 per cent of all the nonfarm dwelling units built in that year.

The proportion went up steadily thereafter, topping the 20 per cent mark in 1923 and reaching a high of 32 per cent in 1927 and 1928. In the present postwar period, the percentage of multi-family dwellings to the total number of nonfarm dwelling units constructed was only 7 per cent in 1945 and in 1946, and 8 per cent in 1947.

Thus past experience indicates that a national housing shortage of the current postwar dimensions can be fully met only by large-scale, privately financed activity in the multi-family dwelling construction field, according to the Institute of Life Insurance.

Just as now, skyrocketing construction costs were the big stumbling block in the period immediately following the first World War, rising to a level double or more prewar as they have this time. The peak was reached in 1920, after which there was a sizable decline. Building costs then stabilized, and this was a basic factor in launching the home-building boom of the twenties and in attracting the investment funds necessary for large-scale multi-family projects.

In no year in the active building period of the twenties did construction of single family homes exceed 70 per cent of the total annual number of new nonfarm dwelling units, the institute said. In the record home-building year of 1925, when 937,000 nonfarm dwelling units were started, one-family homes represented 61 per cent of the total.

Building Off Half-Million In Arlington

A half-million-dollar drop in July over June totals was revealed in the July report of building operations in Arlington County prepared by the office of the building inspector.

The July total for proposed building operations for which permits were issued by Andrew Jensen, building inspector, was $1,370,533 as compared with the June 1948 figure of $1,877,724.

The July 1948 figure was $150,374 under the same month of 1947 and $187,687 higher than the totals for July 1946.

The report showed permits were issued for construction of 68 detached homes, no semidetached or duplex houses, 2 apartment buildings with 58 units and 1 church.

A resume of building operations from July 1947 to date shows:

Permits issued for 1082 detached homes valued at $13,132,528.

Twenty-one semidetached houses valued at $337,000.

Four duplex homes valued at $74,000.

Sixty-nine apartment buildings with 1496 units worth an estimated $8,450,000.

The 12-month fiscal year operations totaled $26,067,954, which is nearly 9 million dollars over the 1946-47 figure and 16 million dollars over the 1945-46 figure.

Larkspur Tops 'Dream' Plants In Fall Sowing

START planning this minute for fall flower plantings if you expect lovely flowers to grace your "dream house" next spring.

All hardy annuals which survive frosts in the spring can be sown in the fall without danger of injury by freezing, but there are other hazards connected with winter which require that fall sowing be done with caution, the National Garden Bureau points out.

Seeds or seedling plants may drown in locations where water fails to drain off promptly; they may be washed out of the soil by heavy rains, or decay in soil that remains wet too long. Wherever several annuals commonly seed themselves, conditions are likely to be favorable for other varieties.

In a garden where no annuals self-seed, it will be prudent to prepare a special bed for fall sowing, with the surface raised several inches to insure good drainage, and surrounded by a wooden curb several inches high, to prevent rains washing over it.

Long Germination

NO. 1 CANDIDATE for fall sowing, is the annual larkspur. This is a flower that takes a long time to germinate, and demands cool weather in which to do it.

It is so hardy that when it drops seed in a favorable place, its tiny seedlings develop in the fall and live through the most severe winters unharmed. If possible, seed should be sown in the place where the flowers are wanted, since it is seldom practical to transplant this subject.

Shirley poppies, calliopsis, candy-tuft, cosmos, the fragrant nicotiana, and all colors of bachelor button are as hardy as oaks, and will grow from fall sown seed unless destroyed by one of the special winter hazards which have been mentioned.

These also are seldom transplanted. Since they grow without difficulty from spring sown seed, there is not the same need for fall sowing that exists with the annual larkspur, but plants from fall sowing give flowers earlier, and are much more vigorous than those which are started in the greenhouse or hotbed in the spring, in the attempt to get early flowers.

Hardy Annuals

WHEN bulbs are planted along in beds or borders, hardy annuals may be sown in the same place this fall, to blossom after the bulbs have flowered and their foliage has disappeared. Rows of hardy annuals suitable for cut flowers may be sown in the vegetable plot, after it has been spaded this fall.

In sections where a brief spring cuts short the flowering season of sweet peas, earlier flowers and a longer season can be obtained by fall sowing, taking precautions as suggested against decay in damp soil.

By covering the ground with a light mulch of leaves, straw or similar substance, after it has frozen, winter thaws may be prevented, which might otherwise cause injury.

Other annuals which are successfully fall sown include snapdragons, cynoglossum, hardy pinks, California poppy, nigella and petunia.

Washable Paints Give Long Luster

Walls, floors and woodwork which can be cleaned easily mark the efficient homemaker. Washable paint now comes in practically every color and if wiped off regularly with a damp cloth retains its luster for years. Water should be used sparingly, abrasives avoided.

Best procedure is to wipe a small area at a time, then go over the surface immediately with a dry rag. If the surface is too soiled to be cleaned with a damp cloth, a mild soap solution can be used, all traces of the soap being removed immediately with clear water and the surface then dried.

Impatient People

The average person is an impatient individual and will not wait more than 17 seconds before pushing an elevator call button a second time, the Otis Elevator Co. has discovered.

'Quick Freeze' Puts Chill on Florida Crops

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Aug. 14 (AP).—Florida vegetable farmers view a new kind of "freeze" as a threat to their multi-million-dollar industry.

Florida, Texas and southern California truck gardeners for years have reaped their crops—and profits—while winter snows blanketed northern fields.

But advent of the deep-freeze locker now makes it possible for vegetables harvested in midsummer to appear on the midwinter dinner table as fresh as the day they were harvested. Its potetialities have farmers in the rich Florida Everglades muckland casting around for possible solutions before a real danger materializes.

Palm Beach County Agricultural Agent M. U. Mounts says the deep freezer already has cut lima bean production.

This is the way deep freezers are hitting the winter farmer:

"Lima beans, for example, can be quick frozen out of the northern summer crop and served six months later almost garden fresh.

"The quick-frozen product also is easier for the housewife to prepare and quite a bit easier on the family budget than the fresh Florida vegetable."

Some Florida farmers see other Glades products headed for the quick-freeze locker—celery, cabbage, escarole and tomatoes.

One farmer looked over the situation in the Texas vegetable-growing belt.

"They are fortifying themselves with their own deep-freeze and caning plants in Brownsville," he reports.

The "Washington Letter" of the National Association of Home Builders said last week that the home loan provisions of the GI bill have failed to meet needs of veterans at this time. The 4 per cent interest rate and lack of an adequate secondary market were blamed. However, relief has been provided by the Housing Act of 1948, just passed by Congress which provides for a limited secondary market and a provision whereby VA can up interest rates from 4 to 4½ per cent if needed.

Locally, the number of veterans applying for GI home loans has been skidding steadily downward:

Date	No. of Loans	Amount
July, 1947	676	$6,138,652
August	665	6,128,191
September	718	6,870,500
October	628	5,492,875
November	581	5,050,459
December	482	4,272,695
January, 1948	456	3,766,283
February	433	3,069,894
March	279	2,471,845
April	271	2,507,332
May	313	2,808,918
June	328	2,518,180
July	255	2,322,429

Nationally, GI loans were down 43 per cent over June, 1947. Disturbed by the over-all mortgage picture, NAHB recently queried its chapters regarding the mortgage situation in their respective areas. High points of the answers were: construction money is still available to reliable builders, although often at a slightly higher interest rate; banks were more selective in regard to mortgages; sales were slackening in homes selling for over $10,000 with a large demand for homes under that price; high down payments were cutting down home sales.

SHORTS: The Washington Business Review reports that 32.5 per cent of all new houses sold in Washington in June had second mortgages, as against 16.8 per cent in May . . . New unsold houses on hand in Washington decreased from 1247 on June 1 to 1211 on July 1. The Review also said rent control is costing D. C. landlords at least $100,000 a day because of the devaluation of the rental dollar . . . Dollar volume of commercial construction is still rising . . . Practical Builder magazine's current issue carries an article on two-family dwellings under construction by Edward R. Carr in the Southeast . . . The Building Products Institute forwards this comment on rents, as supplied by Department of Commerce data: "In 1947 the American people spent 14.4 billion dollars for rent, including rental value of owner-occupied houses, out of a total consumption expenditure of 164.7 million dollars. The housing expenditure was thus slightly less than 9 per cent of the total. In the same year, tobacco expenditures were 3.9 billion dollars, while consumer expenditures for alcoholic beverages came close to nine billion dollars and expenditures for cosmetics totaled 1.1 billion dollars making the outlay for these three items almost the equivalent of that for housing."

FHA Commissioner Franklin Richards and his staff have lost no time in getting out instructions to FHA field offices on interpretations of the Housing Act of 1948, signed by the President on Tuesday, as it pertains to FHA operations.

Field offices have already received instructions on processing of Title I regulations, as they will effect mortgage insurance loans on low cost housing. FHA can now insure mortgages up to $4500 under this title. The previous maximum amount was $3000.

94,000 Housing Units Started in July

The Nation's home builders startedy 94,00 dwelling units last month, an increase of 12,900 units over July, 1947, and the fourth consecutive month this year in which housing starts exceeded the 80,000 mark, the BLS said yesterday.

Duplicating last year's performance, Los Angeles issued more permits during the first seven months of 1948 than any other city. New York repeated for second place. Three Texas cities, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio, were among the leading 10 in both 1947 and 1948.

BLS said Washington showed a substantial drop in the number of local permits issued in July for new home construction.

Non-Skidding Rugs Boon to Mankind

A majority of all home accidents are caused by falls on stairs and slippery floors. To help overcome this hazard, the backs of rugs can be treated with a substance that prevents their slipping. It is applied like paint and does not harm rug or floor. Lighting stairs at top and bottom is a further safety precaution, and strong handrails should be provided.

Homes Rising at 50-a-Day Clip in Puerto Rico

Above, 500 homes will be ready for occupancy this week in Puerto Rico's newest housing project at San Juan and will sell for $4000, with $400 down, $25 per month. Left, roofs have 4-inch thickness of poured concrete. Machine pours 10 square yards in half an hour. Foundations are being poured at the rate of 50 per day

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Aug. 14.—Concrete bungalows are rising here at the rate of 50 per day as Puerto Rico fights a severe housing shortage. Over 7000 homes are planned for erection on an 800-acre site in the suburbs of this city, each to sell for $4000, at $400 down and $25 per month.

The 30-million-dollar project is the first of several low-cost developments to be erected in Puerto Rico, now getting homes at a faster rate than the United States.

The builder is L. D. Long of Charleston, S. C., who invested more than a million dollars in scarce real estate, another million in building machinery and equipment, and who is adding to his construction crew of 3000 men at the rate of a thousand a week.

Construction has been speeded by special aluminum forms into which concrete is poured, then packed to thicknesses of 2 to 8 inches. Two men can lay strips of wall in less than 2 hours, put up entire walls for the 5-room houses in 2 to 5 days.

Roofs and floors are of poured concrete. The first 500 homes are ready for occupancy. The entire project, which can house 50,000 persons, is to be finished by the end of 1948.

The individual houses are detached. Each is 22 by 30 feet, set on a 40-by-80 foot lot. They are so designed that they may be expanded as the family increases either by additional bedrooms to the rear or an entire second floor.

L. D. Long of Charleston, S. C., pours damp concrete in his patented aluminum form

The five rooms consist of a combined living-dining room, two bedrooms, kitchen and bathroom.

Movie Architect Now Plans His Own

Movie Director Albert S. D'Agostino and Interior Decorator Darrell Silvera will have the Blandings Dream House in their blood for years to come. The two men created the house for the motion picture "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House," liked it fine, and now they want to build one for their own families.

"I've already found many duplicates of the Early American furniture used in the home's interior, and I intend to build an exact replica," said Silvera. D'Agostino plans to start his home this summer.

August Weather Tips

DON'T arrange meals and menus that require constant cooking on top of the stove in sweltering weather. Top-of-stove burners act like small heating plants, raising kitchen temperature uncomfortably high

DO insulate the house to help keep out heat from walls and roof. In existing house, top-floor ceiling is quickly and easily insulated as shown here, by blowing mineral wool over the ceiling between the floor joists to make home up to 15 degrees cooler

Let's Get Down To Earth

Planted in Sunny Spot, Peonies Grow Easily

THE GARDENER

By James H. Beattie

Peonies add charm and color to any home. They are easy to grow and well adapted to Washington conditions. Leading peony growers recommend autumn planting exclusive, so now is the time to plan for years of satisfaction with this gorgeous ornamental.

Hundreds of varieties of peonies are listed by growers but fine show may be provided for the home yard by selecting a half-dozen that provide a good selection of color and flowering dates. Whether doubles or singles are selected is largely a matter of taste. Most persons prefer doubles, but there are intermediate forms, the Japanese for example, providing a wide selection. Peony planting stock is supplied largely by specialists who devote their attention to breeding and production.

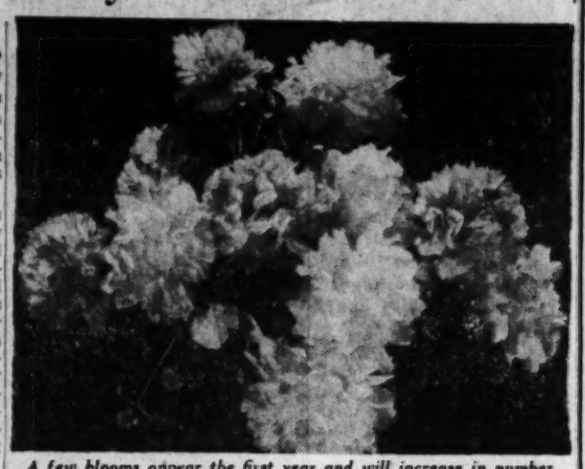
Peony specialists can recommend varieties suitable to your preferences for color and form. We are also suggesting just six doubles that will give a nice selection of color and blooming dates:

Festiva Maxima—an early white.

Golden Dawn—a mid-season white with a yellow center.

Adoolph Rosseau—an early red.

Felix Crousse—a mid-season red.



A few blooms appear the first year and will increase in number and quality each season for several years

Mons Jules Elie—an early pink.

Walter Faxon—a late deep pink.

Peonies are perennials and capable of growing in the same location for a number of years, hence particular care should be taken to locate the plants where they will have a good chance to succeed. They grow best in full sunlight but will tolerate some shade as in open spaces between trees and shrubbery where the sun will reach them for several hours daily. With too much shade and competition from shrubbery, tree roots, weeds

Product Previews

"MIRACLE MIT" will probably put a dent in the business volume of burn ointments. This new product is a set of two large mittens which act as hot pads in handling hot pots and pans in the kitchen. It offers real protection to the hands and wrists. They are made of cotton batting, in a variety of kitchen patterns in assorted colors, covered in fast colored percale. The maker, Edlen Herman Co. of Philadelphia, says they are heat and steam resistant, and washable.

A new awning fabric of fused glass fibers is coated with Vinylite resins to make it resistant to fire, mildew, weather. The new material is available in 10 stable, nonfading, new colors. Because it is nonabsorptive, this fabric will not wilt or stain. Grease, soot or dirt can be removed easily with soap and water, restoring the fabric to its original beauty even after long use and exposure. This new fabric has exceptional strength and is also applicable for many other canvas-type applications. (The Holton Corp., Hibernia Building, New Orleans 12, La.)

New kitchenware, made of flexible, nonbreakable, odorless Bakelite polyethylene, includes an ice tray from which ice cubes pop out with a mere twist of the wrist, refrigerator containers, utility bowls in various sizes, and an ice bucket that holds three pounds of ice cubes. (Republic Molding Corp., 4647 W. Lexington ave., Chicago 44, Ill.)

Automatic electric iron, whose "pancake dial" heat selector and thumb rest handle are molded of plastic, enables the user to select immediately the proper degree of heat, fits the hand and protests it from the heat. Low-angle bevel of the sole plate slips easily under buttons; a wide heel rest gives firm support when iron is standing. Available in light and medium weights. (The Hoover Co., North Canton, Ohio.)

A silverware tray, made of styrene, fits all standard drawers of kitchen cabinets and cupboards. It features convenient compartments for the orderly arrangement of knives, forks, spoons, and other utensils. (Gatex Plastics, Division of General American Transportation Corp., 135 South La Salle st., Chicago Ill.)

A new floor tile is unaffected by water, oils, greases or fruit acids and is produced in colorful patterns. (Synthetic Products, Inc., 15091 La Salle Blvd., Detroit 21, Mich.)

Faulty Heating Devices Are Big Wasters of Fuel

If a man tossed every third shovelful of coal into the ash heap, he would be considered foolish. But this is approximately what happens in the average household as a result of faulty heating equipment, inefficient firing and other heat wastes, says an article on "Fuel Consumption in the Home," to be published in Technical Bulletin No. 5 of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Surveys on home heating, the article says, show the preponderance of complaints on heating systems was due to faulty equipment, improper firing and chimney and draft troubles.

Proper insulation, decreasing the average temperature within the house, night shutdown of the heating plant, and cutting off of heat supply to unoccupied rooms, were other heat-saving tips.

"The amount of heat saved by matintaining an average temperature of 68 degrees instead of the customary 75 degrees would probably run about 10 per cent."

and grass they may refuse to bloom.

Likes the Sun

A SUNNY, unshaded corner of the lawn is an ideal place for a few peony clumps, but they will require cultivation and freedom from competition with shrubbery, grass, weeds and other plants. Especially fine results are to be expected if the peonies are planted in rows in the garden. I am thinking of a planting in a nearby location that consists of about 40 clumps set in two parallel rows each about 80 feet long. They are cultivated with a garden tractor, and aside from the space occupied this planting costs very little to maintain. You should see these plants at blooming time! Anyone who has similar yard space would feel well repaid for the effort.

Peonies prefer a fairly heavy-textured soil, a clay loam for example, but they will thrive on any fertile garden soil that is well provided with moisture. Good drainage is important as the roots will rot if subject to continued poor drainage or even to occasional standing water for extended periods.

The site for peony plants should be prepared in advance of the planting date. The kind and extent of the preparation depends on the character of the site. Because peony plants remain in the same location for a long time it pays to give the preparation of the site particular attention.

With fertile, deep, well drained sites spading to a depth of about a foot, some commercial fertilizer plus additional superphosphate and ground limestone is all that is necessary. A half pound of the ground limestone and a little less of the other materials is about right.

INFERTILE, or poorly drained sites require more attention. If the drainage is poor it is best to dig two-foot holes to a depth of about two feet and install drainage tile under the peony row, with an outlet for the discharge of the water. Broken bricks, stones, broken concrete or similar material, covered with gravel and coarse sand may be used instead of the tile, but in either case a drainage outlet is necessary.

There is little to be gained by merely digging a hole where there is an impervious bottom with no outlet for the water. The top foot of the holes should be refilled with rich top soil to which fertilizer and ground limestone have been added. If manure or compost is used the material should not come in contact with the roots when planting.

Peonies are started by divisions of older plants. Those offered by nurserymen usually consist of 3 to 5 "eyes" or buds with a portion of the roots. These divisions are usually preferable to larger clumps. Peony clumps that have been in the same location for a number of years are usually improved by lifting and dividing, or by merely taking a portion of the plant away and using these portions for the establishment of new clumps. These divisions should be relatively small.

Deep planting is to be avoided. The plants should be set so the top buds will be about 2 inches below the surface. In cases where deep holes were prepared they should be set higher to compensate for the settling which is liable to occur. Peony plants should be set about three feet apart. Mulching may be practiced for the control of weeds and only light annual applications of commercial fertilizer are required.

The Older the Better

SOME blooms will appear the first season but they will increase in number and quality each season for several years. Each stem of most peonies usually has more than one flower bud. Best quality blooms are ordinarily obtained by removing all but the center bud on each stem. This should be done as soon as the buds first appear, for if delayed, the beneficial effect on the remaining bud will be largely lost. If the flowers are to be cut they should be taken while still in bud as they open best indoors.

Sonsistent with obtaining stems long enough for indoor display it is a good plan to leave as much foliage as possible on the plant. Many prefr to leave at least part of the flowers on the plants but they should be removed just below the blooms as soon as they have withered. The old stalks and foliage should be removed and burned after they have been killed by frost.

Ants often appear on the buds, attracted by the sweet sap but they lave as the flower opens and are believed to do no harm. Few of the well known ornamentals are less subject to troubles from pests.

Giveaway Shows Face Trouble If New Rule Passes

By John Crosby

THE Federal Communications Commission has announced a set of proposed regulations which could very well end the giveaway programs entirely or at least seriously curtail them. Voicing its concern over the increasing number of "money" programs, the F.C.C. proposes to tighten up its regulations banning lotteries on the air and specifying just what constitutes a lottery.

Lotteries are forbidden in Section 316 of the Federal Communications Act, but, up to now, the FCC has never been too specific as to what is and what is not a lottery. In its proposed ruling, which will go into effect only after a full hearing, the commission has laid down drastic definitions of lotteries.

The commission said it would consider a program in violation of Section 316 in any of the following circumstances:

1. If the winners were required to furnish money or to have in their possession any product sold, manufactured or distributed by the sponsor. This would put an end to the "Send in a boxtop and 10 cents in cash" type of giveaway program. Incidentally, the product of the sponsor might even include the radio on which the listener heard the program.

2. If the winners were required to be listening to or viewing the program in question. The requirement that a listener have his set tuned to the program in question as a condition of winning a prize is usually carefully avoided in giveaway shows since the Supreme Court held this was a lottery and a violation of the law.

However, the "Stop the Music" program edges pretty close to this requirement, and local stations have actually made it a requirement. The word "viewing" was undoubtedly placed in there to take in television giveaway shows. However, it could easily be construed to mean attendance at programs, which would mean a ban on prize-giving to members of the studio audience.

3. If the winner is given any assistance toward answering prize-winning questions on the broadcast. The FCC here held that even the broadcast of the question itself on prior programs would constitute such assistance—as, of course, it is. This proviso would put the damper on all the big jackpot programs where the prizes grow bigger each week when contestants fail to answer the big question correctly. Notable in this group are Ralph Edward's "Mr. Hush," "Walking Man" and other such contests and the current sensation among giveaway shows, "Stop the Music."

4. If the winners were required to answer the telephone or write a letter, provided the substance of the letter or phone call were broadcast over the air. This would be still another restriction on Edwards' "Stop the Music" and several dozen other shows which use the telephone as a come-on.

31 Hours a Week

THERE are now about 31 hours of programs a week on national networks on which something is given away. The proposed rules wouldn't affect all of them (depending on whether or not studio audience giveaways are included), but they would lay a heavy hand on most of the best known ones. The proposed ruling will undoubtedly be fought by a segment of the industry which has waxed fat on them and even by some listeners who unaccountably like them.

But discriminating listeners and the more astute and foresighted showmen in the industry will certainly welcome the end of the giveaway. Happiest of all will be radio actors, who have long regarded the giveaway programs as a menace to their livelihood.

During the last year the giveaway craze has mushroomed into a sort of national lunacy beyond all reasonable limits. At best the giveaway shows were just another rather ridiculous fad like marathon dancing; at worst, they were a cheap appeal to the worst sort of greed, degrading both to radio and to its listeners.

Advertisers and advertising agencies—some of them, anyway—watched the growth of the craze with growing uneasiness, but no one quite knew how to cope with it. The giveaway had so intrenched itself that nothing short of the strongest group action could put an end to it—and there wasn't enough feeling to kindle such group action. This year, in their new code, the National Association of Broadcasters deplored any program designed to "buy" the listener, and then proceeded to ignore its own plea. Perhaps the FCC is the only agency strong enough to put an end to the giveaway.

THE OTHER night Jack McCarthy, an announcer at WPIX television station in New York, was describing a fight in which a couple of lightweights were ignoring each other. It didn't give Mr. McCarthy much to do but he carried on as well as could be expected until, suddenly, the fighters came to grips. After avoiding each other completely, they stumbled inadvertently (or something) and fell into each other's arms where they lay, apparently dead. Mr. McCarthy was, to put it mildly, galvanized.

It's Only a Walk

Slow London Pace Irks U. S. Actors

By Frederick Kuh

LONDON Aug. 14—Some American film actors in Britain have been undergoing difficulty in adjusting themselves to English methods. They say the wheels go round more slowly here. They complain of sensing frustration.

Among those now in London, making pictures, are Spencer Tracy, Joseph Cotten and Ingrid Bergman.

Tracy has been playing the lead in the screen version of Edward, My Son, the story of a crooked, loving father who—from deep affection—ruins his son's character. The story has been given a new ending to suit the Eric Johnston office. In the successful stage play, the son and father escape punishment, unless you consider flight to America a terrible retribution. In the film, Papa Tracy gets seven years to meditate his sins in prison.

TRACY

Here are a few of the contrasts American actors have found in Britain, as compared with Hollywood customs:

Erward, My Son has been completed under American direction (George Cukor) at the Elstree studio near London in six weeks. Average time for making a corresponding British full length feature is 26 to 30 weeks.

The six-day week in Hollywood studios is matched by the five-day week in British film production.

An American actor, reporting on location, expects to peel his coat and hop to work. Spencer Tracy arrived on a Friday and was unable to start performing in the British studio until five days later.

Under British trade union rules the entire film-making crew must be allowed ten to fifteen minutes mornings and afternoons for tea. Union rules declare such breaks shall not interfere with production. American players protest that some staff workers pause for tea right in the middle of a shot.

In Hollywood 40 minutes are permitted for lunch. Under British union agreements, film technicians are given one hour at noon.

Chief cameraman of Edward, My Son was paid $1000 a week. At MGM in Hollywood he would receive $700 for the same job.

The crew arrives on location in Britain between 8 and 8:30 mornings. In Hollywood it appears at 7:30.

Who's Happier?

SUCH descrepancies between London and Hollywood filming have caused muttered criticism from American guest performers. A few of them, though, have been wondering whether the hard working Americans are happier.

Here is what the organizing secretary of the film technicians' union had to say:

"Until about 1938, film workers would start on Mondays and sometimes continue three days without a break, day and night, except for a snatch of sleep—often right on the premises. They plodded through a seven-day week.

"If they were ready to pack up and go home at 8 in the evening, the primadonna of the picture might suddenly flare into action and, at her whim, they would have to continue working through the night.

"Old timers know how they fought, through their trade unions, to improve conditions. Now they enjoy better hours than film crews in the United States. They are jealous of their time off, too. What's so terrible about that?"

Emphasis on Studio Shows

TV Planning to Handle Fall Political Scramble

THE TELEVISION FAN who watched the Philadelphia conventions on his set at home will be able to see at least some of the fall campaign the same way.

Plans for television coverage of campaign events are being made at both Republican and Democratic headquarters, but the arrangements are still in the early stages.

It looks as if some of the speeches of Candidates Thomas E. Dewey and Harry S. Truman will be televised, along with round-table discussions of the issues by representatives of the various parties.

Mostly Studio Shows

THE EMPHASIS, it appears, will be on studio shows during the 1948 campaign. Spot coverage by the rear-platform train appearances of the candidates, or other informal events, probably won't be attempted because of mechanical difficulties. Another reason is the necessity, demonstrated at the conventions, of using make-up to prevent candidates from looking as if they hadn't shaved in days.

Money will be a factor in determining how great an emphasis will be placed on television. Radio is a proved medium and will be relied on in the main to reach large numbers of people.

Geography, too, enters into the problem. Edward T. Ingle, radio director of the Republican National Committee, pointed out that there are only 18 television stations on the Eastern coaxial cable, which runs only from New York to Richmond, Va. Eventually the cable will reach Coast-to-Coast. This may be in time for the 1952 campaign.

Ingle said that although his party's plans on the subject are still nebulous, there is "every indication television will have some place in the campaign."

Short Features

KENNETH FRY, the Democratic National Committee's radio director, said he would urge party leaders that, within budget limitations, television be used during the campaign.

He said one type of show which might be developed is the short feature, of perhaps 10 minutes' duration. Such a show might be done on reclamation—a subject vitally important to the West—with an authority on reclamation telling of the party's record and plans for the future.

Democratic politicos, according to Fry, learned at least three things from the conventions:

1. Brief, clear and to-the-point presentations are needed. An act put on for the television cameras at the Democratic Convention, which dramatized the rising cost of living, was very effective. India Edwards, a party official, released balloons to show soaring prices and exhibited cuts of meat to show how much the shopper's budget bought a few years ago and how much it buys now.

2. Some make-up is desirable for performers.

3. The public is better informed on the issues now than it used to be. Therefore, what television must do is present facts, rather than old-fashioned stump oratory.

Looking for a Television Set

Young Lady at Large In Bachelor's Forest

By Sonia Stein

"WATER, water everywhere and not a drop to drink." On the first of August the Washington Television Circulation Committee completed its most recent monthly survey and announced that there are 15,500 television sets in this area.

Until Tuesday night I had no cause to doubt the committee's word. But on that memorable day I spent more than three hours trying to locate a TV set in the Silver Spring or Olney, Md., area which I could watch for a couple of hours. I wound up invading the privacy of a certain Mr. Ramirez of the Venezuelan Embassy, in the forest fastness three miles past Olney.

While his gesture of hospitality in letting me barge into his house and watch his TV set has cemented permanently my feelings of friendship for South America, I am still curious to know where all those other television sets are.

From the time I laughingly assured the kindly people of WMAL-TV that I did not need their assistance in finding a set to watch ABC's super-spectacular television show Tuesday night, I spent three hours trying to locate one.

Any old set would do. Floor model, table model, lap model. Only requirements were that it be running, and be partway out toward the Olney Theater so that I could catch as much of the TV show as possible before tearing myself away for the theater performance at 8:45 p. m.

I called the TV dealers in Silver Spring and Montgomery Hills. They were all fresh out of sets, installing new antennas, closed for the duration or out of business. I called the restaurants. They didn't start operating their sets until late in the evening, didn't have sets or didn't answer their phones.

Nobody I knew knew anybody with a set, or knew anybody who knew anybody with a set.

Weary and worn I turned my problem over to the Olney Theater people. "No problem," they said. "We have a good friend down the road a piece who would be charmed, we're sure."

Doubtless he would have been, had he been home. Also out for the evening were his mother and his brother and his cousin and his sisters and his aunts, and anybody else who might have a key to his house.

I do not know by what method Olney's press agent ferreted out Mr. Ramirez, and I assure you I cannot retrace for you the tortuous safari we made to his home through Bachelor's Forest. But I can guarantee you that the Washington Television Circulation Committee is going to have some tall explaining to do.

Here's All About Coaxial Cables

THERE are many things about television that seem entirely impossible, and the famous coaxial cable which links the network stations together is not the least of these. So Earl Hilburn, assistant chief engineer for WMAL and WMAL-TV, held a press seminar (by request) to explain the coaxial cables which bind us so happily with New York's television centers.

A cable, according to Webster, is a bundle of insulated wires. But it seems that two copper conducting tubes, one inside the other, with insulating discs spaced here and there between them, can be a cable, too.

The word coaxial means that both tubes have a common axis around which they circle. The coaxial cable doesn't have to be this tube-within-a-tube arrangement. Some coaxial cables look considerably more orthodox. These have a central core of copper, an insulating sheath of polyethylene surrounded by a conducting sheath

Ho-Ho-Ho-Ha-Ha

Loony Laugh Boots Babbitt to Fame

CHICAGO, Aug. 14 (AP).—The clock was ticking off the last hours of the last day of last year.

Kay Kyser and his band were recording the last of 40 tunes being waxed before the Petrillo's ban went into effect. The musicians played. A girl sang. Now and then a young man leaned in and went "Ho-Ho-Ho-Ha-Ha." Then he and other members of the tired crew trudged away and forgot about it.

The title of that rush job was "Woody Woodpecker." By summer the simple strains and strange sound effects had the United States by the ears. It soon climbed to the top of juke box and radio polls. Imitators cropped up, all striving to achieve that same raucous chuckle.

Who, everybody began to ask, gave out with the loony laugh? His name wasn't even listed on the record labels.

It Haunted Him

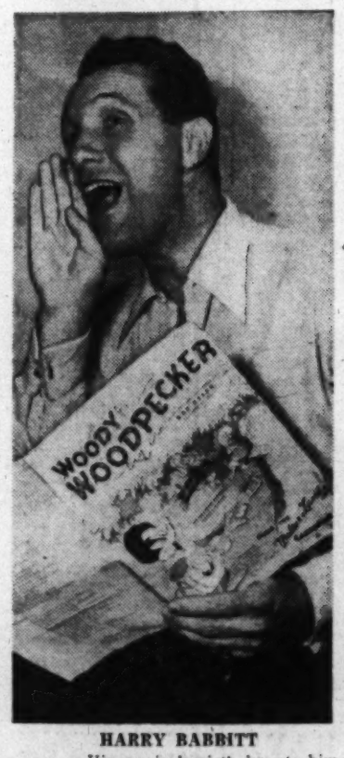
MILLIONS of people still don't know it, but the man was Harry Babbitt.

As the word got around slowly, that brief snatch of musical mirth came to haunt him.

"It got so I couldn't drive with the top of the car down in my neighborhood in west Los Angeles," he said. "The kids would spot me, run out and yell 'Ho-Ho-Ho-Ha-Ha.'

"I'm a cubmaster for a Cub Scout pack. When I'd go to meetings, the boys would greet me with 'Ho-Ho-Ho-Ha-Ha.'

"I've heard of a woman who went into a tavern and played the tune five times in a row on the juke box. Bartenders hate me. I'm in the hair of a lot of other people. I'm getting a little weary of it myself."



HARRY BABBITT

. . . His musical mirth haunts him

But a lot of folks are paying to hear Babbitt sing—and, of course—laugh in person. He started his appearances at the Chicago theater and was booked into Detroit, Miami, Baltimore, Washington and New York.

With Kyser 10 Years

THERE IS irony, as well as silver, in his spurt in popularity.

"I've been with Kyser for 10 years," he told an interviewer. "I've been particularly interested in ballads. I studied voice. And then I did this silly thing and—bang!—it want right to the top."

Fate, as it were, gave him the old Ho-Ho-Ho-Ha-Ha."

Films Kick One On Men's Trunks

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 14 (AP).—Movie studios, supposedly ready for any exigency, sometimes overlook the obvious. For instance, the style changes in men's bathing suits.

When the "Black Velvet" company was on location at Kanab, Utah, Howard Duff was called upon to swim in a mountain lake for one scene. After the camera was set up Duff unwrapped the blanket in which he had been awaiting his dip.

"Hold it," shouted Director George Sharman. "This isn't right."

Duff is wearing only a 1948 pair of brief swimming trunks. The picture's setting is Western United States—in 1878. Duff should be wearing red flannels. The nearest town is 65 miles away.

Wardrobe men got busy with red dye, a spray gun and a suit of long underwear. Duff finished the scene definitely in the pink.

Sanders Finds Things Are Tough

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 14 (AP).—George Sanders, playing Lord Darlington in "The Fan," squawked when he discovered that the Fox wardrobe department had used painted ball bearings instead of pearls for the studs in his dress shirt.

"As a lord, I think I'm entitled at least to 10-cent store pearls," he protested. "Ball bearings, indeed!"

Sanders added that he has found other evidence of retrenchment in Hollywood. He's going to portray the King of the Philistines next, in "Samson and Delilah," and Cecil B. DeMille has just informed him that he will not wear a crown.

Wanda Finds Love Thrilling

Waiting for Audie's Income to Catch Hers

Audie Murphy (left) is building up his salary while his fiance, Wanda Hendrix, is building her weight above 90 pounds. She eats around the clock, even has an icebox at the studio in which she stores Southern fried chicken

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 14 (AP).—Happy day! Love has come to little Wanda Hendrix, and she finds it as sweetly gratifying as fame. But she and her boy friend, Audie Murphy, haven't announced the wedding date. Seems Audie is trying to catch up careerwise.

Wanda has three pictures unreleased, in two of which she's starred. She is known, in four studios, as one of the most promising young actresses. Audie, most decorated American soldier of World War II, is striving to make the transition from battlefield heroism (20 medals) to peacetime success (two movie roles so far).

Audie has a book on the fire and a good picture prospect, she reported. They're waiting, too, for completion of her new film assignment in Italy.

When Audie returned recently from a tour of European combat areas he said he'd marry Wanda "as soon as I can afford it." And Wanda said, "Oh, wonderful!"

'Some Adjustments . . .'

SHE elaborated a little, thereafter, at the modest home she shares with her parents—a household that revolves around southern fried chicken, biscuits, steak for breakfast and intermediate snacks every two hours, all part of a desperate campaign to keep Wanda's weight above 90 pounds.

"I'm glad Audie said something," she observed earnestly.

"He has been a little reluctant to speak about it publicly because, you see, some adjustments have to be made. My career has progressed faster than Audie's. That's not healthy in a marriage. That's why there has been no formal announcement."

Wanda settled herself on a davenport with her 12-year-old dog, Scottie, and explained that Audie's book, "For a Young Man's Heart," is an account of his war experiences and a discussion of a serviceman's problems in rehabilitation. The movie role he

'Henry' Returns to Olney

EDWARD EVERETT HORTON

OTTILIE KRUGER

THE Olney Theater will feature Edward Everett Horton in "Springtime for Henry" this week, beginning Tuesday evening.

Olney's co-producers, Richard Skinner, Redge Allen and Evelyn Freyman said that when Horton closed the season last year to sell-out houses, many theatergoers were unable to obtain tickets.

"Springtime for Henry," written by Benn W. Levy, was given its first New York production in 1931 at the Bijou Theater. Henry Hull played the role made so famous by Horton during the past seven years.

"Springtime for Henry" concerns a notorious writer-wolf who dismisses his secretaries on an average of three a week, and carries on an affair with his best friend's wife on the side. Horton made his first appearance as Henry Dewlip at the Bucks County (Pa.) Playhouse seven years ago.

The current production has been staged by Henri Caubisens, with a setting by S. Syrjala. Featured in the supporting cast are Matthew Smith, Vivian Vance, and Ottilie Kruger, daughter of actor Otto Kruger.

The Olney management has decided to continue its double matinee policy, with matinees both Saturday and Sunday at 2:45 and evening performances Tuesday through Sunday at 8:45.

This afternoon and this evening will mark the last two performances of Mary Boland in "Meet The Wife."

M-G-M to Make 6 More Films Than in 1947

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP).—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new vice president in charge of production, Dore Schary, said today his studio expects to make this year about six more feature pictures than it turned out last season.

In addition, M-G-M feels it "can absorb" a group of five to 10 smaller-scale experimental type movies, he said.

"So far, M-G-M has adopted no specific budget restrictions," he said. "We are not specifying that any picture should cost so much or so little. However, we do plan to dig deeper into our present story and screenplay inventory to make use of material already on hand."

Schary recently signed a 14-year contract with M-G-M after Howard Hughes acquired control of RKO studios.

Asked why M-G-M contemplates an expanded program in the face of reported soaring production costs and declining export markets from other studios, Schary told newsmen:

"The industry's big problem has been overplanning of program commitments for a big foreign market. Now the foreign market shortage should be considered, and our aim is to build a bigger backlog for an enormous potential domestic market."

One Down for Fred

Fred Astaire has completed the first solo dance number for "The Barkleys of Broadway," "Wings on My Shoes," which required a week's shooting, and will begin rehearsals with Ginger Rogers in a few days.

Movie Stars Swap Furniture As Sharply as They Do Mates

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—With many movietowners preferring death to using their furniture a second year, auctions keep the antique four-posters and gilded what-nots shuffling through this village like musical chairs.

The stuff is a cinch to sell to people who thrill to the touch of a chair shined by the seat of the Crosby pants, or a bed which owes its sag to Maria Montez.

Movie stars' beat-up furniture is the only merchandise outside of autos that's worth more than when it was new.

The stars even buy each other's furniture. It's nothing for a star to go visiting and sit on his own chair, thrice removed.

Sell Anything

THE institutions charged with this expensive brand of juggling are the tony auction galleries on Wilshire blvd. They say they can sell anything that belonged to a luminary.

A 14-year-old girl tourist spied Alan Ladd's piano at the Lewis S. Hart gallery last week and simply had to have it. Mamma consented, and the piano was shipped home to New York.

The Hart gallery, having just sweated through a Bing Crosby sale, now is launching an auction of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Harrison's furniture. The Harrisons are importing new finery from England. Mr. H. having been in the public eye recently, the gallery expects the sale to be a cinch.

Hart had to call the cops to quell the crowd when it auctioned some of the late President Roosevelt's furnishings a few years back. One ship's clock, original cost about $70, sold for $400.

The American Art Galleries next door had about as frisky a time when it auctioned the late John Barrymore's belongings. Glass ash trays that the profile picked up at a drug store for 10 cents brought up to $5 on the auction block.

One bidder achieved national fame when he purchased Barrymore's frayed girdle for $7.50. Auction hounds feverishly bid up to $250 for Barrymore's worn-out suits.

At a Premium

THE auctioneer there, Arthur B. Good, explains that furniture of stars who have shed the mortal coil is at quite a premium.

"The Jean Harlow auction was our most valuable collection—$100,000 worth," he recalls.

Harry Warner of the brothers, once went his cinema city furniture sellers one better. He auctioned his household goods on a sound stage at his studio. The auction was billed as "Real Life Hollywood Premiere."

As a star's name sells furniture, even second hand, one gallery recently advertised: "M. C. Levee, manager for Joan Crawford, Greer Garson, Merle Oberon, Paul Muni, Franchot Tone and other celebrities, has commissioned us to sell his $100,000 villa . . ."

Mary Astor Writes A Book About Cats

Hollywood, Aug. 14 (AP).—Mary Astor is writing a book—about Siamese cats. The book is based on the antics of her own pets, five in all, and each possessed of individual characteristics she deems worthy of mention. Its title will be "My Friends Have Blue Eyes."

Miss Astor is playing the role of Marmee in "Little Women," with June Allyson, Elizabeth Taylor, Margaret O'Brien and Janet Leigh.

Shayne in "The Law"

Robert Shayne is the replacement in "The Law of the Barbary Coast" for William Bishop, recalled for added scenes in "The Walking Hills" . . . Alan Mowbray will repeat his gentleman's gentleman characterization in "The Lone Wolf and the Lady" . . . Chick Chandler joins the cast of "Family Honeymoon," while Jason Robards will be the principal heavy in "Smoky Mountain Melody."

That Long, Low Auto Is Among Us Again

By Aline Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—The weird automobile is with us again.

After a decade of depression when it wasn't seemly to drive a block-long vehicle, followed hard by the war when you couldn't get one, the yellow monsters with left-hand drives, built-in bars and racing motors are cluttering up the city again.

Time was when an extra would rather stay home than show up for work in just any kind of automobile, and it looks like this time has returned. Even prop boys own ordinary convertibles now, so one must have a custom-made job or a foreign car to be different.

One foreign car place has sold those low-slung jobs from overseas to Dick Powell, Clark Gable, Bob Neal, Yvonne de Carlo, Bob Stack, Jimmy Ritz and Jack Warner.

Leopard Upholstery

DONALD O'CONNOR is burning up the streets in a custom-made job with leopard skin upholstery. When Chili Williams was the polka dot girl she drove a cream-colored English car speckled with black polka dots.

An actor who wishes to be a Western star, Jim Bannon, has a snow-white convertible with 65-inch steer horns tacked on the front bumper. The gear shift is like a pearl-handled revolver, the upholstery is hand-tooled leather.

This hack also has silver horseshoes for door handles, a cowboy figure for a radiator cap and cowhide on the dashboard, trimmed with Mr. B's name in silver.

Despite this fine spectacle, radio network exec Tom Lee still is the envy of the super-hot-rod crowd. He has a stable of 30 foreign cars, including one $30,000 German racer.

Director Preston Foster outfitted his hack with a refrigerator and stove. Far camping, he says. Betty Grable drives nothing but fire-engine-red models; Darryl F. Zanuck has his painted the special green he uses for his office, home and clothes.

Fatty's Hack

IN THE OLD DAYS, the late Fatty Arbuckle owned the most fabulous model. His car, built of wood, silver and gold, cost $25,000 and had a small lunch counter in the back seat. Fatty covered his pride with canvas the size of a circus tent when it rained.

Buster Keaton built the first land yacht. Nowadays you call it a trailer. Mr. Keaton, while traveling in this contraption, wore a sea captain's uniform.

Came the depression, most of Hollywood's old cars were sold to the Pacific Auto Rentals, which services movie sets. In this vehicle valhalla reposes Dolores Del Rio's $30,000 Dusenberg and the Dolly Sisters' Rolls Royce, upholstered in apple green tufted velvet.

Rudy Valentino's car had his crest emblazoned on the side; Winfield Sheehan's boasted a built-in make-up box. The late Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller built a bar into their Dusenberg.

But some stars long have defied this vogue for awesome autos.

Years ago Groucho Marx, in top hat and tails, chugged to a premiere at Grauman's Chinese Theater in a $40 Model-T. This antique wheezed to a stop behind dignified Rolls Royces and collapsed. The arrival of other Hollywood greats was stymied until a tow truck hauled Groucho's heap of junk away.

Hollywood Is Giving Wanda 'Careful Buildup' Treatment

expects is one of the leads in "Bad Boy."

Her film in Italy will separate them four months. It is "Prince of Foxes," for which Paramount has loaned her to Fox to star opposite Tyrone Power. "I'll be in a hurry to get back, of course, so I'll fly," she said.

Wanda is 5 feet 2, has green eyes, a conscious smile and, off the screen at least, a tiny piping voice. At the moment her hair is red. Normally it's brown. Not quite 20, she projects a childish sweetness.

Seven Pictures

HER anomalous status as a star results from what studios call "a careful buildup." This means, in her case, that while she has been seen only in supporting roles so far, the publicity department has been working overtime. She has made seven pictures in three years.

The public knows her best for "Confidential Agent," which she stole; "Welcome Stranger" with Bing Crosby, and "Ride the Pink Horse," which won her critical acclaim. Her starring pictures, yet to be issued, are "Now and Forever" and "Tatlock Millions."

Wanda knows she has talent. Her mother thinks she would have been out of pictures long ago except for the aggressiveness she holds in reserve.

The gossip writers say Wanda doesn't get enough salary and her pictures aren't released fast enough. But Wanda isn't being lured into any rash statements on this score.

"I've had a nice variety of roles, and my career is still young," she declared. "As for the money, I feel that will come."

The guess most often heard is that she gets $600 a week. That would look good to many a girl, including, no doubt, the daughter of a former Jacksonville, Fla., logging foreman. Audie, too, has a modest background. He lived in an orphanage until he went into the Army.

Thinks He'll Make It

WHAT Wanda hopes for most, she indicated, is a balance between her income and Audie's. She thinks he'll make it. Audie, it appears, is aggressive too.

"He saw my picture on a magazine cover," she pointed out, "so he asked for a date and got it. It wasn't a matter of love at first sight. We didn't see each other for two months after that first date. Somehow our schedules didn't coincide. He thought I was playing games. So he began playing games—being busy.

"Finally, he walked up to the house one day looking as if he expected a showdown. We've been going together ever since."

Miss Holm Is Big About House Keys

Hollywood, Aug. 14 (AP).—Celeste Holm, moving into her new Bel-Air home with her husband, Schuyler Dunning, was handed eight keys (no less) to the front door.

"Well, I know what to do with four of them," she said. "One for Schuyler, one for the maid, one for me—and one on the hook for the burglar."

Their previous home was entered by prowlers five times in two weeks.

Pickups From Hollywood

By Gene Handsaker

HOLLYWOOD, (AP).—It'd be interesting to see Dan Duryea and Richard Widmark try to out-nasty each other in the same film. Widmark says, "It might be fun." But Duryea thinks, "It's safer to keep us apart" . . . Yvonne de Carlo's polishing her French for a possible visit to Paris this August-September . . . Director Rober Siodmak says he doesn't know the difference between a horse and a pig. But he cleared $75 on two bets on a horse named Criss Cross at Hollywood Park. That's also the name of the picture he's directing . . . Opinion: Not many vocalists can negotiate the cackling gymnasics of "The Woody Woodpecker Song" . . . Smooth: Page Cavanaugh's instrumentalizating on "Air Mail Special" . . .

I suppose few movie workers sit by the fire at day's end with zanier reflections than a dramatic coach. Republic's Eda Edson is resourceful. Rehearsing Catherine McLeon without suiable wardrobe or props, she had Catherine don a lamp shade for a picture hat. Eda's overshoes became Catherine's make-believe riding boots. A long-legged chair served as the horse Catherine was supposed to mount. The wooden steed upset, and Catherine was temporarily knocked out on the floor.

Eight-Opera Run at 'Gate' Ends Tonight

TONIGHT closes the eight-opera run of the Lyric Opera Association at the Watergate. Cavalleria and Pagliacci, who became Siamese twins in the world of opera shortly after their birth, fill out the engagement. Florence Kirk, Bette Dubro, Francesco Valentino, Helen George, Frank Palumbo and Nicola Rescigno, among others, give promise of two fine performances.

Friday and Saturday evenings this week the Columbia Light Opera Company takes over the Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds to raise funds for their newly formed opera and dramatic group. Under Ethyl Manning's direction they will present Iolanthe tonight and the Mikado tomorrow, as money-getters.

And after this week music goes into doldrums, from which it is rescued only by the service bands at the Capitol steps and the Soldiers' Home.

What Can We Do To Save the Met?

By Paul Hume

WITHIN a three-day period last week word came that the Metropolitan Opera Company would present no season in 1948-49, and an announcement from Ballet Theater, Inc., that it was suspending operations at least until January 1, 1949.

HUME

Thus America's leading opera house and its foremost ballet company reflect the troubled economic straits in which our cultural enterprises today find themselves. This problem was the subject of an address by Huntington Cairns of Washington at Harvard University's symposium of music critics last year. Cairns, speaking on "The Future of Music Patronage in America," referred to dwindling private fortunes, which for years were among the principal sources of support for opera and ballet.

He mentioned also rising tax rates and increased costs as well as constantly mounting union fees. Whatever the solution to these problems, whether it is some kind of government assistance as is almost universal in Europe, or state and municipal grants, as in Baltimore, San Francisco, and other American communities, we can be sure that there will be changes.

Radio Opera

WHAT would be the effect upon our national musical scene if the Metropolitan Opera were silent for the coming year? On Christmas Day, 1931, the first complete opera performance was broadcast from the Met. In the years following, we came to take for granted that period on Saturday afternoons when we sit comfortably in our homes and hear the entire opera series presented in New York.

We have heard great performances and mediocre, just as paying audiences in the ancient house have heard them. We have been thrilled by the new voices of Kirsten Flagstad, Eleanor Steber, Set Svanholm, Blance Thebom, as well as the familiar majesty of Rosa Ponselle, Ezio Pinza, Lauritz Melchior, Giovanni Martinelli, and the rest. Many of us heard for the first times in our lives the incomparable genius of Mozart's Don Giovanni, Magic Flute, Marriage of Figaro, the Wagner dramas, and the Verdi-Puccini school of lyric magic through the expressive medium of radio.

There have been Saturdays when it just seemed unthinkable to be away from the radio—why? Because the Met was doing Otello, or the Love of Three Kings, or those less frequent days when they would air Elektra, Rosenkavalier, Salome, Gotterdamerung or a gem such as Don Pasquale. There have also been those times when it did not seem possible to listen to another performance of Lucia, Traviata, Lakme or some similar score whose luster is at least dimmed by time, if not irreparably tarnished.

But it was a reassuring sensation to know that a twist of the fingers would bring into our lives whatever was transpiring in New York's dying house. We cursed the sameness of repertoire, the bad singing of such casts as last season's Tosca, the sloppy orchestral playing. But we usually stayed with it, because we never knew when something wonderful would take place.

For our younger listeners, it is a great deal merely to hear the notes of the traditional works which have supported our opera companies for two or more generations.

National Culture

MORE than any of these, however, is the matter of national culture. Granted the Metropolitan repertoire of the past decade has been shabby in many ways, and its singers less than the finest available. Still our country, viewing the opera company as a national rather than a local institution, can ill afford to be without so prominent a symbol of artistic achievement as the Metropolitan. Music still struggles, compared to the skyrocketings of our Jack Bennys, Henry Morgans, jackpot programs and other noises that fill the air. This is no time to reduce the weekly quota of good music by three or four hours.

New York City is not the issue at this time. The Metropolitan is not the only good opera company in that musical beehive. The City Center Opera Company shows more enterprise in repertoire than the Met, and often equals or surpasses the older institution in quality. But the City Center cannot be broadcast from Coast to Coast as the Met is, and does not tour as widely. We need the Met, imperfect though it is.

Issues of union scale, production and operation costs, and the multiple matters which must be settled in order for a season to be arranged are beyond our sphere. But those responsible for the direction of the opera house will display little imagination and initiative if they allow such considerations to stop them from carrying out a real obligation to the music lovers of this country.

A program of more than 600 free concerts sponsored by Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, out of the now discontinued royalty fund, has been launched in New York.

Abram to Play Britten Concerto

Jacques Abram, American pianist, will introduce Benjamin Britten's new piano concerto No. 1 in orchestral appearances next season. The concerto was completed in 1946 and is a revised version of a work first written by Britten in 1938.

Cole Porter Potpourri Satisfies

By Jack O'Brian

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP).—London Records has a new album of Cole Porter tunes which should satisfy just about everyone . . . "Cole Porter Suite" is the title of this four-sided collection, and the tunes include the expected "Night and Day" and "Begin the Beguine," also "I get a Kick Out Of You," "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," "In the Still of the Night," "Let's Do It," "I've Got You Under My Skin," "Don't Fence Me In."

There's also a preface by Cole Porter on the album jacket which gives a few uninteresting hints as to why the album was recorded . . . I'd say personally it was because the times are excellent for musicial comedy stuff, which is the reason I recommended the little collection heartily.

Arthur Godfrey fans might admire his latest pairing, "Turkish Delight" and "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," but I'd hesitate to recommend it to anyone else . . . RCA-Victor continues to turn out Spike Jones' recordings, the only evident conclusion being that they are popular, although not, may I add, with me . . . Spike worries two nice items, "Sentimental Over You" and "I Kiss Your Hand, Madame."

Twenty years ago I collected Lee Morse recordings the way Dinah Shore, Jo Stafford and Margaret Whiting fans pay heed to the current favorites . . . The throaty sob in Miss Morse's talented tonsils is available again on a brace of Decca dandies, "Careless Love" and "Sing Me a Song of Texas." . . . A lovely show tune, "How High the Moon," gets Stan Kenton's atonal attention with June Christy on the vocal, and the reverse, "Interlude," has Kenton's pianistics and slightly less orgiastic style; for Capitol Records . . . Dorothy Shay has waxed a pair of her newest night club routines, "Makin' Love, Mountain Style" and "Finishing School Was the Finish of Me," and for Shay enthusiasts should be amusing though a bit blue.

Gandhi Disc Is Published By Columbia

MAHATMA GANDHI: His Spiritual Message. Columbia 17523-D. $1.

Today is an especially appropriate day on which to speak of this remarkable record.

India's great martyred leader made this disc in England, and it gives a clear, easily understandable account of his personal philosophy. If more men and women today would heed Gandhi's transcendent doctrine of universal love our world would be a far better place.

This is also a timely occasion to speak of the motion picture, "Shakuntala," now on display at the Dupont Theater. It has a rich background of native Hindu music and is the first picture made in that country to be shown in America.

Liszt: Sonetto del Petrarco, No. 104. William Kapell, pianist. Victor 12-0342. $1.25.

The later works of Franz Liszt are marked by a reticence quite surprising to those unacquainted with his most poetic moments. This familiar piano page is by turns tender and lyrical, moving in improvisatory fashion, and achieving in toto the effect of a rhapsody. Kapell plays it with warmth, far-reaching rubato, beautiful tone, and more than ordinary personal liberties.

Falla: Dances from the Three-Cornered Hat. Philharmonia Orchestra under Galliera. Columbia 297. $3.50.

Few musical compositions equal these dances in epitomizing in sound the color and rhythms of Spain. The ballet is one of the great modern scores and its Massine choreography has no parallel. The music stands up beautifully without the dancing, and Galliera, a new conducting name to us, makes it glow in this recording.

The London Philharmonia tone is rich and good in balance. This is our choice of the three available recordings of this music.

BACH: Fantasia and Fugue in D Major. Guiomar Novaes. Columbia X-298. $2.90.

Novaes played this in her last Washington recital at the Shoreham. It is a favorite of hers and of her audiences. Few pianists impart the same style and grace to these keyboard works of Bach as the beautiful Brazilian artist.

The music is a miracle of romantic expressiveness, the fugue growing from a slender line to a fine climax, all in the manner of a jig. The piano is handsomely pressed on the discs.

Carnival Tropicana. Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra. Columbia 753. $6.

Much sameness in these Latin rhythms and their treatment. You know how it's done: sweeping strings, solo winds, and the works all thrown together. There are nice touches with a solo banjo and guitar at one point. If you like Kostelanetz and/or Latin music this is your dish in the customary rich recording.

FRIML: Donkey Serenade; also: Gypsy Love Song. James Melton, tenor. Victor 10-1424. $1.00.

As we said when Melton released his version of the Soliloquy from "Carousel," this is the sort of music in which he sounds best. This record is no exception, and if you like these songs, and Melton's singing, you're in a la Flynn. PAUL HUME.

Student Symphony To Launch 30th Season in Chicago

A student symphony orchestra, somewhat similar to the National Orchestral Association in New York, will begin its thirtieth season in Chicago in October.

The Chicago Civic Orchestra, which is the alma mater of many successful concert artists, is accepting students for its winter season of intensive rehearsals and two public concerts.

Tauno Hannikainen, assistant conductor of the Chicago Symphony, will direct a training program designed to give some 100 musicians the skill needed for big time orchestral work.

The training orchestra is a project of the Orchestral Association of Chicago. Fifty-three members of the Chicago Symphony are graduates.

Orchestra members, skilled in instrumental music, are selected by audition and examination. They pay a $25 tuition fee.

Hurok Books DP Troupe For U. S. Tour

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Word from Vienna is that S. Hurok, the impresario, is lining up a troupe of artists from the displaced persons camps of Europe for a tour of the United States.

Hurok was quoted in a United Press dispatch from the Austrian capital as saying during a visit there that he is out to show the world that "DPs are not bums but constitute an element of people we need all over the world."

Hurok said he had accepted "with some skepticism" an invitation of U. N. refugee officials to tour the DP camps of Italy, Germany, and Austria on a talent hunt.

After six weeks of auditioning less than one fifth of the registered artists, he said he "was amazed at what I had found."

He began plans to organize a company of between 300 and 400 DP artists to take on tour, first in the United States, and then to various capitals throughout the world.

Hurok said that, if possible, "I will take them to perform before Congress, before the United Nations Assembly and the House of Commons. By dance, music and song we will show the world that these people now lying idle in DP camps are highly desirable assets that are being allowed to waste away in despair because of vicious and mistaken prejudice built up against them."

The artists, Hurok said, would be drawn in ensembles or as individuals from among an estimated 5800 professionals and talented amateurs in the camps, representing some 40 or 50 nationalities.

He said that probably "only in the DP camps of Europe is there such a concentration of European culture.

"I have heard instruments and folklore music and song that have never been heard before outside its native setting," he observed.

Hurok said he hoped to get his tour, tentatively called the "International Folklore Ensemble of DP Camps," on the road in the United States by next January or February.

Actor Will Cycle To Cape From L. I.

Hollywood, Aug. 14 (AP).—Thomas Gomez, hefty Broadway actor, says he will bicycle from his home in Hollis, Long Island, to Cape Cod when he finishes his screen role in "The Numbers Racket."

Those around Enterprise Studio who were inclined to doubt him after surveying his girth didn't know cycling has been Gomez' hobby for years. He estimates from past performances he can make the 265-mile trip in three days.

Gomez will stop the first night in Greenport, Long Island, he said, and hopes to make New Bedford, Mass., by midnight of the second day. He will stay in Cape Cod until September 15.

Back to Paramount

Hollywood, Aug. 14.—Rhoda Fleming returns to Paramount, the studio in which she recently appeared with Bing Crosby in "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," to play the feminine lead in the Bob Hope comedy, "Easy Does It."

Art for Home Consumption

A Small Gallery Renews Its Purpose

By Jane Watson Crane

THE Barnett-Aden Gallery, a nonprofit enterprise supported through private subscriptions, is the only Negro institution of its kind in the city. Run by Alonzo Aden, who carries the major burden of operation and maintenance, it has attracted visitors both local and out-of-town. While the main emphasis is on Negro art, it is interracial in respect to membership and exhibits.

This summer the gallery is taking stock of its acquisitions with a show that includes purchases made during the past five years. Located in a relatively small house in a residential district, the items shown are consistent with one of the purposes of the organization—to promote art for home consumption. Most of the exhibits are oil paintings, but there are a few small sculptures, including a graceful little wood carving by Ramos Blanco, the Cuban.

Almost like a benediction to the work of a younger generation which surrounds it is the luminous canvas, "Flight into Egypt," by Henry O. Tanner, whose creative achievement has been a source of inspiration for many of his race. Tanner's first teacher was Thomas Eakins at the Pennsylvania Academy, who was also a friend and staunch supporter. His later triumphs in Paris are a matter of history, and his paintings of religious themes are to be seen in many United States museums. The oil in the present exhibit reveals once more the outstanding characteristic of his work, the handling of light.

The still-life by Nicolai Cikovsky, who will be remembered by many as resident and teacher here has the painter's mastery one expects from him.

No Sensationalism

THROUGHOUT, the selections avoid the sensational. While social themes are present, there is no special pleading. One does not find here the "primitive," so often exploited and so little understood.

There is an early abstraction by I. Rice Pereira, but this is the exception, with Pietro Lazzari's "Atomic Landscape," in a group which is largely representational. Some of the works are tasteful but slight, and in a few cases, such as that of Hale Woodruff, the painting is inadequate in the light of the artist's capacities.

A forthright "Self-Portrait" by Frederic Flemister, a former pupil of Woodroff's, is a curious combination of force, skill, and imitation. The pose he has given himself, no doubt consciously, is one popular in formal portraits by the Renaissance masters, and the landscape seen through the aperture seems stereotyped now. Because there is some persistence to the idea that the Negro is expected to paint "differently," a popular conception that has gained ground through the success of some of the naturally creative "self-taught," this painting is worth pondering. It illustrates aptly, perhaps almost too obviously, a point made by another Negro artist in response to accusation of imitation.

"No doubt this is true," he protested. "Not so much from the standpoint that they imitate white artists of this or any other country as much as they are trying to do what artists of all races do—follow the principles of fine arts technically. We are taught to use lines, forms, and color, never being told to look at these things from a racial viewpoint."

TOO often the little shows of graphic arts at the Smithsonian are overlooked because they are situated in a passageway. On our visit we watch throngs of summer tourists rush through, and rarely one paused. The displays merit attention, however, for invariably they are picked with care by one who knows and cares for printmaking.

On exhibit now is a group of pencil, pen and ink drawings, and prints by the Artists Guild of Washington. They will continue on view through September 6.

Scientist Says Cash Decides Taste in Music

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Aug. 14 (AP).—Dr. Karl F. Schuessler, Indiana University scientist, concludes, after a research in his home city of Evansville, Ind., that the music that pleases your ear harmonizes with the jingle of cash in your pocket.

Dr. Schuessler says he finds that classical and light classical music appeals to the higher classes in the social-economic scale while jazz and hillbilly music appeals more to the lower classes.

He reached this conclusion, he said, after testing more than 1200 persons of divergent social and economic background in Evansville.

His tests, he said, ranged from members of the bricklayers' union to the Salvation Army and included schools, business and civic bodies, religious groups, fraternal orders, youth groups and war veterans.

"The socio-economic position operates to channelize experiences in such a way that an individual tends to form a favorable attitude toward certain kinds of music and an unfavorable attitude toward others," Dr. Schuessler writes in an article prepared for the American Sociological review.

"Thus, members of the upper social classes are more likely to receive training in music which has a profound influence on musical taste. Furthermore, those in particular social-economic groups are more regularly exposed to certain kinds of music and that familiarity usually leads to approval."

Some other findings reported by the scientist are:

Young people prefer new kinds of music while old people choose the old music with which they are more familiar.

Race makes little difference when social-economic conditions are the same. Testing of white and Negro girls revealed no significant differences in musical tastes, he said.

Some Crime Films Would Be Better Unmade, Says Bogart

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 14 (AP).—Now that a new protest is rising about the number of crime movies, Humphrey Bogart—of all people—admits that some of them should be stopped.

Last winter, the Johnston office quieted a furor of protest by banning gangster movies. Today theaters are playing a new crop of films about crime and certain commentators and pressure groups are starting to complain again. After issuing a Bogartian tirade against the complainers, the actor continued: "Some crime pictures shouldn't be made."

Bogart cited the prison film, "Canon City." "It was a story of a bunch of bad eggs who broke out of the stir and finally were put back there where they belonged," he related. "I can see no reason for the picture."

When the late Mark Hellinger called Bogie to see how he liked another prison movie, "Brute Force," the actor replied: "Why did you make it? A picture should have either entertainment or a moral. This one had neither."

Don't get the idea that Bogie is going straight (as some San Quentin cons accused him of doing when he started playing detectives). He's still agin' the characters who think crime pictures should be abolished entirely.

"It's stupid to think that movies can foster crime," he declared. "When I was young, we were reading about Billy the Kid, but that didn't make criminals out of us.

"If you want to find out what turns kids to crime, look at their environment and particularly their family life. Parents who let 10-year-old kids stay out at night are responsible for making criminals."

Commenting on film censorship, Bogie pointed out that it can work in reverse.

The Johnston office made a ruling that a criminal can't use a sawed-off shotgun or a tommy-gun in pictures. And movie cops have to be big and there has to be lots of 'em. So when you show a capture, it appeals to a child's favor of the underdog. Like when I got caught in 'High Sierra'; I was up on that mountain with the whole State against me."

Bogart is currently acting in and producing "Knock on Any Door," which he assured is "not a crime picture." His advice to newcomer John Derek, who plays a young delinquent in the film, might indicate that crime sometimes does pay. His words:

"Play the role as tough as you can—see, kid? Look at what happened to Gable, Tracy, Cagney, Robinson, Raft, Ladd and myself. We all got our start in crime."

WHAT Hollywood is talking about these days . . . economy . . . the pending executive shakeup at MGM . . . Bill Holden's neat acting in "Rachel and the Stranger" . . . the phenomenal business of comedies ("Fuller Brush Man," "Abbott, Costello, Frankenstein," etc.) . . . The egg-laying of heavy dramas . . . economy . . . the possibility of two new L. A. newspapers . . . the need to exploit and publicize film product (bank night returning?) . . . the public's objection to high theater admissions . . . Lana Turner's poor public relations job in Europe . . . economy . . . and more economy.

Popular Records

DeVol Has a New Album Out

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP).—Frank DeVol, the bandleader whose brilliant background for the Nat Cole "Nature Boy" was one of the principal attractions of that flash in the juke boxes, has a new album.

It's a Capitol Record album called "Classics in Modern." DeVol has taken six bits of classical compositions which previously were truncated into popular form, and has arranged and presented them attractively.

The various items include "The Lamp is Low," which was lifted from Ravel's "Pavanne"; "The Breeze and I," which used to be part of Ernesto Lecuona's "Andalucia Suite"; "On the Isle of May," once Tschaikovsky's "Andante Cantabile," which in turn was a slice of the Russia's D-major quartet; "If You Are But a Dream," erstwhile of Rubinstein's "Romance"; "Our Love" from Tschakovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" overture; and "Moon Love," also from the last-named fellow's fifth symphony, second movement. Very pleasant listening.

MUSICRAFT Records has the masterful Teddy Wilson piano on a pair of tuneful sides, "Something I Dreamed Last Night," with Kay Penton singing a warm vocal against a trio background; the instrumental reverse is Wilson and a quartet and an oldie, "The Sheik of Araby." . . . RCA-Victor has an Art Tatum waxing of a brace of dandies, "Ain't Misbehavin'," the old Fats Waller torrid classic, and the Jerome Kern-Otto Harbach favorite, "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes."

The Three Suns, another RCA-Victor outfit, has an album entitled "Dizzy Fingers," named after one of the tunes in the collection, a Zez Confrey exercise in musical technique; the others, all fairly familiar and in the same bright vein are "Dancing Tambourine," "Stumbling," also a Zez Confrey item; "Eccentric," by J. Russell Robinson, one of the famous members of the original "Dixieland Jazz Band"; "Nola," by Felix Arndt; "The Doll Dance," by Nacio Herb Brown; "The Wedding of the Painted Doll," by N. H. Brown and Arthur Freed, and another piano perennial, "Canadian Capers."

Mel Powell has a smart set of tunes in a Capitol Records album called simply "Mel Powell on Piano," which includes "Way Down Yonder in New Orleans," "Hallelujah," "When a Woman Loves a Man," "Cookin' One Up," "There's a Small Hotel" and the lovely "You Go to My Head." . . . Peggy Lee and husband Dave Barbour combine on another Capitol collection called "Rendezvous With Peggy Lee." . . . In it are "I Can't Give You Anything But Love," a minor Broadway classic; "Why Don't You Do Right," "Stormy Weather," "Them There Eyes," "'Deed I Do," and a moody little weirdie, "Don't Smoke in Bed."

Art Notes

Virginia 'U' Has French Paintings Up

RICHARD K. NEWMAN, of the faculty of William and Mary College, who is teaching art history this summer at the University of Virginia, remarks of the current exhibit there, a group of French paintings lent by the Phillips Gallery: "This collection gives the people of this area a unique opportunity to see some of the most important of all modern paintings."

Since the university budget has no provisions for such items, a group of interested citizens in and near Charlottesville put up the money for transportation and incidental expenses. Among artists whose work is shown are Picasso, Derain, Rouault, Braque, de Segonzac. Also shown is a painting by the Austrian Kokoshka, who had a strong influence on the German painters of the pre-Hitler era.

The Washington Sculptors Group, which is now having a summer show at Chequire House in Alexandria, is planning a traveling circuit for the fall. Arrangements have already been made for a display in the Courthouse at Leesburg, Va.

As a contribution to the celebration of the golden anniversary of New York's incorporation, the Downtown Gallery has a special exhibition of paintings and drawings of Manhattan by the veteran artist, John Marin. Some unfamiliar material is included.

Emergence of a typically American style in the design of tavern signs from colonial times to the midnineteenth century, as reflected in the Index of American Design, will be discussed by Dr. Raymond S. Stites in a lecture at the National Gallery today at 5 p. m. in the auditorium.

Dr. Stites' talk will be illustrated with examples from the index designs on file at the gallery.

Beginning tomorrow, the sculpture of the week at the National Gallery will be Pollaiuolo's "Bust of a Warrior." Daily talks will be given by Margaret Bouton at 12:30 and 2:30.

Story Told Of Cocteau And His Faith

NEW YORK (U.P.).—In the mid-twenties the intellectual world of France was split into two camps. On the one side were the Surrealists. On the other the neo-Catholics.

The poet Jean Cocteau was a leader of the Surrealists. He had tried hypnosis, table turning and opium. Once he even ate boxes of sugar because he had read that it made one dream.

In 1925, Cocteau suddenly joined the Catholics. He announced his conversion in a letter to the Catholic philosopher, Jacques Maritain. That letter, together with Maritain's answer, is now published in English by the Philosophical Library under the title "Art and Faith."

"Art for art's sake, or for the people are equally absurd," Cocteau wrote. "I propose art for God . . . Is there a more exciting . . . program than following Christianity to the letter?"

Maritain agreed that "to paint the things of Christ one must live in Christ." But he added that art can prepare for grace without painting the things of Christ, provided that it "snatches real pieces from Heaven." Such, he wrote, was the art of Picasso and Rouault. Both the poet and the philosopher expressed their hope that art and poetry would follow their lead.

Twenty years passed by. The English edition is prefaced by Maritain alone. There is a hint to Cocteau's defection. And an acknowledgment that the expectations put into art and poetry did not materialize. But "I have not given up the hope I was then expressing," Maritain writes. "The temporary failures have only a secondary importance."

Vetlugin Promoted

Voldemar Vetlugin, former member of the editorial board at M-G-M, has been promoted to producer by Louis B. Mayer and will take charge of "East Side," Marcia Davenport subject now being written for the screen by Isobel Lennert. At the same time, Mayer announced the appointment of Kenneth MacKenna as supervisor of the studio's story department, the post he occupied before the war. MacKenna, who has been acting as editorial assistant to Mayer, will continue in that capacity, as well as similarly serving Dore Schary, new vice president in charge of production.

Portable Radio Is Public's Pet Now

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP).—The public's pet in radio sets right now seems to be the portable you can carry along with you like a lunch box, or even stick in your coat pocket.

The boom in portables is a welcome development to manufacturers and dealers, coming at a time when sales of home radios have slackened off considerably from the postwar boom level.

Time was a radio was tied to the nearest electric light plug. But now portables are blossoming in increasing numbers on beaches, picnic tables and park benches.

Even Ball Games

SOME folks carry portables to the ball games so they can listen at the same time to other ball games. And it's not an uncommon sight to see a fond papa pushing a baby carriage while listening to a sports event on a portable slung from a shoulder strap or propped up at junior's feet.

In the past few years the portable's status has changed from novelty almost to necessity—particularly for vacationers. A good part of its changed status is due to its changed appearance from a rather awesome gadget to a sleek, attractive, compact instrument.

There have been portable sets since 1925, but the real boom in portables began in 1940. In that year, really small portables became possible when RCA, and then other manufacturers, began mass production of tiny tubes no bigger than your thumb.

Portables boomed that year and again in 1941, but then the war put a halt to civilian radio production. After the war, the public needed home radios first of all, but after production began to catch up with demand for table and console models, portables began to boom again.

2 Million Last Year

LAST year more than two million portables were turned out—double the 1946 output—and this year the figure is expected to reach three million.

So far this year, portables have accounted for about 16 per cent of all radio production, compared with 12 per cent last year.

This year's production is showing other trends, too. Sets with frequency modulation are running nearly 10 per cent of the total against last year's 5 per cent. And television sets accounted for nearly 3 per cent of the units produced in the first six months of the year compared with ½ of 1 per cent for the previous year.

Because of the higher cost involved and the zooming output, however, television's growth far overshadows other developments in the production picture.

Biggs' Organ Recitals Return to Air Today

AT 1 p. m. today Station WTOP will return E. Power Biggs' organ recitals to Washington air waves.

One of the longest consecutive programs in radio history, the Biggs half hour is played from the Germanic Museum at Harvard University. Occasionally when the noted organist is on tour, he is heard from such famous instruments as the organ in the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City.

During the past years, now numbering almost a decade, Biggs has presented a tremendous repertoire drawn entirely from the finest organ literature in the world. Bach, Handel, Mozart, the classic composers of the seventeenth century, music from the romantic era of the 1800s, and a great body of music of our own time has been heard, and repeatedly, on these fine concerts.

Concertos Heard

MANY of the programs employ instruments, usually drawn from the Boston Symphony, in concert with the organ, so that concertos, and other ensemble works may be heard. An important phase of these programs has been the commissioning by the organist of music from many of our leading composers today. New music by Hindemith, Piston, Copland, Sowerby, Ellis Kohs, and others, has been heard during the years of Biggs' playing.

Station WTOP is returning these programs to local air channels in response to many requests from music lovers in Washington. But the early afternoon hour on Sunday is a difficult period to keep for such a program. Thus it is extremely important that those who hear and enjoy the program should let the station know their pleasure.

Letters to radio stations have a real effect upon programming policy and those who prize such music as Biggs plays have a responsibility to let a station know their opinion.

Now U. S. Citizen

TODAY'S program includes three works of Benedetto Marcello: Psalms 18 and 19, and an A Minor Toccata; a Carillon, Lied, and finale to the first symphony of Louis Vierne; and the only organ composition of Franz Schubert, a Fugue in E Minor.

TV's Growing Pains

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 14 (AP).—Television's growing pain period probably will continue for another two or three years, says Sidney Strotz, NBC Western Division vice president.

He said he doesn't believe anyone in television is making any money today because of the high cost of original installation and the rapid obsolescence of equipment.

Strotz said NBC television cameras currently on order would be obsolete in six months because of new improved equipment already in the laboratories.

Another bottleneck, he explained, is manufacturers' inability to make enough receiving, transmitter and camera equipment to supply the demand.

The entry of NBC's Los Angeles station on the air probably will be delayed from September to December 1 for just such difficulties, he said.

'Busmens' Vacations

WHEN radio stars take their annual summer vacations from their regular shows, it doesn't necessarily mean they're idle—or resting. Singer Jo Stafford, for instance, made five personal appearances a day at the New York Paramount Theater, and thereafter subbed for Ted Husing on a daily 3½-hour disc jockey show on Station WHN.

Saloon Keeper Patrick Radigan of Hoboken, N. J., has been chasing patrons out every day at 6 to let the kiddies come in to watch television for an hour, but the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission has made him quit. Commissioner Edwin Hock held that a saloon is no place for children, even with the bottles corked and the barflies banished.

What Is a Coax Cable, Anyhow?

WMAL-TV press conference is preserved for posterity by Staff Artist Bill Willison of woven copper strands, all inclosed in an outer insulating sheath. The inner core of copper performs the same function as the inner tube in the other arrangement, and the sheath of woven copper threads does the same duties as the outer tube.

But whatever form it takes, the important point is that Washington and New York are connected by four of these coaxial cables, three used to convey programs from New York to us, and one used for northbound material.

Current allocations, which began last week and will run until January 1, have divided the use of these cables among the four existing video networks, ABC, NBC, CBS and DuMont.

This gives them practically unlimited opportuhities to show off at long distance and presumably will inspire them to hitherto unknown heights.

WMAL-TV probably has the best of it at present. An ABC affiliate, it can take everything WJZ-TV sends it from New York, and can also have what it wants from CBS with whom it has a working arrangement since CBS has no outlet of its own in Washington.

Among the new ABC shows which WMAL-TV has just begun to carry or will begin carrying next week are "Press Agent's Delight" at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays, "Gay Nineties Review" at 8 p. m. Wednesdays, "Johnny Thompson's Talent Show" at 8 p. m. Thursdays, and on Sundays "The Southernaires" at 2:30 p. m., "Candid Microphone" at 8 p. m. and "ABC Varieties" at 8:30. p. m. "Critic at Large" begins Wednesday, August 25.

Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis are about to be linked with the East Coast networks. CBS has announced that it will not wait for coaxial cables to connect all of its affiliates. Films of the CBS video programming will be flown to those which are not yet connected to the rest of the network by cable or by the series of microwave relay stations which are used just as satisfactorily to connect them.

East Coast facilities already include Richmond, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore and Schenectady as well as New York and Washington. The first four have been added in the past year. (Boston and Schenectady are connected by microwave relay, the rest by coaxial cable.)

In addition to the fact that the more stations there are to offer programs to each other the merrier, there is the interesting theory that shows on a large network eventually reflect the self-improvements that money can buy. (More money from sponsors who are getting the additional coverage.)

This theory is far from foolproof (as any radio program testifies) but the more money there is in the business, the more good talent it may attract.

TELEQUERIES

Will Washington get television programs this year from Hollywood? E. H. N.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. expects to have a coaxial cable running to Los Angeles by spring of 1949, to be used for long distance phone calls. They can equip the cable for television duty if anybody asks them. A microwave relay system from New York to Chicago, to be completed in 1950, may be extended to San Francisco later. But telecasting between here and the West Coast definitely will not begin this year.

Screen Stars Burn As Television Gets Their Old Pictures

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 14 (INS).—Many Hollywood stars are burned up about their old films being shown on television screens—on which they're collecting not one sou. And while everybody fumes, Gene Autry is going to do something about it—or lose, trying.

Autry's will be a test case. The cowboy singer was notified by a Chicago firm that his old serial, "The Phantom Empire," had been taken by a tele station there and would be for fall use under sponsorship of a chewing gum company.

Hollywood stars complain that old film, under outmoded movie techniques, show them to a disadvantage. A court decision for Autry will be of importance to the rest of the industry.

A Half Million TV Sets In Use

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP).—The number of television sets in use throughout the country now is approaching the one-half-million mark and should pass it any day. George L. Moskovics, manager of television sales development for the Columbia Broadcasting System, says 419,650 sets were in use July 1. Since then 75,000 or more sets have gone out.

Moskovics estimates 89 per cent of the sets were in homes. As of July 1, he gave the totals by cities as New York metropolitan area 240,000, Philadelphia 48,000, Chicago 25,440, Los Angeles 25,000, Washington 13,750 and Baltimore 13,000—with the remainder in 13 other cities with stations. Station WBKB says the Chicago total had risen to 28,739 by August 4.

"The original amateur hour" originated by the late Maj. Edward Bowes will return to radio over ABC starting September 29. A television version has been running for some time on the Dumont network. The same sponsor (Old Golds) will present both radio and television versions under a newly signed contract.

The television version will be supplied to Dumont affiliates in Cleveland, Chicago and Los Angeles by film recordings.

ABC is working on a program it says will be "the first documentary in television history." To be produced this fall, it will be entitled "The Marshall Plan: A First Report" . . . The Agriculture Department is making a study of the use of television to give to consumers "information to encourage more effective use, and greater consumption, of agricultural products" . . . Television comes to the Deep South September 29 when WSB-TV goes on the air in Atlanta . . . Singer-Actress Doris Day, who made several guest appearances with Bob Hope last season, will be a regular on his NBC program when it returns to the air September 14.

The Children Come First In Sweden

By Fred M. Hechinger

STOCKHOLM (Via Air Mail).—The tourist sees "The Venice of the North." But there is another, less publicized side of Stockholm. It is the city of parks and playgrounds—children's town. I know of no other city which has done as much for the continuous education and recreation of its children of preschool age.

The water fountains here play in the brilliant sunshine and they are obviously designed to beautify the town. But when you get close to them you find that they serve another, more practical purpose. Invariably they have been built out to be used as "paddle pools" for Stockholm's youngest citizens. In most of them there are even wooden floats, and the happy laughter of naked tots can be heard for blocks.

Stockholm is dotted with parks adding up to a grand total of 54 million square feet. In them there are 220 organized playgrounds of a kind unknown to Americans.

Invitation to Play

I TOOK a three-hour tour of the playgrounds and stopped at many of them. Invariably there is the large wooden sign of the sunflower, emblem known to all children here as an invitation to play. Most of the larger grounds are grouped around a shallow pool. Next to it there is a large, movable playpen where mothers can leave their youngest charges for several hours at a time when they don't want to drag their youngsters along on dusty shopping tours.

In every playpen, a city-employed young "assistant" in the park department's becoming blue-and-white uniform takes care of the kids, plays with them and sees to it that the city-owned toys are spared the roughest treatment. Occasionally you hear a youngster scream with dissatisfaction, but when you look closely it is usually caused by mother's return and the end of "organized playing."

Next to the playpen there is an inclosed lawn with swings and other equipment for the youngsters of kindergarten age. A young play supervisor, often of college age, joins in the fun and teaches a variety of games. But the climax of every playground is the old, immobile car—a real automobile, made harmless by removal of the more intricate mechanism—where youngsters can let their technical instincts run riot. Nobody who recalls his own childhood dreams about motors and driving could possibly underestimate the educational value of that realistic "toy."

From morning until night the City of Stockholm provides one continuous nursery and recreation service for all children. There is no need for the settlement houses of slum sections in other countries; for one thing, there are no slums here; and furthermore, children of every neighborhood are offered the same facilities.

Flower Gardens

EVERY playground, too, has two little huts—one for the supervisors and the mobile equipment, the other for the children in case of rain. There is no need ever for the youngsters to set out on their journey home until mother is ready to call for them.

The pride of every playground is a small inclosure where an odd assortment of flowers and vegetables defies every principle of gardening and planned beauty. The children's plots are entirely at the disposal of the youngsters, and they plant and arrange them completely according to their own creative desires.

"The real value of these plots is to make the youngsters understand the meaning of flowers," said Bertil Asker, Stockholm director of parks and playgrounds, who showed off every playpen with paternal pride. "No child who has planted and tended a few flowers of his own will destroy the beauty of our parks. They learn to respect the life of nature without having to be told."

Every evening the supervisors arrange special games and competitive sports for children of all ages in order to foster the community spirit of the neighborhood's youngest generation. During the summer each "playground community" arranges a number of supervised excursions into the outskirts and to special children's camps which the city maintains near Stockholm for youngsters who can't be sent away on vacation. "As far as possible, we want to assure a happy childhood to every youngster—without the humiliating need for charity," said Mr. Asker.

Indoor Playgrounds

IN VARIOUS parts of Stockholm there are old, one-story timber houses, long deserted by their original inhabitants. In almost any other city these decrepit huts would by now serve as slum tenements for the poor. Not in Stockholm!

The "timber houses" have been taken over by the park department. They have been renovated without losing their "Hansel and Gretel" appearance, and in the window boxes there are bright red flowers.

These are the indoor playgrounds of Stockholm, open to all children of all ages. In rainy weather they can play and build and regard the little huts as their very own. A supervisor, trained in kindergarten techniques, is present at all times. When I made the rounds, a city-wide competition of children's drawings had just been started and the uninhibited "masterpieces" decorated all the walls.

But perhaps the pride of Stockholm's children's town are the three new "building" playgrounds, fashioned after the "waste materials play fields" in Denmark, which I described in this column last summer. In them you might find almost anything from a collapsed model T Ford to a very spry looking old airplane which was poised on a little hill, seemingly ready to take off into fairyland.

Great Sacrifice

IN EVERY one of these building grounds the City of Stockholm has made a great sacrifice: it has contributed a complete set of three real but outmoded streetcars. Here—in all its magnificent size and actuality—reposes the dream of every youngster. Oh, to be 5 again in Stockholm and to be a conductor on this blue-and-white trolley.

For the older children there are neat and well equipped tool shacks. During my visit the building of a "town hall" was in progress, and as I climbed with some misgivings on the lofty roof, I learned that the playground was run by a democratically elected council of youngsters.

To take care of the more serious problems, if they ever arise, a young supervisor is constantly on duty, but all the disciplinary action is taken by the youngsters' own police force, which hands in a daily progress report in carefully scribbled notebooks.

The playground community issues its own weekly mimeographed newspaper, Bleckposten (Play-News), which sells at 10 oere to cover expenses and is filled with very impressive sketches of projects which have either been started or have come to life in the creative minds of some of the contributing editors. While there is not a separate woman's page, there is the drawing of a carefully finished interior of a cottage which portrays all the delicacy of the 5-year-old female touch.

Colgate Gets Telescope

Hamilton, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Two men passed six years of their spare time building a 12.7-inch reflector telescope and then realized they wouldn't be able to use it. They then decided "to find a good home for the telescope" and have given the instrument to Colgate University. "We realized we couldn't use the telescope," explained Dr. Louis Shelten, X-ray specialist at the Rome City Hospital, and George E. Burlingame, instrument maker at the Oneida Community, "because it must be housed in an observatory and that is a little out of our reach." Dr. Julius A. Brown, lecturer in astronomy at Colgate, is pleased with the gift. "With it we should be able to study objects nine times fainter than is now possible with Colgate's 4-inch refractor telescope." Colgate has appointed a committee to make plans for building an observatory.

Guidance With Big G Aids Pupils

By Horace B. Ward

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 14 (AP).—A system of education designed to prevent children from developing personalities that will handicap them later in life is producing interesting results at the Cochran School in Louisville.

Principal Ervin W. Detjen calls it the first application of guidance—with a capital "G"—to elementary school pupils.

He says that the system demonstrates that happy children learn more and that it helps youngsters to adjust themselves to their world early in life.

So in Cochran School Detjen and his teachers have made guidance a game. The children don't know they are being analyzed and guided, although often the parents do.

Ervin W. Detjen, principal of Cochran School in Louisville, Ky., believes "guidance" can be of help to almost any child. Here he is with a few of his pupils

Personality Change

TAKE the case of Caroline. This 10-year-old girl with blue eyes and curly blond hair had a high I. Q. She made good grades, but her mother came to Principal Detjen one day with tears in her eyes. Caroline, she said, was unhappy and wanted to transfer to another room.

"She just can't seem to get along with the children," said the mother.

Detjen looked up the personality chart on which pupils some time before had rated each other.

"Here is your answer," he said. "Of the 35 pupils in her room, 9 say she's grouchy, 13 admit she has leadership, but 11 say she's too bossy, and only 2 want her for their best friend."

Instead of moving Caroline to another room, he proposed that the mother, the teachers and Caroline herself try to change her personality.

Detjen had several friendly talks with Caroline. They discussed games and books, what story book people she liked best and why. It was easy to pass from that to the real boys and girls she liked and what she liked about them. Before long she was volunteering comments about herself, and Detjen could make suggestions as to how she could make herself popular.

She's not perfect today, but the leaven is working.

Merely Need Help

CAROLINE'S case is extreme. Most youngsters merely need a seed implanted about friendliness and consideration for others.

In Cochran School the children play games, make up songs and devise mottoes about being cheerful, helpful and friendly. They sometimes list the characteristics they like in other people, just as kids at a party might name their favorite songs or movie stars.

Most interesting perhaps are the personality rating charts such as the one which provided the clue to Caroline's troubles.

Opposite the names of the children are columns headed friendly, unfriendly, grouchy, cheerful, happy, unhappy—up to a total of 25 traits and indexes of personality. Figures in the columns show the number of classmates who ascribed these characteristics to each one.

Estimates are given by each child to the teacher in confidence. The older ones write or check blanks; the younger pupils may "whisper in teacher's ear." The last column often is the most significant—it lists the number of pupils who would want each child for their best friend.

Cooperative Ideas

NOT all the guidance projects deal with pupils as individuals. Some take the form of cooperative character-building activities—"experiments in social living," Detjen calls them. Groups of children learn to appreciate beauty and practice teamwork by arranging flowers in the school lunchroom. Recently a group dramatized table manners. One child ate correctly, another broke all the laws of etiquette, while their classmates took notes.

Detjen started guidance at Cochran soon after he became principal there in September, 1946. He says guidance already has proved that happy, well-adjusted children learn more and cause less trouble than those who are unhappy or rebellious.

More important, he thinks, guidance helps show boys and girls how to approach life, how to get along with other people. Happiness and self-confidence, he says, are just as important as reading, writing and 'rithmetic — maybe more so.

Report on Veterans

Stanford University, Calif., Aug. 14.—The increasing importance of the veteran as a graduate student was indicated in a report by George D. Barahal, Stanford University veterans coordinator.

The report listed 1846 veterans as working for advanced degrees during the spring quarter—44 per cent of the 4159 veterans enrolled in the university. These former servicemen accounted for 70 per cent of all graduate students at Stanford.

Attendance Marks Fall At National Tourney

By Marian H. Barre

ALL attendence records were broken when the National Championships were concluded last week at the Hotel Stevens in Chicago. A field of 208 pairs competed in the biggest event of the week, the world masters' pairs, which was won by S. Garton Churchill, a former Washingtonian, and Cecil Head of New York.

The mixed team-of-four championship was won by Mrs. Helen Sobel of New York, Mrs. Margaret Wagar of Atlanta, John Crawford and Charles Goren, both of Philadelphia. The men's pairs title went to Sam Katz and Fred Hirsch of New York and the women's to Mrs. Max Gutman and Mrs. Leonard Goldstein of Cincinnati, last year's winners.

The last major title, the masters' team-of-four championship, had not been concluded at this writing. Four teams from different sections of the country, New York, Chicago, Cleveland and Minneapolis, remained in the field, with the line-up of George Rapee, Sam Stayman, Howard Schenken, Crawford and Mrs. Wagar ranking as the favorites.

ALTHOUGH Washington bridge players did not win any of the major titles at stake, they brought back enough nationally won master points to create a new life master and a new senior master.

Mrs. Frederick Eberson became Washington's first woman life master when she and Mrs. Edward P. Cotter won 6½ points in the national women's pairs championship with a top in the first session and second place in the first session and second place in the final session, finishing tenth in the field of 106 pairs. Mrs. Eberson also finished second in one section of the Ben Golder pairs with C. C. Johnson and Mrs. Cotter held a similar spot with John J. Parrish in the masters' pairs. Johnson was also second in the new partners pairs with an out-of-town partner.

Miss Kathleen McNutt entered the select group of senior masters, who hold more than 150 master points, by winning one section of both the Ben Golder and the Chicago pairs. In the latter event, she and her partner, Wilbur Pestell of California, were second in the entire field of 58 tables and missed winning by only one point. William F. Million, playing with Mrs. R. S. Weekes of Syracuse, also won one section of this game and William A. Poissant took a second place with a Cleveland partner.

To Mrs. Irene Surguy and Gene Herman, playing with Ivan Half of Pittsburgh and Mrs. Pearl Hartman of Columbus, went the honor of defeating the team of Charles Solomon, Peter Leventritt, Bert Lebhar and Sam Gold in the knockout team-of-four.

Additional master point winners included J. G. Stone and Dr. A. J. Steinberg who won one session of the men's pairs, finishing twelfth in the field, and one of the open games. Mrs. Rose Robins and Dr. N. J. McHugh also won one of the latter events.

MEANWHILE, players who remained at home were also adding to their master point records. At the Washington Bridge League on August 4, the monthly master point team game was won by David Murray, Lieut. Col. J. T. Willis, William Benedict and Larry Reynolds. In second place were Mrs. Edna Evans, John Moore, Miller Roberts and Jesse Boyd.

The monthly master point game of the Agriculture Bridge Club, held at the Euclid Studios on August 7, was won by Mrs. Ida Terrant-Mrs. Amy Scruggs, North-South, and Mrs. T. M. Boyle-Capt. J. L. Herlihy, East-West. Second place went to Mrs. Violet Zimmer-Dr. A. F. O'Donnell and Mrs. Ben Rosson-Dora Schwartz, respectively. The Agriculture Club will resume its regular weekly games at the same studio on Tuesday evening.

Master point games this week will be held at 1355 Euclid st. and Friday evening and Saturday afternoon and at the Chess Club that evening.

Large Printing Orders Might Well Be Reduced

By William M. Stuart

THE year 1948 promises to be especially remembered in the philatelic world because of the numerous commemorative postage stamps issued by the United States. With 20 new issues already announced through December and the possibility of more to come, collectors should realize it is unwise to buy too many sheets at once.

Some of the new stamps have been ordered in 115,000,000 lots while others range from 50,000,000 to 75,000,000. It has been suggested that orders for printing stamps be reduced. A maximum printing order should be 25,000,000, or not over 50,000,000. Such tremendous printing orders indicate great caution should be used by those contemplating investment. It is not likely that immense orders such as the Susan B. Anthony with a sales record of over 200,000,000 and the Governor Smith variety over 300,000,000 will be repeated in the near future. Too many stamps of a single variety may become just as objectionable as too many commemoratives.

THE Philatelic Bureau of the Embassy of Pakistan, 2201 R st. nw., has a set of four anniversary stamps housed in an attractive folder that may be obtained for 59 cents plus postage.

The United States Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture has a new slogan reading, "Remember, Only You Can Prevent Forest Fires." The slogan will be used in canceling machines of 38 of the largest post-offices in the country.

India placed on sale today a new series of stamps in memory of Mahatma Gandhi, this being the first anniversary of the independence of India. The stamps will remain on sale for three months or until all stocks are exhausted. The denominations are 1½-annas (3 cents), 3½-annas (7 cents), 12-annas (23 cents) and 10-rupees ($3.02). The value of a set of one denomination each is $3.35. The first three stamps of the series are identical in design, showing a full face of Gandhi, while the 10-rupee bears a profile view. On top of each design appears the word "Bapu" meaning "Father" in two Indian scripts, Hindi and Urdu. The three lower denominations are in sepia brown, purple blue and dark green, respectively, and the 10-rupee has the portrait in grey with a reddish brown background. The stamps were printed in Switzerland by photogravure process and bear the date on which Gandhi was born and the date on which he died. These stamps may be obtained at the Indian Embassy, 2107 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Argentina has issued a 5-centavos stamps, yellow and brown, for Traffic Safety Day. The stamp shows a large hand held as a stop signal. A 5-centavos, blue, also has been issued commemorating the fifth anniversary of the Revolution of June 4, 1943. A special cap of victory is the central motif of the design of this stamps.

THE Woodridge Stamp Club will meet tomorrow evening at the recreation room, 1818 Rhode Island ave. ne., and all stamp collectors, especially in that section, are invited.

There will be a stamp exhibition under the auspices of the Public Buildings Administration Stamp Club at the Garden and Hobby Show to be held in the recreation room of the Interior Department Building, 19th and D sts. nw., tomorrow from 1 to 9 p. m.

Ellery Denison, president of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., presided at the meeting on Tuesday evening. He has been visiting Rome, Italy, on Government business and gave an interesting account of conditions in Italy. He visited a number of stamp shops but for obvious reasons did not make heavy purchases. There will be an auction sale at the meeting on Tuesday in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw.

Annapolis Man Hopes to Find Ark

By George Bowen

ANNAPOLIS, MD., Aug. 14 (AP). Frederick Avery, model ship maker for the Naval Academy Museum, hopes to carve the first accurate replica of history's most famous vessel—Noah's Ark.

Avery is going this summer on an expedition which hopes to find remains of the Ark preserved in the ice atop Mount Ararat in Turkey.

Details of the expedition are about as secret as the Ark itself. It was first announced in Greensboro, N. C., where Bethel Smith said her father, Dr. A. J. Smith, was among those going.

She said Dr. Smith and Gail Fletcher, a missionary in India, had published in 1945 a book entitled "The Amazing Discovery of Noah's Ark." She said the book was based on periodicals and airplane pilots' reports of remains sighted on the 16,619-foot peak of Mount Ararat.

Supposed Secret

THEN Avery disclosed he would be a member of the expedition as "vice president in charge of marine research." Maintaining the whole thing "is supposed to be a secret," the Navy model maker would say only that his passport calls for departure in August.

(Mount Ararat is frozen 10 months of the year. August and September are the only months of thaw.)

Avery's job will be to check any remains found with the description of the Ark in the Bible. It is explicit to this extent:

"The length of it (the Ark) shall be 300 cubits, the breadth of it 50 cubits and the height of it 30 cubits. A window thou shalt make to the Ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the Ark shalt thou set in the side thereof; with lower, second and third stories shalt thou make it." (Genesis 6:15-16.)

Using the Hebrew measure of 17.58 inches to the cubit, that would make a three-deck ship 439½ feet long, 73¼ feet wide and 43.9 feet high.

Isn't that enough for Avery to carve his conception of the ship?

Avery says no, because "I have no idea of the shape. It might have been just a raft, a box. I'd impair my status as a professional model maker if I tried to make a model of it beforehand."

The 59-year-old craftsman said he would stick to a strict comparison of measurements for proof of any find. He said it is known from the Bible (Genesis 6:14) that the Ark was made of "gopher wood" and lined with pitch "within and without."

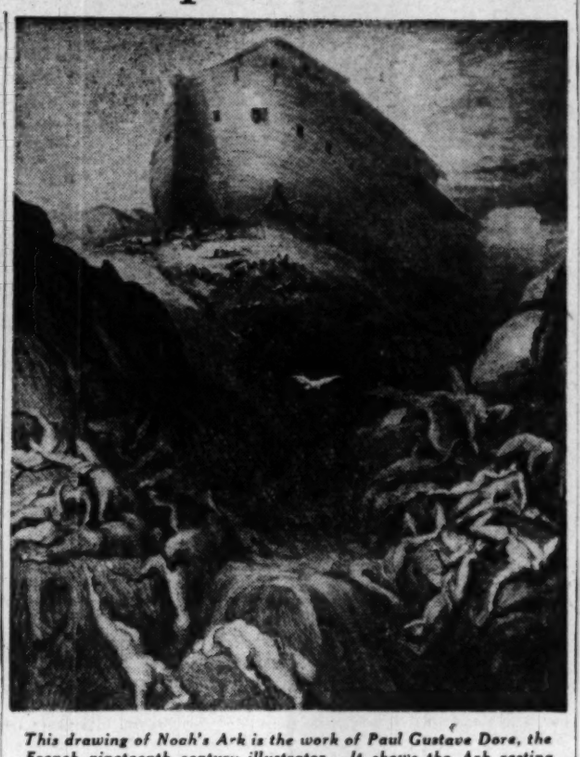
'House' Sighted

AVERY said work on the expedition has been going on secretly for three years since "something like a house was seen on Mount Ararat. Why anybody would build a house on top of a 17,000-foot mountain, I wouldn't know."

The model maker said the only member to be allowed to report on the expedition will be Ben F. Allen of Los Angeles, managing director of the periodical, Deluge Geography.

If the Ark is still in Turkey, Avery's presence will assure a true replica of it. He has been carving little boats ever since he was a boy in his native Sunderland on England's northeast coast.

He worked for 20 years for a New York ship manufacturer after coming to America as a young journeyman. Then he was associated with two private model ship collectors until the Naval Academy appointed him its first model maker in 1938.



This drawing of Noah's Ark is the work of Paul Gustave Dore, the French nineteenth century illustrator. It shows the Ark resting atop Ararat as the flood waters subsided

16,500 Americans Visiting Holland

The Hague, Aug. 14 (AP).—American travel in Holland has hit a new high this summer, the Netherlands Tourist Bureau reports, and the figure may even go higher as a result of efforts to extend the season into the autumn.

Present estimates are that 16,500 Americans will have visited Holland by the end of the summer. These include about 12,000 tourists from the United States, 3000 from the American forces in Germany and 1500 students coming under the auspices of various organizations such as the American Youth Hostelers, the International Students Service, Experiment in International Living, and International Seminars.

Losers Order Ham and Eggs, Winners Get Steaks at Felix's

By Haynes Thompson

CANNES, Aug. 14 (U.P.)—Meet Felix Cenci, 49, friend of royalty, amateur philosopher, head barman and owner of the popular Blue Bar on the seafront Boulevard Croisette here.

Meet him a second time within a year and he'll remember your name.

It's a hackneyed phrase, but Felix needs no introduction. A report last year that he had been invited by Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, to his marriage with Princess Elizabeth put Felix on front pages everywhere.

Actually, he received no formal invitation, but he is a good friend of the Duke's and the mail brought a warm personal letter from Philip thanking him for a present.

Before his marriage Philip used to come here often. Felix's bar, as it is to most everybody else here, was the Duke's favorite hangout and eatery. He often borrowed Felix's bicycle for rides around town.

Gave a Bike

THE gift Felix sent him was a miniature gold bike inlaid with precious stones—a work of art. It is only inches high but every part is workable, like the one Philip used to borrow.

When Felix took over his place four years ago it was a milk bar and doing badly. Today a good 3000 thirsty and hungry customers drop in daily during seasons. Three kinds of Scotch and everything else you can name to drink are available.

Meals include everything, with ham and eggs for losers and steaks with french fries for winners being the most popular dishes after the casino closes at 2 a. m.

If you want to, and a lot of them do, Felix lets the ladies go into the kitchen and cook their own eggs. People in Cannes say nobody serves strawberries with cream like Felix.

When the U. S. Army made this city and nearby Nice a leave center during the war, Americans by the thousands beat a more or less straight path in and out of Felix's.

Their favorite order was a mixture of tomato juice, cognac and Worcestershire sauce, which Felix dubbed a "blood and guts" cocktail after the late General George Patton.

Remember Names

DESPITE the off-season lull currently hitting most bars and restaurants here, Felix's does a near capacity day and night business.

"I'm good to my customers, remember their names, don't cheat them and don't charge too much," is the way Felix, a father of two, explains his phenomenal trade.

Because he can't say "no," he has the world's most expensive friends. They owe him more than a million francs in drink and food checks for which they'll never get a bill.

Felix often spends 18 hours a day in his bar and likes it.

"Every wave out there is different. So are people. It's fun," he told me, pointing a chubby finger at the blue Mediterranean across the street.

"And besides," he added, as he does to everybody who comes in, "life is good. Women are eternally beautiful. The sky is blue. The sea is calm and it never rains in Cannes."

Crabbing Is On At Virginia Beach

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va., Aug. 14.—This is the month for fishing and crabbing in the calm, protected bays and inlets which form a backdrop for this resort on the Virginia Riviera. Late summer brings crabs in abundance to shallow Linkhorn Bay and Broad Bay, and the simple sport of crabbing rates with tourists, vacationists and native Virginians as the most fun for the least expenditure.

All you need for successful crabbing is a few old fish heads or pieces of rancid meat, a piece of string and any kind of a small net. You wade into the shallow water, cast out your bait on the string and scoop up the crabs in your net when they come after the lure.

Hotels Wear A Big Smile These Days

By Dorothy Carew

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP).—Hotels have hung out the "welcome" sign for motorists.

They have no intention of being by-passed again as they were in the 1930's when many auto travelers turned to tourist homes and motor camps. Hotels can't compete on price, so they are stressing helpfulness.

The Statler Hotels have a corps of college-trained girls to greet motorists and act as "service aides" during their stay. The aides will help with shopping, baby-sit or perform any of a number of other tasks. The service is free to the motorist and no tipping is allowed.

If you have a reservation at the Statler Hotel, the aide arranges for you to be whisked right to your room without going to the lobby to register. If you have no reservation, the aide will tell you whether rooms are available or direct you to another hotel without any need for you to pile out of the car and into the lobby. No one likes to parade through a lobby after a long, hard drive.

Outside Welcome

IN BALTIMORE, the motorist gets a welcome from the Maryland Hotel Association before he gets into town. The hotels there have set up six travel information booths on the highways. Travelers can find out the points of historic interest and learn of hotels best suited to their needs and means before they arrive in the city.

The St. Anthony Hotel in San Antonio, Texas, has a separate registration desk and private elevator for motorists. The Adams Hotel in Phoenix, Ariz., has a "motor lobby" for guests arriving by car.

"Five minutes after a guest has driven into the St. Anthony garage, he is in his rooms, ready to bathe and dress," a spokesman for that hotel said.

At the Mission Inn at Riverside, Calif., a drive-in entrance has a travel booth alongside. A sheltered walk leads to the lobby entrance nearest the registration desk and elevators. That hotel also is building an outdoor swimming pool for its guests.

A drive-in web allows the motorist to take his car within a few feet of his room at the Last Frontier in Las Vegas, Nev.

And in Salt Lake City, the Hotel Utah has a direct telephone line from a drive-in entrance to the bell captain's desk. A traveler can have his luggage unloaded, his car parked, can register and go to his room without going through the main lobby.

Los Angeles Woman Claims Half-Century of Auto Driving

Los Angeles, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Mrs. Jessica P. Merville has evidence to back up her claim of having driven longer than any other woman.

The 69-year-old former antique dealer doesn't claim to be the oldest driver, but she can prove that she has been driving since 1898.

She has photographs showing that her father's first car, an 1898 one-cylinder Winton, was the first one in Mount Morris, N. Y., and one of the first three seen in Buffalo. She has pictures to prove that she drove it, too.

Paris Is Still the City of Light

Two Washington girls, Anna Clark, 22, 2801 Daniel rd., Chevy Chase, Md., center, and Harris Kramer, 21, 3033 Ellicott st. nw., Washington, right, try out their French with a native Parisian at a sidewalk cafe in Paris. The girls are studying at the Sorbonne for the summer

By Thomas Hardie

PARIS (By Airmail)—"La Ville Lumiere" is still "the City of Light." Unlike Berlin, and thanks to the devaluation of the franc, gaiety is still unrationed here. Floods of American tourists are adding to this general light-headedness by painting the town a non-political red.

The Tour de France has just finished, the Olympics have been in full swing across the channel, and steak dinners with wine are as low as 300 francs ($1).

Two Greater Washington girls are in Paris for a four-weeks' course at the Sorbonne.

They are Harris Kramer, 21, 3033 Ellicott st. nw., a '48 Smith College graduate, and Anna Clark, 22, 2801 Daniel rd., Chevy Chase, Md., a '47 University of Maryland graduate and former teacher at Catonsville High School.

They sailed from New York June 23. After landing in Ontwerp, they proceeded on their own—chiefly by bicycle—through Belgium and the Netherlands. Since then they have "done Paris," including a daylight maneuver, alone, into Place Pigalle, a boat ride through the Paris sewers, and an inspection of French bathing suits at a local pool.

Miss Clark, although she finds the French an "impulsive" people, thinks that Americans are even quicker to jump to conclusions and make hasty decisions.

Gaiety-as-Usual

THE French—that is, those who are still in Paris and haven't taken off to Deauville, Dinard or the Cote d'Azur—are complacent with a gaiety-as-usual air.

The reception given a news vendor outside a popular Champs Elysees cafe recently is typical of their prevailing mood. Not having much success, the vendor bawled forth with, "New French Cabinet Crisis." Not a flicker of interest from the idle drinkers. The same with the latest morsel from Berlin.

Then in desperation, he yelled, "Coffee off the ration." . . . All heads turned . . . "In Brazil," he added, and strode off.

The Paris manager of Thos. Cook & Son pointed out last week that there have been no tour cancellations in his office this year. In 1938, he says, he was swamped with such requests even before the Munich conference.

Americans are filling the chic cafes about the Place de la Vendome and Place de la Concorde, and strolling en masse up the wide expanse of the Champs Elysees.

And Montparnasse, once the romantic hideout of such literary lights as Stein and Hemingway, is now what the few oldtimers still around call a "tourist camp."

Race Against Time

A BRITISH journalist spotted an American tourist in a left bank cafe last week, gobbling down a sandwich and, so the Britisher claims, reading a shortened version of "For Whom the Bell Tolls," in order to complete his itinerary on time.

Two American college boys who had more time available several days ago in the Cafe de la Paix (which reports business exceeding even that of the 1920's) were overheard playing a new sidewalk game. Five points for every friend spotted whose name could be recalled, and three points for every familiar face, but without the name. At one point the count had reached 18 to 11.

Like the two Washington girls, American students have signed up in large numbers for the vacation courses at the Sorbonne, trade mark of continental and worldly culture. Out of some 500 students representing 30 nationalities, over 50 are American.

An example of what many Europeans think of their American tourist friends cropped up recently in the Paris Catacombs when a brigade was tramping single-file through its dark, winding vaults.

The herd was obediently following the black line overhead, translating it so literally that few even glanced at the French and Latin quotations on the walls.

As the group trudged by, a guard smirked under his breath: "Seem's typical, tourist completely in the dark, going through Europe looking neither to right or left."

Two New U. S. Ships to Cost 48 Millions

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (NYHT). American Export Lines announced yesterday that it has reached an agreement with the United States Martime Commission for immediate construction of the two largest American ocean liners ever built in this country for passenger service to the Mediterranean.

The two ships will each cost an estimated $23,415,000 and be of 20,000 gross tons and 33,000 displacement tons. Their designed speed of 25 knots will make them the fastest passenger vessels operating under the American flag.

The liner America, operating in the North Atlantic to the British Isles and France, has a top speed of 24.5 knots as the Nation's fastest passenger vessel.

Contracts for construction of the American Export Line vessels were awarded to Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Fore River yard in Quincy, Mass. Daniel D. Strohmeier, vice president in charge of Bethlehem shipbuilding, said keels for the vessels will be laid in the spring and that the first one will be delivered late in 1950.

The new ships will be the first major passenger ship construction undertaken in the United States since the America was delivered into service in 1940. They will be this Nation's bid for the ocean passenger traffic to Italy carried before the war in Italian express liners such as the Rex, Roma and Conte de Savoia which were destroyed during the war.

The ships are to operate in the line's service between New York and Genoa and Naples on a 23-day turn-around schedule calling for 15 trips each year. This will add approximately 60,000 berths annually to trans-Atlantic travel facilities.

The liners will be constructed under a 45 per cent construction subsidy with additional funds allowed by the Government for defense features that will be built into them.

Airlines Out to Cut East-West Prices

By Orval Hopkins

IF three airlines have their way, you'll be able to fly across the country at the lowest rates in history, according to the Air Coach Association, of 1757 K st. nw. ACA says the airlines—Standard, Viking and Airline Transport Carriers have asked the CAB to let them start scheduled operations between California and New York (with intermediate stops) at a $99-plus tax top. This is about $50 under the tariff collected by scheduled airlines and $70 less than the fare for the poshy Constellation and DC-6 trip, ACA says . . . The lady here is Bea Thompson of Hampton, Va., one of a covey of comely young things who will take part in the National Seafood Festival parade in Hampton September 16 and 17 and in such capacity she should be able to tell you what kind of a noise annoys an oyster . . .

BEA THOMPSON

MOORE-McCORMACK Lines says, "It may surprise the fashion critics to know that the traveler to South America is taking along in his or her wardrobe, not only the smart and the cool and the comfortable in attire, but also the ridiculous, the ludicrous, the sensational." I took this up with our fashion editor, a Miss Natalie Cladd. "Bunk," she said, airily. "Nothing—just nothing—surprises me."... The All-Year Club of Southern California writes in and speaks of "the Los Angeles County Fair, 'biggest and most beautiful in America." Observe that the All-Year boys have quoted that business about the "biggest and most beautiful." But the quoted matter isn't attributed to anybody. Thus the All-Year Club cleanses its soul by not actually saying the L. A. County fair is the biggest and most beautiful in the country—and at the same time saying just that. It's a neat trick and publicity is wonderful. Ah, these Californians.

I HAVE come into a serverely marked copy of the Public Press, tri-weekly (I called it a weekly) published in the good interest of the cities of Lewes and Rehoboth Beach, Del. While vacationing in Rehoboth not long ago I did a piece for the paper and got pretty complimentary, not only about the beach resort but about the Public Press. Well, somebody clipped my piece and mailed it to the editor of the Public Press. He sat down and reprinted virtually the whole piece (with my name in nice big type), replying to my remarks, calling me names and generally giving me a good haulover. What really reduces me, though, is that somebody had to mail in my piece in the first place. Whyn't he read the papers?

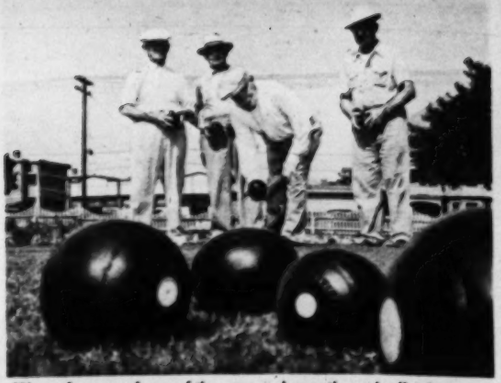
Pipe in one hand, ball in the other, a veteran bowler sights the "jack." The medieval sport of bowls has come down through the centuries intact, and the game, as played in New Bedford today, retains full flavor of the past.



Worm's eye view of the game shows three balls clustered around "jack." Veteran James Talbot is about to bowl.

In a close match, a piece of string on two pegs is used by umpire to measure distance between ball and "jack."

A well-mannered game, bowls has enlisted the interest of both young and old, as players and as spectators.

Old Game, New Setting

The revered and ancient sport of bowls has gained a following in New Bedford

LAWN BOWLING—also known as "bowls"—looks as simple as duck-on-the-rock. But don't kid yourself. It isn't.

The game was first played by the nobility of medieval England and was introduced to the American colonies by English settlers. At the time of the Revolution, it was the most popular sport in America.

In New Bedford, Mass., where these pictures were taken, bowls is played by a group of experts who use the required "biased" (not entirely round) ball and bowl it across an uneven green that rises, by specification, to a 14-inch crown in the center of a 125-square-foot area, a tough green to play.

Although an expert lawn bowler is an artist, anyone can learn the rules of the game. Generally, it is played by teams of three or four who flip a coin for the privilege of "tossing the jack." The "jack," or key ball, is three inches in diameter and is thrown on the field by the side winning the flip. The "jack" must travel at least 63 feet and then it becomes the object of the players to roll their remaining balls as close to it as they can. The closest contestant on each roll wins a point, and a game usually runs to 21 points.

A leisurely sport, bowls is played by young and old alike. In New Bedford, the residents like it so much and play it so often that the city government recently spent $60,000 to build new bowling greens.

To the victor belongs the spoils. In this case, winning team got handsome and highly-coveted silver cup. THE END.

An impartial poll covering all the Southern tobacco markets reveals the smoking preference of the men who really know tobacco—auctioneers, buyers and warehousemen. More of these independent experts smoke Lucky Strike regularly than the next two leading brands combined.

SIDONIE M. GRUENBERG

Seeking information for her family, she found herself giving it

TO MY HUSBAND . . . and to my daughter and three sons, who have contributed liberally to my education."

This dedication was written for a book entitled, "We, The Parents," by Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, author, teacher and, for the last 25 years, Director of the Child Study Association of America, Inc.

"We practiced what we preached."

Reflecting not only the affection which exists within her own family, the dedication also reveals Mrs. Gruenberg's willingness to learn from whatever source and to disseminate that knowledge for the benefit of others.

It is upon this concept of using all available knowledge that Mrs. Gruenberg has directed the work of an association, which started as a small discussion group 60 years ago, and is today an internationally recognized authority on the solution of family problems, particularly as they affect the lives of our children.

She Brought Inquisitive Mind

Sidonie Gruenberg, after the birth of her first child 35 years ago, joined the Federation For Child Study, which later became the Child Study Association. She had been graduated from Teachers College, Columbia University, and brought to the Federation a keen, inquisitive mind, a warm sympathetic personality, and an almost psychic understanding of the problems of childhood. She sought information for her own family; instead, she herself gave it.

When Mrs. Gruenberg became director of the association in 1923, it was composed of about 25 relatively small child study groups in metropolitan areas. Its purpose, then as now, was to create an ever widening understanding of childhood by bringing to parents, and to professional persons working with children and parents, interpretations of the latest findings in the fields of medicine, psychology, psychiatry, education, etc., as they were related to problems in the home.

The job is tackled in numerous ways: through study courses, lectures, radio broadcasts, books and pamphlets, and through the Association's own Family Counseling Service. This service, founded by Mrs. Gruenberg, in 1925, operates with staff counsellors under psychiatric supervision and has directly helped almost 10,000 families to solve their family problems. It has indirectly aided thousands more through its up-to-date literature and helpful auxiliary services.

PARADE asked Mrs. Gruenberg, in her New York office, if she had any difficulties bringing up her own four children. "Well, we're all human beings," she said with a smile. Then, referring, no doubt, to her book, which is a study in parent-child relations, she answered, "We, the parents, practiced what we preached. We're all very happy."

ON PARADE...

Lodges sprout throughout the country much like pins on a map. Yet one such focal point turns out to be one of the most unusual small towns in America. It is Mooseheart, Ill., created by the Loyal Order of Moose as a haven for dependent children of deceased members. (Story on pages 19-21).

At first glance, this child city may appear to be just another orphanage. In actuality it is one of the finest substitutes for home ever devised.

Ask the local dentist. He says the boys and girls are healthy, happy youngsters, and that he's giving them the smile to show how they feel. Then ask the three cobblers who work full-time at Mooseheart. They say baby needs a pair of shoes, baby gets 'em, and then how baby wears 'em out in strenuous play!

Finally, ask Mrs. Esther Wuchte,-33, mother of 11 children, and widow of the late fraternity brother Albert Wuchte. She says her husband's ten dollars, deducted from his annual dues specifically for the support of Mooseheart, will bring care and education to his family worth perhaps ten-thousand fold.

NEXT WEEK...

What are some of the most important problems of married life. What makes for a happy marriage? PARADE's round table will swing into action again. For the opinions of representative Americans on this topic, don't miss PARADE, next Sunday . . . The latest in fashions and a food feature that will delight the family will be found in next week's PARADE . . . For humor, follow Hy Gardner, next Sunday and every Sunday in PARADE.

THE COVER...

Though baby Regina Fletcher was only three weeks old when this cover photograph was taken, she already is the proud possessor of a social security account, has her own card to prove it. Regina, you see, is a professional model, as is attractive Evelyn Gaughan, the baby-model's "mother." Little Regina's real parents were mighty proud of their daughter when she arrived in this world. And what parents aren't? Some folks go to great lengths to tell their friends and neighbors about their new babies. For the lowdown on unusual birth announcements, see page 22. Cover photograph by Roy Pinney.

Road to the White House

Flamboyant Presidential campaigns are part of American tradition

BY FRANK DE BLOIS

FOR YEARS, THE OLD WORLD'S most astute political seers have been viewing American Presidential campaigns with the bemused attitude frequently employed by wise old dogs while watching a very young and foolish puppy at play. But sooner or later the sound and the fury, the noise and the wonderful nonsense of our quadrennial run for the White House is bound to set them snapping at their tails.

As students of history, many of Europe's observers know that this frantic political St. Vitus Dance of ours actually seems to produce good results. They know that whether we choose Harry S. Truman or Thomas E. Dewey as our next President our government will function in the future much as it has in the past. But they can't figure out why.

Few of us could give them a deft explanation. But perhaps the answer lies in the campaigns themselves, those souped-up spectacles of mixed drama and lunacy, dismal frustrations and blinding success in which are born our Presidents.

The first political campaign in which the American voters participated directly was held in 1824, and for down-to-earth mud-slinging, it hasn't been surpassed to date. In previous election years, electors had been chosen by the people to pick a candidate of their own —not necessarily the people's—choice. But in 1824 the people voted for electors already pledged to one of four candidates: Andrew Jackson, John Quincy Adams, Henry Clay or William Crawford.

Although all four candidates at that time were members of the same political party, there was little love between them. Jackson's philosophy, character, family life and mode of dress were besmirched and ridiculed by the followers of Adams and Clay, and "Old Hickory's" supporters fought back happily, exchanging slander for slander.

As the campaign warmed up it became evident that the hero of New Orleans was indeed the people's choice. In the actual balloting Jackson received more votes than any of his opponents but failed to win a majority of the votes cast in the Electoral College. When the results were reviewed by the House of Representatives, Clay threw his support to Adams, and "Old Hickory" was defeated.

Thundering "Highway robbery!" up and down the land Jackson immediately inaugurated a four-year campaign to drive Adams from Washington. Spraying the prairies with his choicest Tennessee prose, Jackson built the nucleus of the nation's first political machine which, backed by his tremendous popular following, won him a striking victory in 1828.

"Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too"

AFTER TWO TERMS, JACKSON was succeeded by Martin Van Buren, an honest if ineffectual man, who, running for re-election in 1840, was knocked out by a slogan. Van Buren, a Democrat, was matched against William Henry Harrison, a crusty old Indian fighter and hero of the battle of Tippecanoe. The Democrats threw the first punch. Harrison, they charged, was an illiterate, back-woods boor wanting nothing from life save a barrel of cider and a government pension. Harrison's party, the Whigs, grabbed this morsel of bait and bit off the line. Van Buren, they counter-charged, not only ate from gold plates and wore ruffles but also took "frequent baths". This last charge was too much for the rugged American electorate. Under the slogan "Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too" they swept "Old Tip" into office.

Harrison served only a month before becoming the first of six presidents to die in office (the others: Taylor, Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, Harding, F. D. Roosevelt). His successor, Tyler, was politically poleaxed in 1844 by Henry Clay, the Whig leader, who wanted the nomination for himself. He got it but was defeated by the Democrat James K. Polk.

The Republican party made its debut on the ballots in 1856. In its early days it was composed of the remnants of the old Whig aristocracy, the Free Soilers, the Abolitionists, progressive elements from the Far West and dissident Democrats. Its first candidate, John C. Fremont, was defeated by James Buchanan, Democrat, but by 1860 the new party felt it was strong enough to win with Abraham Lincoln.

Lincoln ran against three men, Stephen A. Douglas, the "Little Giant" of Illinois, the candidate of Northern Democrats; John C. Breckenridge of Kentucky, the candidate of Southern Democrats; and John Bell. Hopelessly split among themselves, the Democrats nevertheless saved some fire for Lincoln. He was described in their press as a "horrid looking wretch" whose Cooper Union speech was "worthless". Not one to be outdone in name calling, Lincoln retaliated by calling Douglas "the little gnat."

After Lincoln's first election the Republicans enjoyed 24 years of uninterrupted power. In 1880, the party's bosses tried to jam through the nomination of General Grant, already a two-term president, for a third term. The convention developed into a personal fight between Roscoe Conkling, New York boss, and James G. Blaine, "the Plumed Knight" of Maine. Blaine finally dumped his votes on James A. Garfield, later assassinated by a fanatical follower of Conkling. Four years later, Blaine secured the nomination but was defeated in a slander-slinging campaign when the voters, disgusted by the libelous charge that Blaine's opponent, Grover Cleveland, was the candidate of "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion", sent the elegant "Plumed Knight" to an inglorious defeat.

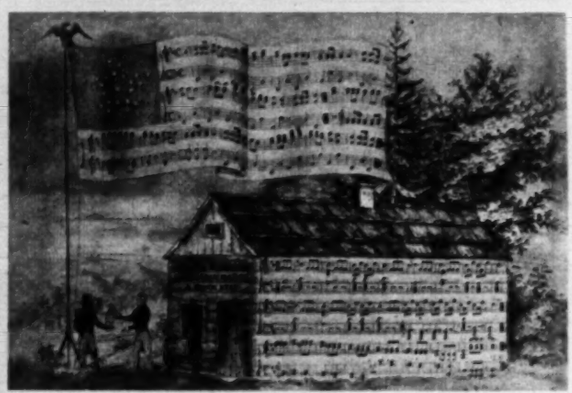
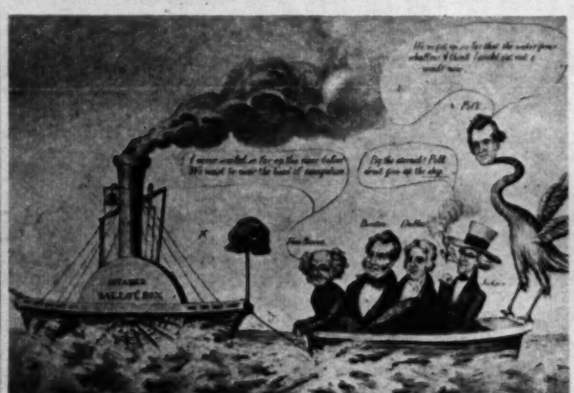
ROAD TO THE WHITE HOUSE CONTINUED

Winner in the bitter presidential campaign of 1828, Andrew Jackson, en route to Washington, pauses for plaudits of well-wishers.



In 1840, William Henry Harrison's path to White House was eased by catchy tune, "Log Cabin March," and an ever-ready cider barrel.



Jackson deserted protege Van Buren in 1844 for James K. Polk, ardent Texas annexationist. In election, Polk defeated Henry Clay.

In famous debate with Douglas in 1858, Lincoln became national figure though beaten for Senate. In 1860, he was elected President.

Slogans, Songs Play Big

CLEVELAND, THE FIRST Democratic president since Buchanan, was nominated three times for the presidency. He was elected in 1884, lost in 1888 and won again in 1892. Other three-time candidates were Henry Clay, always a loser, in 1824, 1832 and 1844, and William Jennings Bryan who ran second to William McKinley in 1896 and 1900 and second to William Howard Taft in 1908.

Vice President Theodore Roosevelt became President when McKinley was killed by an assassin. In 1904, he was nominated and elected, having announced that he would not try for a third term. In 1912, he broke with his successor, Taft, and ran for the nomination. Defeated, he ran for the Presidency as a Progressive, split the Republican vote and paved the way for the election of Woodrow Wilson.

Bryan certainly was one of the most colorful campaigners of all time. Broad of shoulder and huge of head, his powers of oratory were so great that he dominated every Democratic convention for 28 years.

His first great moment in the sun came in 1896 when, leading a band of Silverites from the West, he took his party's convention by storm. His most famous speech, a plea for the free coinage of silver, turned the convention floor into bedlam.

"You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns," he cried. "You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

The reaction was immediate. An hysterical shout went up from the floor. Delegates began to scream and sob, embracing each other and fighting for a chance to lift Bryan to their shoulders. The convention chairman, pounding for order with his gavel, missed his footing, fell and struck a speaker on the head.

The next day—still mesmerized by the golden voice of the "Boy Orator from the Platte"—the delegates nominated Bryan for President.

During the campaign, Bryan stumped the country pleading the cause of Free Silver while his opponent, the taciturn McKinley, stayed home and conducted a front porch campaign espousing "the full dinner pail". Bryan made it close but McKinley won.

Although Bryan was defeated in his three tries, his influence in the party was undiminished in 1912 when he inadvertently won the nomination for Woodrow Wilson by charging that Wilson's opponent, Speaker Champ Clark, was the tool of Tammany Hall.

California Turned the Tide

WILSON'S ELECTION WAS assured by the Republican split but when he ran for a second term in 1916 he faced a harder fight. Running on the slogan "He Kept Us Out of War", Wilson was opposed by dignified, bearded Charles Evans Hughes. On election eve, Wilson's defeat was conceded by everyone. Only California's electoral votes could save him and Hughes had been assured that he had these. Already he was referred to as "Mr. President."

Late that night the telephone rang in Hughes' home. A secretary answered and a reporter asked to speak to Hughes.

"The President has retired," was the reply.

"Well," directed the reporter, "when he gets up tell him he's no longer President."

California's votes had gone to Wilson.

Post World War I politics were featured by

As a forerunner to the quadrennial campaigns, party delegates gather in stifling convention halls to name a candidate. When their choice is placed in nomination, they snake dance up and down aisles.

Role in Campaigns...

the "smoke filled room" nomination of Warren Harding by Republicans in 1920, "Keep Cool With Coolidge" campaign of 1924 and "Happy Warrior" drive of Alfred E. Smith in 1928.

Of these candidates, Al Smith was perhaps the most impressive—and the most unfortunate. Smith rose from a New York slum to the gates of the White House—but never got in. In 1920, he was defeated for the Democratic nomination by James M. Cox of Ohio. In 1924, blocked by William G. McAdoo, he lost the nomination to John W. Davis, of New York, and in 1928, although he won his party's nomination, he was defeated in the campaign by Herbert Hoover, who rode to victory under the slogan, "Two Chickens in Every Pot."

Al Smith's final bid for glory was made in 1932 but again he fell short. For this time he was pitted against the most powerful vote-getter in campaign history, Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose tremendous popular appeal defeated Smith for the Democratic nomination, swamped Hoover at the polls and steamrollered three other Republicans in subsequent campaigns.

Of the Republicans who ran against Roosevelt, perhaps the most spectacular bid was that made by Wendell L. Willkie in 1940. Willkie, a husky, shaggy-haired man, took his party's convention by storm and went on to conduct one of the most aggressive campaigns in history.

In contrast, Roosevelt, running for a Third Term, did almost no speechmaking. He had won the nomination in Chicago at a convention featured by Mayor Ed Kelly's mysterious "voice from the sewers." At intervals during the convention the delegates were startled by a voice booming "We Want Roosevelt" through the public address system. The voice was later identified as belonging to Mayor Kelly's superintendent of sewers, who had been stationed in the basement with a microphone and instructed to keep the enthusiasm going.

The campaign was a bitter one. On one occasion Willkie was hit with an egg. On another, a policeman was kicked in the groin by a member of the Roosevelt entourage. Name calling honors went to trigger-tongued Harold Ickes, F.D.R.'s Secretary of Interior, who termed Willkie "a simple, barefoot Wall Street lawyer."

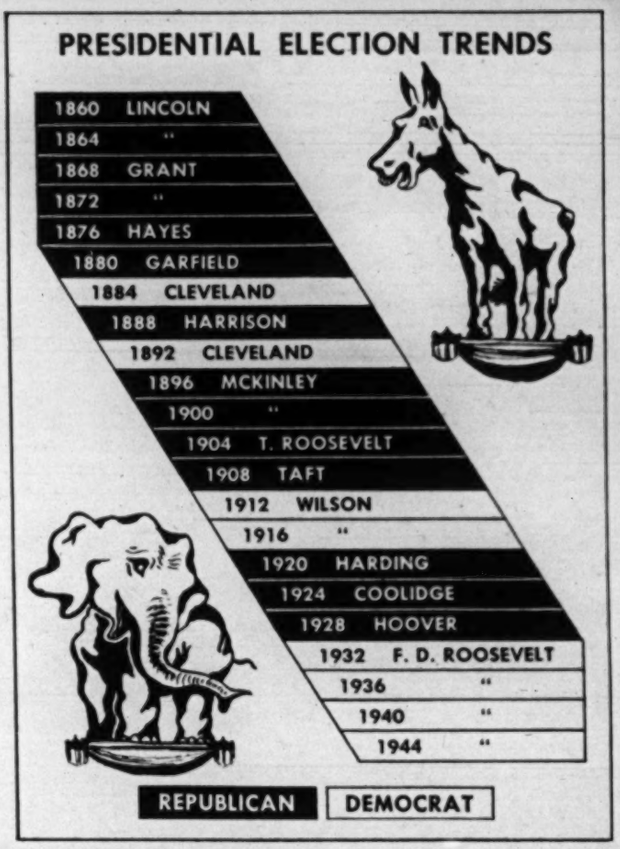
Anything Can Happen

IN MOST OF THESE CAMPAIGNS the action has started slowly, like that of a small snowball on top of a hill. But once the campaign snowball starts rolling, it's liable to pick up almost anything on its way to the White House. If the campaign of 1948 follows precedent, a lot of snow will fly before November.

In concluding his book Presidential Sweepstakes,* the late Henry Luther Stoddard asks the question that has stumped foreign observers of American campaigns for years. Have these campaigns any significance, he asks? And his answer is "yes."

"Stripped of all personalities and incidents," writes Stoddard, "the impelling force back of all convention activities and maneuveurs is man's instinctive desire to have something to say about his government. Every four years the partisan character of our whole national structure is subject to change by the will of the people—'We the people' as the Constitution of the United States significantly terms our electorate, without regard to race, creed, or color."

(Published by G. P. Putnam Sons, New York, $3.00)



Since 1860, the American electorate has sent 14 Republicans and eight Democrats to the White House. What will it do on Nov. 2? THE END.

One of the 500 contestants in the Plymouth Motor Corporation's Second International Model Plane Contest, Dick Bollenberg launches a model for test flight in a field near his East Detroit, Mich. home. Opening Wednesday in Detroit, the contest will run six days, and include 45 separate events. Entrants will compete for $7,875 in prizes.

FLYING HIGH AND FAST

Contest for model planes will bring best builders together in Detroit

MANY A LAD WATCHED "OLD 97" with her throttle wide open, trailing a plume of smoke across the countryside, and on the spot decided that railroading was the most desirable job on earth.

But that was years ago. Today, the impressionable youths of the country have their eyes on the sky. Unlike their imaginative counterparts of years ago who looked, dreamed, but did nothing, America's four million youthful aviation enthusiasts are building model planes, flying them, and many are headed for eventual careers in the expanding aviation industry.

Five hundred of these tyros, the great majority from the United States and about 20 representing Canada, Cuba, Mexico, Hawaii and Puerto Rico, will be given the chance, beginning next Wednesday, to prove their mechanical skills, creative abilities, and mastery of "flying" at the Plymouth Motor Corporation's Second International Model Plane Contest.

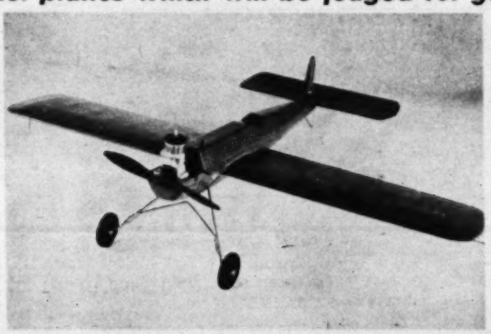
The six-day event, officially sanctioned by the Academy of Model Aeronautics, governing body for all model aviation, will be held in Detroit, Mich. And one of the typical hopefuls who will compete for part of the $7,875 prize money and 141 trophies, is Dick Bollenberg, a tall, lean, dark-haired, 17-year-old youngster of East Detroit.

Like all the other contestants, Dick entered one of several hundred local elimination meets sponsored by Plymouth dealers and civic groups and came out on top. When his record was compared with other trial winners by the final contest judges, he got the nod for Detroit. The competition is limited to 500 contestants with the best records.

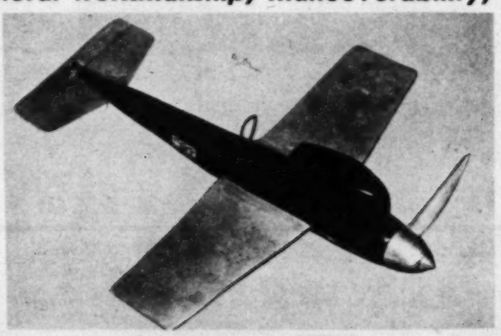
Dick has been preparing for this meet for three years, and no contestant is more eager to win. His interest in aviation was born in the Summer of 1945. At that time, the Detroit Tiger's great southpaw, Hal Newhouser, was Dick's number one hero. Naturally his plans for the future included becoming the greatest pitcher in all baseball. But Dick got a summer job as a "gas-boy" at an airport near his home.

Here are some of the homemade model planes which will be judged for general workmanship, maneuverability,

Free flight models are driven by tiny gasoline engines. Quite frequently they soar into the sky and disappear.



Gasoline-powered stunt models are put through aerobatics at the end of 50-foot control wire by operator.



Gas-driven speed model uses one-blade propellor. Motor is too fast to permit use of double-blade type.

Dick's younger brother, Ronnie, helps to put finishing touches on a free-flight model before Dick assembles it. Dick hopes to win enough money to help him get an education in aero-dynamics.

Dick's father and mother take interest in his model building, accompany him to nearby meetings.

At local hobby shop, Dick (center) buys parts. His model planes range in cost from $10 to about $70.

A friendly mechanic allowed him to taxi a plane across the field to the gas pumps. The second the youngster touched the throttle, all thoughts of baseball and pitching flew right out the cabin window.

Failed to Place First Time

DICK USED THE MONEY EARNED at the airport to buy materials for model planes. When he ran out of cash he took a job setting up pins in a bowling alley. Last summer, he succeeded in building a plane fine enough to qualify him for Plymouth's first international contest.

But disaster overtook him. The plane picked that particular time to balk. Just as he was about to put the ship in flight the motor conked out. Dick failed to place.

Another accident, much more serious, almost kept Dick out of this year's meet. Last spring, he suffered a brain concussion in a traffic accident and, when discharged from the hospital, was warned by his doctor that he was not to do any heavy manual labor.

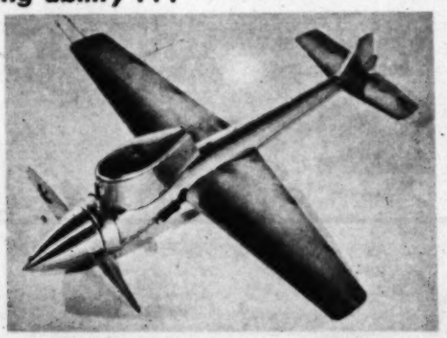
With no way of earning money to buy materials for planes, Dick felt he could not enter this year's contest. But Glen Walker, local Plymouth dealer, who sponsored Dick last year, staked him for materials and sponsored him again.

With nine planes ready for competition Dick is hopeful of taking some of that prize money. It will be used to finance a two-year course in aero-dynamics at Detroit city airport.

Win or lose this time, Dick will keep trying. "Because," he says, "the first time I touched the throttle of that plane I decided then and there to work with aircraft for the rest of my life."

streamlining, scale fidelity and flying ability . . .

Rubber-powered model is sturdily built for long flights. Rubber bands in fuselage produce power.



Gas-powered model, flown on control line, does 125 M.P.H. Weight limit is four pounds. THE END.

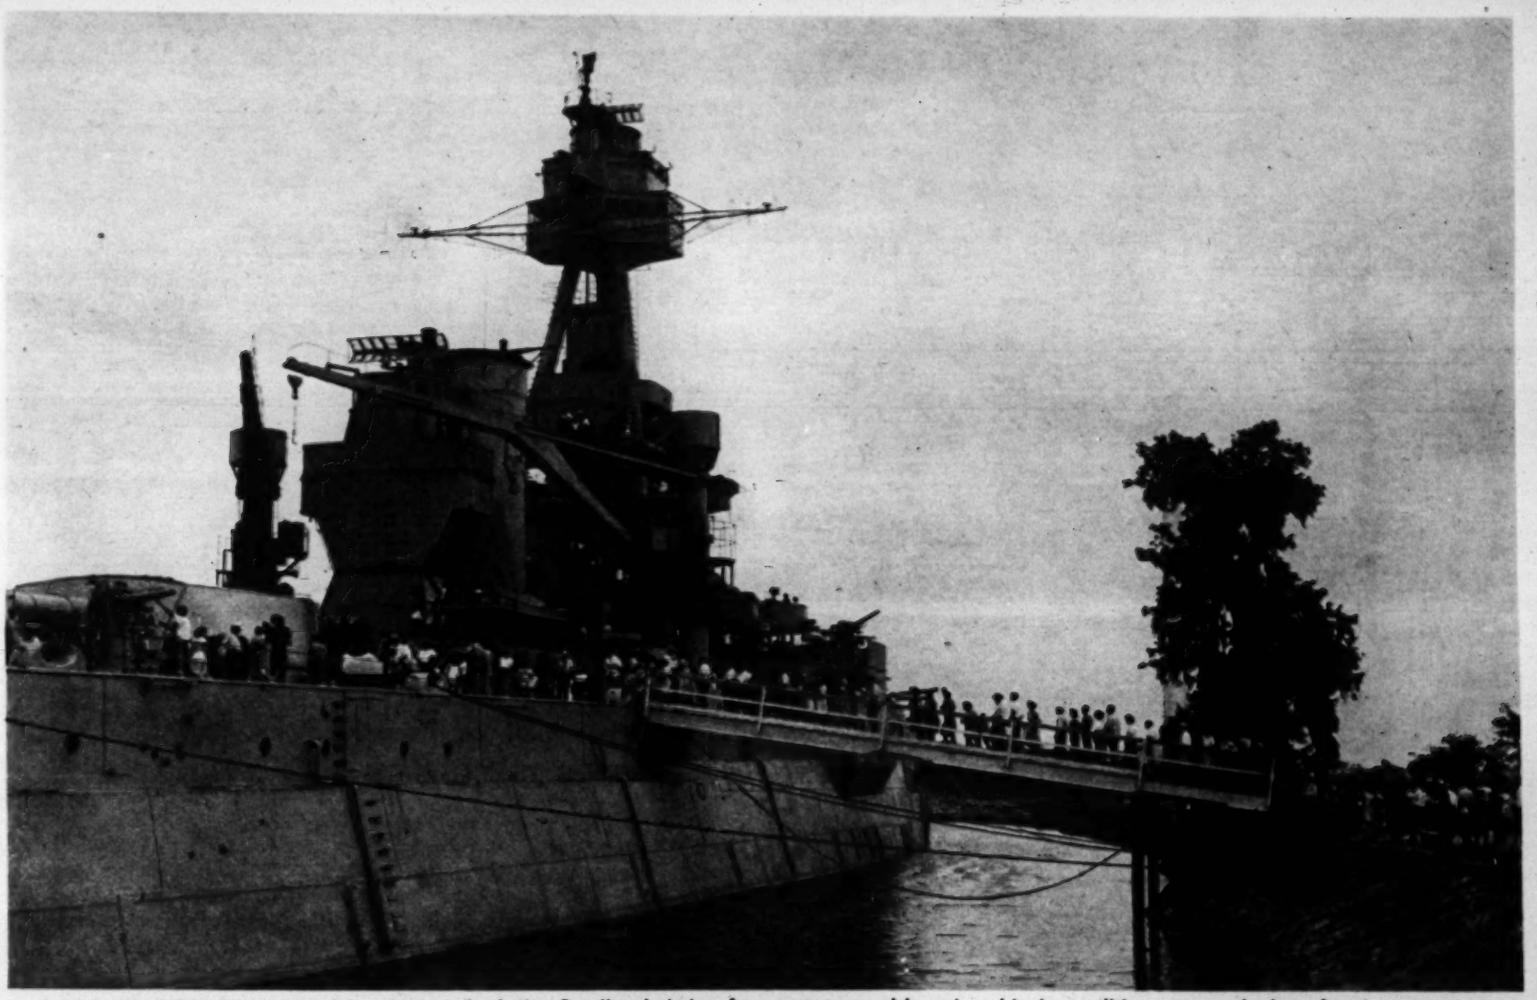
The Battleship

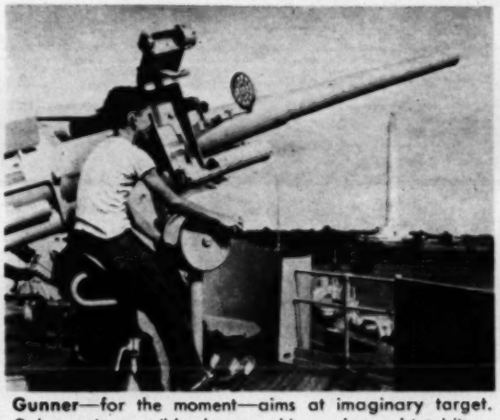
TEXAS

Goes to Rest . . .

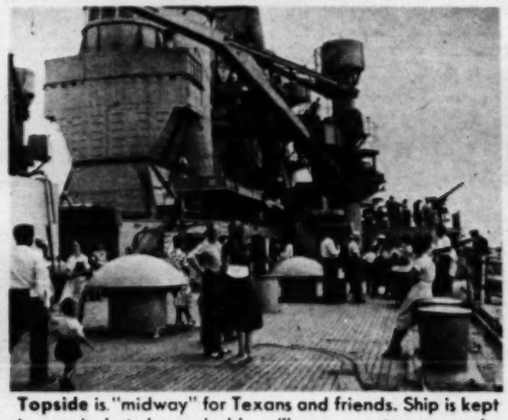
Gallant warrior, veteran of campaigns from Cherbourg to Okinawa, U.S.S. Texas occupies a place of honor on San Jacinto battleground.



At final berth, "Old T" is visited by thousands daily. Small admission fee goes toward keeping ship in condition, pays salaries of maintenance crew



Gunner—for the moment—aims at imaginary target. Only most inaccessible places on ship are barred to visitors.



Topside is "midway" for Texans and friends. Ship is kept in repair, but she probably will never go to sea again.

It's "down the hatch" for two pretty visitors. Texas was commissioned in 1914, joined the fleet on maiden voyage.

"Old T," laurels won in two world wars, now Texans' shrine . . .

A PERISCOPE POKES UP OUT of the long, green swells of the North Atlantic, and the lookouts yell a warning. The five-inch guns bear on the target, fire. But instead of an oil slick that would have signaled the death of a U-boat, the lookouts spot the livid wake of a torpedo. "Hard right!" The big ship reels, and the deadly missile foams harmlessly alongside. Luck . . . At Cherbourg, the German shells scream overhead like devils on the loose. Suddenly the conning tower blossoms into a sheet of yellow flame as a 288 mm. shell reduces the navigator's bridge to a bloody shambles. One man is killed, 14 others injured. Minutes later, the ship quivers as another 288 rips into her steel flanks—and comes to a stop in an officer's stateroom. A dud. Again, luck . . . Off Iwo Jima, the big guns gash the slopes of Mount Suribachi. The men turn sweaty, blackened faces toward the island and gasp out a cheer when the flag goes up on Suribachi's peak. Then Okinawa. For fifty terrible days they stay at battle stations—hungry, numbed by exhaustion, firing their blistering guns like automatons.

She's in the "Texas Navy"

If a ship can dream, then these are some of the things the U.S.S. Texas dreams about as she lies at her final anchorage—a man-made inlet in the shadow of the towering San Jacinto Monument on the San Jacinto Battlegrounds, not far from Houston. "Old T," a 27,000-ton veteran of two World Wars, once rated as one of our finest gunnery ships, is now "Flagship of the Texas Navy." The regular Navy presented her to the people of Texas, who (under a special state legislative act) saved her from the postwar scrap pile by raising funds for all operations involved in setting up the proud, old battleship as a state memorial.

Home from the wars, the Texas was towed up the ship channel from Galveston to Houston, then let the tugs warp her into the slip especially dredged for her. She is under care of a maintenance crew, and most of her equipment has been left aboard.

Now, instead of admirals and gobs, plain citizens—fathers, mothers, kids, pretty girls and their boy friends—swarm over her decks. But "Old T" doesn't mind. They are the people she fought for. THE END.

The Forward Trend

YOUR NEW FALL HAT WILL BE COLORFUL, SMALL IN SIZE AND WORN AT AN ANGLE

LADIES WILL TIP THEIR HATS this fall. It may be forward or to the right or left, but tip them they will, for most of the new hats are made to be worn at acute angles. The important silhouette is the small shape, styled to go with the short hairdo and full-skirted costume. However, for those who like a touch of drama in their headgear, there are plenty of wide-brims and forward-dipping bonnets.

Very much in favor are the pillbox, turban and beret. The first two have achieved height this season and are often elaborately draped; the latter has great influence on hat crowns. Most popular trims are feathers, used to point up the hat silhouette and act as conversation pieces. Who wouldn't talk about an ostrich plume or peacock feather balanced over one eye? Veils, lavishly-embroidered, appliqued with beading or dusted with sparkle, are much in evidence. As for color, you can't go wrong if it's vivid. Out in front are dramatic combinations like emerald green with royal blue, canary yellow with fire red.

FEATHERS OUT FRONT

A small black felt beret by Lenesta is trimmed with feathers and sequins, tied under chin with black velvet cords to keep it at right angle.

LACE FOR DRESS-UP

Designed by Sally Victor, this demure dinner bonnet of black lace has two rhinestone pins nestling in its ruffled brim, tiny bows on its crown.

HEIGHT IS IMPORTANT

Lilly Dache creates a smoothly-draped autumn pillbox of taupe bagheera jersey. The pleated draping around crown extends into two soaring loops.

OLD FASHIONED BONNET

A forward-curving bonnet of green felt, styled by Anita Andra, has ginger-colored velvet around the brim and a fragile veil of nylon in smart new copper shade. THE END.

Catch the mellow sweetness of ripe peaches. One of the best ways we know is to capture it in shining jelly glasses. What could be more delicious than tasty peach jam all year long? It's easy to preserve, too.

Peach Preserves

PEACHES ARE RIPE. Golden peaches with a rosy blush — mellow, luscious fruit — grace our August tables and lend fragrance and flavor to many a meal. Pare and pit ripe peaches. Chop fine with a three-blade chopper or grind.

Colorado State Penetentiary provided background for exciting prison film, "Canon City."

PICK THE KILLER

"Canon City" director finds murderers look harmless

BY CRANE WILBUR, Writer—Director of "Canon City"

AT SING SING, A CONVICT sent up for murder idled up to a welfare worker one morning. "Would you pose for a picture with me?" he asked. "Something I want to send home."

"How come you want my photograph?" the con was asked after the camera clicked.

"Oh," came the reply, "I just want to prove to my wife that there are really some desperate-looking characters here!"

Which points up what psychologists and practised hands in homicide have long contended: you can't spot a murderer by his mug.

I'm a film director by profession and on one of my first photoplays, a crime story, I decided to approach the casting problem realistically. With the consent of a jailer, I looked over his entire roster of prisoners. Of more than 150 persons sent up for offenses ranging from premeditated murder to grand larceny, there weren't more than a handful who would be acceptable—cinematically speaking—to play themselves on the screen.

At Canon City, where Warden Roy Best runs the Colorado State Penetentiary, there are some of the toughest criminals in the United States behind bars. But very few of them look the part.

Our picture, "Canon City," details the daring escape that 12 convicts made from this prison on December 30, 1947. All of them were killed or captured within three days from the time of the break. Warden Best gave us access to every part of the prison so that our documentary-style picture would be absolutely authentic. He even gave us permission, subject to the approval of the inmates, to use the prisoners to play themselves in the film. We had to pass them up in favor of our own Hollywood-style killers, however, because the real ones didn't look the part. They were mild-mannered, timid looking.

Appearances Are Deceptive

Warden Best told us that he is firmly convinced that it is virtually impossible to make snap judgments about a person's character just by looking at him. "If you could spot a criminal just by looking at him," he points out, "the work of law enforcement authorities would be a lead-pipe cinch."

Mr. Murderer, of the genuine variety, could never get a job playing himself in Hollywood. The chances are that he'd probably wind up being type-cast as a Milquetoast weakling!

EDWIN C. BOTTCHER

PROBABLY THE ONLY quizzee ever to become quizzer of a radio program at a single session is imperturbable Edwin C. Bottcher, M. C. of "R.F.D. America" (8:30 p.m. E.D.S.T., Sunday, N.B.C.) At rehearsal, partly as a gag, Bottcher was asked to take over after three professional announcers, seeking the job, flopped. Without preparation Bottcher stepped to the mike, and he's been there ever since.

1. If you were entertaining the Domino, Mixer, and Blanchard families for dinner and discovered they had no means of transportation, would you send your car for them?

2. Can you name the colors of the rainbow exactly in order from the inside out?

3. If you overheard two persons talking, and one of them said, "I hope I have as much luck with RUBY this year as I had with MARQUIS last year," what would they undoubtedly be talking about?

4. If a farmer knocks politely on the door of his henhouse before entering, would you consider him a smart or foolish poultry farmer?

5. Why are most silos round? Why couldn't they be square-shaped?

6. What do the terms, "bing," "bang," "bung" mean to a farmer?

7. In the summertime you will sometimes see two horses standing side by side, with the head of one at the tail of the other. What is the explanation for this behavior?

8. Is the right side of a cow, the correct side to approach for milking?

9. A plant which was well known to the Egyptians more than 4,000 years ago is still considered one of the world's most important crops. Its oil and fiber are noted for their very fine quality. Can you name the plant and give at least three present-day uses of its seeds and fibers?

10. If you were a farmer, what would you be feeding your cattle if their special menu included middlings and tankage?

11. Many farmers speak of snow as the "poor man's fertilizer." Is this just another popular but meaningless saying or is it based on fact?

ANSWERS TO PARADE'S GUEST QUIZ

1. No. They are families or blood lines of Hereford cattle. 2. Violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange, red. 3. Wheat. 4. Good poultrymen usually knock, whistle or call to the chickens as they approach the henhouse to avoid frightening them, which would cut down egg production. Like all birds, chickens tend to be nervous and excitable, and they fly into a panic when the door is opened without warning. They learn to associate the sound of knocking, whistling or calling with feeding-time and will not take alarm. 5. Round shape prevents spoilage—food stored inside a silo must be packed tightly. This usually is done by tramping. In a square silo the silage can't be packed tightly in the corners, and air might remain there causing the silage to spoil. Round-shaped silos are more economical as they hold more silage than square ones built with the same quantity of material.

6. "Bing"—Bing cherries, a popular variety of sweet cherries. It is also an old word for a pile of earth or stones. "Bang"—Bang's Disease which affects cattle. Bangboard, a short board attached to one side of the wagon bed when the farmer is husking corn by hand. When he throws an ear of corn it "bangs" against the board and falls into the wagon. "Bung"—The hole in a barrel or the cork which stops the hole in a barrel. Bung is also an old word for the casing for sausages. 7. A horse is smart. He can't switch his own tail around his head, so he teams up with another. Each horse switches his tail to keep flies away from the other's head. 8. Yes. Bossy carries her paunch or large stomach on the left side. When it is extended with food she is sensitive on that side. Moreover, it's not so easy for the milker to get close to his work with the extended paunch in his face.

9. Flax. Flax fibers make linen cloth used for towels, handkerchiefs, tablecloths, clothing, etc. Flax fiber is also used in the manufacture of rope and paper. Flax seed is pressed to make linseed oil which goes into paint, oilcloth and linoleum. The cake, left after linseed oil is pressed out of the seeds, is called oil cake, linseed meal or oil meal and used as livestock feed. 10. Middlings refers to the coarser part of wheat. It is a by-product of milling used as feed for livestock. Tankage is dried animal residues including dried blood. It's a by-product sold by slaughter houses. 11. It is true. Snow does have the same effect as fertilizer to a certain extent. Lightning high in the air changes the nitrogen in the air to oxide of nitrogen, a form usable to plants. This is carried to the earth by rain or snow. A heavy blanket of snow during the winter means a large quantity of nitrogen added to the soil, enriching it so that crop can be expected to grow better.

Healthy and happy junior misses at Mooseheart live in dormitory-like quarters, enjoying all comforts of home and school. Extra-curricular jam session is part of recreation after work-and-study program.

City for Children

A miniature metropolis, Mooseheart cares for needy youngsters

IN A YEAR MARKED BY national conventions, one of the most enthusiastic gatherings takes place this week in Chicago. It is the 60th annual international meeting of the Loyal Order of Moose. Members are streaming into the city, many of them motivated by the fact that several days of the convention will be spent at Mooseheart, their city for children.

Every Moose is aware of the philanthropic principle upon which his fraternity is founded. And all have contributed to the realization of that principle. Yet not all have seen the principle fulfilled in action. This is their opportunity for first hand observation.

Visiting Mooseheart is a heart-warming experience. They will see the haven they created for dependent children. They will see some 2,000 acres sprouting along the slopes of the beautiful Fox River, 40 miles west of Chicago. They will see more than 100 fireproof buildings, including power plants, barns and attractive residences. And they will learn that the haven, though humanitarian in concept, is a productive, self-contained community.

Mooseheart was founded by the late James J. Davis, former U. S. Secretary of Labor. In 1910, at the annual convention held in Baltimore, he first broached the subject. Less than 300 other Moose members listened to the earnest young man's suggestion. Their reaction was quick and enthusiastic. Furthermore, they voted to include care for all destitute widows as well as children. But that posed a serious practical problem.

Davis suggested a concerted membership drive. And, under his leadership, the handful of members increased to over a hundred thousand within a few years.

In 1913, the present site was dedicated. Mr. Davis specified then that every child admitted to Mooseheart would receive at least a high school education and would be taught a trade to sustain themselves later on.

Mooseheart is not an orphanage, a word which is anathema to the entire fraternal order and to those living there. Actually, it is a combination of home and school, having all the physical properties of a nursery, a boarding school and a small community. Beyond offering keep and care for the children, it provides a haven for the needy widows.

Maintaining this miniature metropolis requires contributions from every member of the order. From a member's annual dues, two dollars are earmarked for Mooseheart. Thus, with the present membership numbering near 800,000, deductions for the project reach a tidy amount. Annual operating costs are close to a million dollars. The property value of Mooseheart is currently over five million dollars.

Community Sponsored by Loyal Order of Moose

APPROXIMATELY 800 BOYS AND GIRLS, ranging from infancy to 18 years of age, live at the child city of Mooseheart at the present time. Until they are two years old, they remain in the hospital. From two till six, they stay in the Baby Village. After they are seven, they are divided into home groups. Once they reach ten, they are separated according to their maturity and athletic ability rather than by age. Mothers living on the grounds may have their children visit them at every opportunity, but individual families are not permitted to live in private residences. A large staff of directors, doctors, teachers, home advisers and the mothers themselves, serve in administrating and supervising the community. These directors guide the children in educational courses, look after their health, instruct them in more than 15 useful trades, and generally try to develop good citizens. The children are taught the religion of their fathers, much like it might be taught in their own homes.

Any boy or girl up to 14, who is the child of a Moose member, may be admitted to Mooseheart, providing the mother cannot maintain her home after the husband's demise. Upon arrival, children and their mothers receive thorough physical examinations. The youngsters get aptitude tests to determine their future educational and occupational courses. These checkups

Sports program of track, baseball, football and basketball develops excellent athletes.

Beauty culture class is preparatory course for future beauticians, offers free hair-dos.

More than 15 trades are taught to children. Woodwork shop has newest kind of machinery.

The hospital, a modern 70-bed building, affords facilities for medical care of community.

Students help with farm chores. Dairy herds have earned a number of awards and ribbons.

Boys' bedroom is similar to private school dormitory complete with the usual assortment of banners, books, radio and pin-up girls. Foster parents provide warm, homelike atmosphere continue regularly with medical exams scheduled annually and dental examinations twice a year. In emergencies, of course, attention is immediate.

Child Can Leave if Mother Remarries

There are only two ways in which a child can leave the city: if the mother remarries and wants the child with her in the new home, or upon graduation.

Mooseheart comes close to being a self-sustaining, complete community within itself, except that its residents don't pay taxes or vote. Products from the farm and dairy contribute to the daily food requirements. And the sewing plant provides many of the clothes worn by the students and distributed in the project's separate department stores for boys and girls. Preserving the health of the community are the modernly equipped hospital and dental clinic. Providing education is the school system which includes classes from kindergarten through vocational and high school. Edibles come from the grocery store. A large central plant heats all the buildings. A student bank, not unlike its commercial counterparts, controls the finances. Other Mooseheart components embrace a garage, gasoline station, cobbler shop, carpenter shop, cannery and laundry.

Nearly 4,000 youngsters have been reared and educated at the community. Hundreds are now in college or have been graduated. More than 700 served in the armed forces during World War II. More important than statistics, however, is the fact that Mooseheart graduates go into the world as happy, well-adjusted youngsters prepared for responsibilities of citizenship.

In the child research laboratory, scientific aptitude tests determine personal training.

Sewing plant, employing mothers and outside help, produces many garments for youngsters.

Children call on mother after school. They enjoy frequent family reunions. THE END.

That Bird, in any number of guises, is highly favored as a motif for announcement cards. Here is one that gives all facts at a glance.

"Hooray for Baby!"

You don't need a sky-writer to tell the world you're a papa

WHEN THE MAN OF THE HOUSE stops pacing up and down the hospital corridor, mops his brow and begins making noises like a father, everyone knows that the big moment has arrived. Now that the ordeal he has faced with such stoic (?) courage is over, he can break the news in a number of ways. He can jump up and down in the middle of the street and yell, "Hooray!" He can rush for the nearest telephone booth with a fistful of nickels and call up all his friends—who probably won't mind being awakened at 3 a.m. under the circumstances. But the Pride and Joy rates something more impressive than impromptu dancing in the streets or broadcasting via telephone.

If you have a flair for the dramatic (and quantities of folding money) you can arrange for a coast-to-coast radio hook-up or hire a sky-writer. Equally effective and much less costly are clever announcements like those shown on these pages, taken from a recently-published book on the subject: *We'll Tell the World. The time to think of announcements is while the Stork is still some distance away, not after he arrives. It takes time to prepare copy and additional time for the printer to set the type. Unless you have your own crystal ball and know for sure, write your copy to suit either sex, then give the printer the high sign—and a cigar—on the day the baby is born. (Another important point: Don't forget the envelopes.)

Prepare in Advance

Simple processes like mimeographing and multigraphing are inexpensive and can be done in a day or two. Offset lithography can be used for reproducing art work, cartoons or cut-outs. More elaborate and expensive methods include letter press work, for that "professional" look, and die cutting, for announcements that are cut in special shapes. Die cuts should be made at least six weeks in advance.

These suggestions cover routine requirements for proper introduction of heir or heiress. If the blessed event happens to be triplets, you can either buy a printing plant or hire a hall.
